REPORT LIKELY THIS WEEK ON DETAILS OF NAVAL REDUCTION

CAPITAL SHIP RATIO IS CRUCIAL POINT; AMERICANS EAGER TO REACH DECISION

Experts of U. S. and Britain Said Virtually to Have Completed Work in Committee and Japanese Are Not Expected to Delay Discussion.

POWERS TO CLOSE POSTOFFICES IN CHINA

Subcommittee Declares for Withdrawal of Machinery by Each Nation When It Considers It Practicable to Do So.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The problem of naval limitation, left in the background while the Far Eastern negotiations are developing step by step the policies of the Powers toward China, has been advanced to a point where it may soon resume a place of predominating interest in the arms conference.

It was indicated today that both the American and British experts virtually had completed their work on details of the American reduction plan and would be ready to report to the conference early next week. The Japanese experts had no similar announcement to make, but it was assumed they would not permit themselves to be put in the position of delaying seriously the progress of the negotiations.

The crucial point in the discussion, as viewed by the American delegation at least, is the "five-five-three ratio" of capital ship strength, which forms the basis of the American plan, and it is upon this feature that the considerations of the conference are expected to center when it turns again to the naval question. It was said authoritatively today that, in the opinion of the spokesmen of the American Government, all questions relating to auxiliary craft are of collateral importance only, and can be settled easily once there is an agreement on capital ships.

Eager to Dispose of Question.

Conference officials are understood to feel that the attention of the delegates can be diverted from the Far Eastern problems to the subject of naval armament without complicating the procedure of the conference, and the American delegation in particular has shown a desire to get back into the naval discussion as soon as the work of the experts will permit. The American delegates are declared to be well satisfied with the progress made in the Far Eastern negotiations, but are impatient to get the naval negotiations out of committee for a more definite exchange of views among those who will actually have the final decision.

Another of China's problems reached the point of a virtual "agreement in principle" during the day at a session of the committee of the whole devoted to a decision of maintenance of foreign postoffices and postal systems on Chinese soil. The delegates all agreed there should be a withdrawal of the foreign postal machinery as soon as conditions warrant, and a subcommittee, headed by Senator Lodge of the American delegation, drew up for later formal adoption a declaration of principle under which each of the Powers would investigate conditions for itself and withdraw when it considered it practical to do so.

The report is to be presented to the full committee Monday and at the same time another subcommittee will present for approval a resolution declaring also for a gradual

SOME DELEGATES URGE WORK THROUGH HOLIDAYS IN HOPE OF CONCLUDING BY NEW YEAR

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.

MEMBERS of several delegations to the Washington conference informally suggested tonight that any thought of adjourning the sessions for the Christmas holidays be abandoned, in the expectation that, by adopting such a course, the deliberations could be definitely concluded by the end of December.

The negotiations were proceeding so smoothly, they pointed out, that the conference could be expected to complete its work in a much shorter time than was at first deemed possible. For this reason, it was suggested that delegates who had planned to go home for Christmas might well be urged to abandon this intention so that the sessions could be continued without interruption. In such a case, it was said the conference might end by Dec. 28 or 31.

NAVY BEATS ARMY, 7-0 AT FOOTBALL; NOTABLES SEE GAME

Vice President Coolidge and Secretary Weeks Among 40,000 Spectators.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The spectacle of 22 mud-smeared huskies battling over a great lump of mud that was a football, held a crowd of nearly 40,000 persons spellbound through three hours of biting, driving rain when Army met Navy at the Polo Grounds today.

It was, as the Navy cheering section insisted, Navy weather. And with their indicators set at "full speed ahead" the midshipmen from Annapolis plowed through the sticky sea to a 7—0 victory. Since 1890 the Navy has won 12 times and the Army 11.

Brush Stadium sheltered scarcely half the throng that followed the fortunes of the skidding gladiators up and down the field. The others—among them Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge, and scores of notables representing America, Great Britain, France, Japan and Italy—sat or stood out in the rain.

The Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge were among the first arrivals, taking their seats, for the first half, in a box on the Army side of the field, and scorning proffered umbrellas. The Vice President wore a battered slouch hat and a heavy overcoat. Mrs. Coolidge was bundled up in a heavy fur coat.

In a box on their right were Secretary of War Weeks and Mrs. Weeks, while on their left sat high military attaches of the foreign delegations to the armament conference.

The visitors, most of whom were witnessing their first American football game, included Gen. Lord Vavan of the British army, Viscount Marshal Higgins of the British Royal Air Forces; Gen. G. Vaccaria ond Col. V. de Bernezzo of the Italian General Staff; Major-Generals Tanak and Haraguchi of Japan, and Col. E. Requin of France.

They were the guests of Gen. Pershing, but as Pershing was unable to be present because of illness, Major-General Harbord, Deputy Chief of Staff, acted for him as host.

On the Navy side, to which Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge were escorted between halves, sat Admiral Coontz, Chief of Naval Operations; Admiral Jones and Eberle, commanders respectively of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets, and Rear Admiral Glennon and Benson. Secretary of the Navy Denby was not present to see his middies win.

Vice Admiral Debon and Capt. Frochot of the French Navy were the only representatives of the foreign delegations on the Navy side of the field.

SOUTHARD WILL SEEK DIVORCE

By the Associated Press.

TWIN FALLS, Idaho, Nov. 26.—Paul Vincent Southard will ask for divorce from Lyda M. Southard, who was convicted of second-degree murder of her fourth husband, Edward F. Mayer, and who is now serving a term of from 10 years to life imprisonment in the State prison.

Frank L. Stephan, County Attorney, who directed the prosecution of Mrs. Southard, today received a letter from Southard asking for a statement from the official to be incorporated in a petition for divorce. "As my wife, Lyda M. Southard, has been convicted, I am going to get a divorce from her," Southard said in

LEAGUE MEMBERS NOT READY TO DROP IT FOR SUBSTITUTE

Broad Intimations Foreign Governments Can't Commit Themselves Until Harding Plan Is Definite.

ROOM FOR TWO BODIES CONCEDED

Republicans Differ as to Whether Moral Obligations Are Binding, President Holding They Are.

By CHARLES MICHELSON,
A Specal Washington Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The principal subject of discussion among delegates to the arms conference today was not foreign postoffices and extraterritoriality in China, which came before the committee on Pacific and Far Eastern questions, but the Harding scheme for an association of nations.

Spokesmen for various delegations made it perfectly clear that their Governments are prepared to support any movement that promises to make war less likely in the future. At the same time there were broad intimations that other Governments naturally must have a very definite understanding concerning any proposed association before committing themselves to it.

In some quarters there was a disposition to question the advisability of attempting to set up an association as a sort of rival or competitor of the League of Nations. Nations which are members of the league are not believed to be at all disposed to scrap that organization in order to become affiliated with the rather hazily outlined association sponsored by the American President.

It was conceded by some distinguished foreigners that there may be room in the world for two rival organizations, one based on gentlemen's agreements and the other on specific treaty obligations, since the United States declines to become a party to the latter, but expresses a willingness to promote the former.

Discussed on Capital Hill.

On Capital Hill the association of nations continued to be the chief topic of conversation among Senators and Representatives. Democrats and Republicans alike commended the idea in unequivocal language. Some Democrats stated frankly that the United States should enter the League of Nations instead of attempting to launch a new organization under another name but designed to accomplish the same end —to preserve the peace of the world.

Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, doubtless expressed the sentiment of many of his associates when he expressed his general approval of the Harding plan, adding that it would be based on a gentleman's agreement, therefore constituting only a "moral" obligation and for that reason "not binding."

Unfortunately for Senators who may hold this view, it was made perfectly clear at the White House that Mr. Harding considers a gentlemen's agreement as binding as a formal treaty signed, sealed, delivered and ratified by the Senate.

Senators classed as irreconcilables during the Paris treaty fight, with few exceptions, refused to discuss the Harding plan. Senator Borah declined to comment but Senator Norris of Nebraska, who also was a bitter irreconcilable, commended the plan. He did not say whether he considered a gentleman's agreement as binding as a formal treaty.

One thing made absolutely clear today on behalf of the American delegation to the conference is that whatever agreements are reached by that gathering will be carefully prepared by legal authorities in order that there can be no equivocation by any nations which are or may become parties to them. It was stated

OPERATION DECREED BY COURT TO AVERT MORE MOTHERHOOD

Suggestion Made When Denver Woman Is Arraigned Proceeding to Take Away Five Children.

HUSBAND SAID TO AGREE TO PLAN

Case Brought by Social Workers Continued Pending Execution of Proposal by Physician.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 26.—Sitting in the Juvenile Court here today Judge Royal Graham of Georgetown recommended for Mrs. Clyde Cassidente of Denver an operation that would make it impsosible for her to bear any more children. Mrs. Cassidente, who already is the mother of five, was haled before the Judge on complaint of Denver social workers to show cause why her children should not be taken from her, the complaint alleging that the family home was filthy and that the children had been neglected and were undernourished.

Dr. Ray Sunderland, testifying in the case, said he believed conditions at the Cassidente home were the result of mother bearing children too fast.

"What would you suggest as a remedy?" asked Judge Graham.

"That Mrs. Cassidente submit to an operation," replied Dr. Sunderland.

"I will continue this case until Jan. 10," the Judge announced, "and in the meantime I want the doctor's suggestion carried out."

Dr. Sunderland stated that the husband of Mrs. Cassidente, who is a notary public and an Italian interpreter, already had agreed to permit his wife to submit to such operation.

ANTI-FRENCH DEMONSTRATIONS OCCUR IN TURIN AND NAPLES

Result of Report of Clash Between Briand and Schanzer, Which Latter Denies.

By the Associated Press.

NAPLES, Nov. 26.—Anti-French demonstrations, which broke out in Turin last night, following publication of dispatches from Washington, reporting a clash of words between Premier Briand of France and Senator Schanzer, head of the Italian delegation in America, spread to Naples today, where several persons were wounded in a revolver fight between the police and the demonstrators. The latter, consisting for the most part of students and Fascisti, paraded the principal streets of the city, carying, "Down with France." They then proceeded to attack the French consulate, but were faced with 300 troops called to restore order. The mob found a French flag and burned it publicly.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Nov. 26.—Foreign Minister Della Toretta today announced he had received a cable message from Senator Schanzer, head of the Italian delegation at Washington, emphatically denying press dispatches from the American capital alleging that Premier Briand of France had used harsh words to the Italian delegate in a committee meeting at Washington.

"No such incident occurred," the message from Senator Schanzer read. "The discussion in the committee meeting was lively but always correct. M. Briand expressed the French point of view while I vigorously maintained the Italian standpoint. M. Briand used no language which could in any way be interpreted as offensive to Italy."

VIADUCT PAVING ERUPTS

An eruption in the wood-block paving of the King's highway viaduct, about a block from the Manchester avenue end, yesterday afternoon, made a very noticeable change in the character of the surface. The succession of recent rains caused the wood blocks to swell and then to give way at the weakest point.

That point happened to be at the "ocean waves," as a series of undulations in the paving had come to be called by motorists, who experienced a soft bouncing in driving over the place at a moderately rapidly speed. "Waves" disappeared and a "mountain range" was created by this sudden disturbance, leaving only spaces just wide enough for a machine to pass, next to both curbs.

LANDRU TRIAL IS 'MORE ASTONISHING THAN STAGE SCENE'

Theatrical Manager Declares Public Wouldn't Believe It If Happenings Were Put on Stage.

COURTROOM PACKED AT EVERY HEARING

PARIS, Nov. 26.—"If I staged this the public would not believe it," said C. B. Cochran, the London theatrical manager, to the Post-Dispatch correspondent, who took him to see the Landru trial.

He is right. It is the most amazing spectacle imaginable. Since Mlle. Mistinguett set the fashion, the court room in Versailles has become the most fashionable place in Paris, offering a striking contrast to the gathering of poorly-clad women, Landru's dupes, seen there at the beginning of the trial. Now, a fortnight afterward, the court is packed daily with notable actresses and society women, wearing their most stunning frocks, rich furs and dazzling jewels.

Although the "Landru Express" takes every morning a crowd of spectators from Paris to Versailles, the majority drive out in luxurious limousines, with Alsatian wolf hounds on the front seats.

Scene Verges on Theatricals.

The scene outside the court each afternoon, with hundreds of waiting automobiles, liveried chauffeurs and flunkeys, can only be compared with that around a fashionable theater on a first night. Inside the illusion is complete. There is the same display of ultra-chic toilettes, lovely toques, priceless sables and flashing gems, the lavish coloring melting into gorgeous harmony with the scarlet robes of the Judges, the black gowns of the lawyers and sea blue uniforms of the poilus who, with tin helmets and fixed bayonets, dot the courtroom. Mannequins from the chief dress-making houses show off the latest creations, just as they do on the race course or at the theater.

Nothing like the demand for admission tickets to this trial was ever before known here. The Post-Dispatch bureau is rung up on the telephone half a dozen times a day to hear a silvery voice beseeching the loan of a press card—which would most likely be found useless, for the owner usually finds his seat occupied by Mlle. Cecile Sorel of the Comedie Francaise, Mlle. Renouardt, Mlle. Spienlly or some other theatrical star.

Lucrative traffic in tickets is going on, as much as 1000 to 2000 francs being paid for a seat. The attitude of the public also is completely opposed to that associated with a court of justice.

The listeners to the testimony make no effort to restrain their feelings despite constant hammerings by the Judge and threats to clear the court. Laughter, hisses, murmurs alternate, according to the nature of the evidence, in an unceasing seesaw of emotions.

Courtroom Always Packed.

Once inside the packed court—600 persons squeezed into a room meant to hold at most 300—it is impossible to leave without losing one's place. People take luncheon with them and partake of sandwiches and wine during the hearing. One party was noticed in the courtyard sharing champagne and caviar.

The atmosphere is stifling. No window is opened. Half a dozen or more women faint daily and have to be helped out of the chamber. Facial make-up melts in the heat, obliging women to have frequent recourse to powder puff and hand mirror.

Landru remains indifferent to his defiant audience, rarely looking into the well of the courtroom except to rebuke laughter and exclaim, "this isn't a joke."

FETE DAY FOR "OLD MAIDS" WIDELY OBSERVED IN PARIS

Streets Filled With Girls in Costume, Who Had Attained Their Twenty-fifth Year.

47 Avenue de L'Opera.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Repeopled with the famous figures of history, stage and fiction, the Rue de la Paix was a scene of bewilderment to all wh forgot it was St. Catherine's day, the fete day for "old maids" who have attained 25 years.

Rarely before had the celebration been so generally observed or the revelry so widespread. One had to submit to being jostled off the sidewalk by a pretty swashbuckle in white satin breeches and powdered wig, who swaggered by the side of a demure maiden in the dress of the First Empire.

High up on the balconies of the establishments of Worth, Paquin and Georgette were visible fair Apaches stepping to the characteristic dance, with half-smoked cigarettes in their mouths. The Middinettes were given sumptuous lunches by the proprietors and that wine was not missing was evident from the hysterical cheers and laughter that proceeded from taxicabs, packed with girls, most of whom wore the traditional bonnet denoting their spinsterhood.

The girls having been refused free passes to the theaters, President Millerand placed at their disposal for six days six boxes, to which he has access in his official capacity.

At nightfall the boulevards echoed with cheering girls, linked arm in arm with velvet-capped students and proceeding in the direction of the Palais d'Orsay for a mammoth ball.

MAN LEFT STRANDED ON ISLAND, 14 DUCKS HE HAD SHOT TAKEN

Belleville Constable Complains of Way He Was Treated by Three St. Louis Hunters.

Constable E. A. Schultz of Belleville is looking for three St. Louis hunters who left him marooned on an island in Pittsburg Lake near Belleville while they decamped with 14 fine mallard ducks that the Belleville officer had shot on the wing.

Constable Schultz states that he went to Pittsburg Lake Friday to shoot ducks. He was unable to hire a boat and finally persuaded three other hunters who had a boat to row him to a small island. He secreted himself on the island and started to shoot ducks. As he brought them down the three men in the boat gathered the birds.

The Constable says his ammunition became exhausted and he called to the men to come and get him off the island. They told him to wait a few minutes and rowed down the lake. It was the last he saw of the hunters and the 14 ducks. Schultz waited half an hour and then swam to shore and went to a farm house to dry his clothes. He then returned to his home in Belleville.

Photographs and descriptions which were rushed from Dubuque are said to tally with the man beind held.

County Attorney Eichendorf was shown a picture of the alleged slayer. He refused to state positively whether it was a likeness of the man being held.

ST. LOUIS POLICE RAID GANG IN MADISON AND RECOVER PART OF LOOT IN $60,000 HOLDUP

Lieut. Walton, in Illinois on Murder Case, Gets "Tip," Arrests Eight Police Characters in Saloon.

RINGS FOUND CONCEALED IN FLUE AND OTHER PLACES

St. Louis Jeweler, With $1000, Enters Place While Police Are There, Having Been Called to "Buy Diamonds"—Four Men Seized Package of Gems in Pine St. Store at 9:15 A. M.

Recovery of a portion of the jewelry and diamonds taken by four men in a holdup of the store of the St. Louis Refining Co., at 1005 Pine street yesterday at 9:15 a. m. was accomplished at 4 p. m. in a raid by the St. Louis police upon a saloon at 210 State street, Madison, Ill., where they found also eight known St. Louis police characters, including ex-convicts and gangsters. Three other persons, including one woman, also were arrested.

From various hiding places in rooms above the saloon, the police took jewelry which later was identified by members of the robbed firm as part of the loot carried away from their store. The value of the recovered goods was placed by the firm members as only about $2200, whereas, they stated to the police, the total value of the goods stolen was between $60,000 and $75,000, a cigar box of unset diamonds having been carried away, they said.

Police Characters Arrested.

Those arrested and their records as given by the police, were:

Charles Vance, whose police record includes two terms in the penitentiary for burglary, one penitentiary term for arson and two workhouse terms for larceny.

Eugene Tebeau, who has served a term in the penitentiary for automobile theft.

Herbert Malter, who has served a jail sentence for theft from interstate shipments.

Thomas Skinner, who has served a term in the penitentiary for burglary, and who escaped from the city hospital Jan. 24, 1918, when being held there on a charge of robbery.

Harry Londo, who served two workhouse sentences for larceny.

Charles Heuer, who served time in the reformatory at Pontiac, Mich., for larceny and in the Boonville reformatory for burglary.

Ray Renard, former associate of "Jew" Bergadine, who is serving time in a Federal prison for theft fro mintertsate shipments. Renard is under indictment on a charge of highway robbery.

Harry Leckler, who served a jail sentence for forgery.

The others arrested were Edward Skinner, 2923A St. Vincent avenue, bookkeeper, a brother of Thomas Skinner; Amy Nicholson, 4469 Gannett place, said by the police to be Vance's sweetheart, and Jerry Wolf, proprietor of the saloon where the raid was made.

As the police were preparing to depart with their prisoners, John Miller, a jeweler of 1322 Olive street, entered the saloon.

"What do you want here?" he was asked.

Jeweler Had $1000 in Cash.

"Well," he said, "they telephoned me to come over and buy some diamonds." He was found to have $1000 in cash with him. Miller was not arrested, but was told to report at police headquarters here today.

The raid was made by Lieut. William Walton, head of the homicide squad, at about the hour the Board of Police Commissioners was promoting him to be Assistant Chief of Detectives.

Walton had left his desk as acting Chief of Detectives at noon to go to Edwardsville to investigate the killing of a man there, who, it was suggested to him, might be a St. Louis gangster. This later proved to be the case, as related elsewhere in today's Post-Dispatch.

He was returning from Edwardsville with three of his squad, Detectives Sheller, Girard and Lesyna, when, passing through Granite City, he saw a man known to him. He stopped his automobile and hailed the man.

"What are you doing here," he demanded. "I've a notion to take you along."

"Tip" Given to Lieut. Walton.

"Listen," whispered the man, "Do you want a hot one? Go over to Wolf's saloon in Madison and you'll find a gang of St. Louis red-hots (criminals' vernacular meaning "crooks") with the diamonds."

Walton recited subsequent events to a Post-Dispatch reporter as follows: "I called headquarters to start reinforcements for the saloon and then went to a Justice of the Peace in Granite City, took out a search warrant and sought a deputy sheriff, so that we would have an Illinois officer with us. Then we started for the saloon, that of Jerry Wolf.

"We stopped our automobile some distance from the saloon. I ordered my men to draw their revolvers, then sent Sheller and Girard to the rear door of the saloon. The Deputy Sheriff, Lesyna and I went toward the front door.

"At a signal we entered front and rear doors simultaneously. The men were gathered about tables in a rear room. As we entered, Wolf's wife who was at the bar, ran toward stairs leading to the rooms above. She came in line with Sheller's drawn revolver. 'Stop or I will shoot,' Sheller called to her. She fainted.

Kicks in Door, Finds Man.

"Then I shouted: 'Stick 'em up, all of you.' Vance dashed up the stairs. The others surrendered. Lesyna and I followed Vance upstairs. He was pulling off his coat in a room, but surrendered when I appeared. Just then I heard a door slam across the hall. Turning Vance over to Lesyna, I kicked the door in and found Heuer behind it. A loaded revolver was on a dresser in the room.

"I took Heuer to Lesyna and then began a search. In a davenport in Vance's room, I found 11 rings wrapped up in a tooth paste tube that had been split open. In an alcove off Vance's room, there was a flue in the chimney. The flue was covered with a tin plate and behind the plate were two men's diamond rings wrapped in an oiled paper.

WHO WILL EXECUTE NAVY AGREEMENT FOR U.S. AND ITS FORM BIG PROBLEMS

PRESIDENT LIKELY TO SEEK AUTHORITY OF CONGRESS FOR ANY PLAN FOR REDUCTION

Form Probably Will Be "Gentlemen's Understanding," Not Requiring Senate Approval, to Cover Points Already Included in Treaties.

By CHARLES G. ROSS.
The Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Two pertinent questions that are being asked in connection with the arms conference are these:

1. How far can the executive authority go toward giving effect to a battleship scrapping agreement without the consent of Congress?

2. In what form will the agreement or agreements reached by the conference be recorded?

The answer to the first of these questions, based on an examination of the laws pertaining to the navy and on the opinion of various officials, is that the President can go a long way, but that in all probability he will seek authority from Congress to carry out any naval reduction program that may be agreed upon.

A law passed by Congress in 1882, and amplified in 1883, provides that the Secretary of the Navy may strike from the navy register and sell any vessels which are unfit for further service or vessels which, lying unfinished in a navy yard, cannot be completed "without great and disproportionate expense." The powers given by this and other laws are very broad. Moreover, the President, as the Commander in Chief of the Navy, has it in his power to tie up any warship to a dock and leave it there. The right to sell obsolete vessels is frequently exercised; at the present moment, in fact, the Navy is advertising for sale the second Maine and several other old ships that have outlived their usefulness. To put an obsolete vessel on the retired list or to sell it is purely an executive function, about which Congress has nothing to say.

Usable and Unfinished Ships.

But a different question arises when the proposal is made to get rid of a ship in good order or an unfinished ship which can be finished without "great and disproportionate expense." Vessels in both these categories are marked for the scrap heap by the Hughes armament reduction plan.

Will the President construe the absence of a specific inhibition against the junking of useful ships as sufficient for him to proceed without consulting Congress?

It is most unlikely that the President will act in a manner so Rooseveltian. To do so would bring down on his head the same sort of condemnation that was visited on Woodrow Wilson for "usurpation of the powers of Congress." The constitution gives to Congress the "right to provide and maintain a navy." If Harding should depart so far from all his previous preachments as to order a wholesale junking of battleships on the executive authority alone, he would face a determined opposition in Congress, even from men who are strong advocates of the Hughes proposals.

"The President," said a Senator today, who wants disarmament, "might conceivably ignore Congress in this matter, but it would be high-handed proceeding. Almost certainly, a special act of Congress will be asked for."

Another official recalled that special legislation was passed 10 years ago in order to permit the executive to sell the battleships Idaho and Mississippi to the Greek Government.

Congress On Record for Reduction.

A further reason to believe that Harding will consult Congress before scrapping any battleships is found in the fact that Congress is committed, both by expressions of individual opinion, and by official enactment, to the disarmament principle. It has gone on record in this regard three times in recent years. The first was in 1916, when it added to the navy bill a section sponsored by Walter Hensley of Missouri, then in the lower House, declaring the policy of the United States to be opposed to an increase of armaments throughout the world and "authorizing and requesting" the President to call a conference of the Powers to devise a plan for the peaceful settlement of disputes.

The Hensley proviso has been cited lately as giving the President the right to junk the ships of the 1916 program if the Powers at the present conference should agree to the Hughes proposals. The theory is incorrect. The section says the President may stop work on the ships in the event that a competent arbitration tribunal is set up "before the construction authorized by this act shall have been contracted for." All the capital ships of the 1916 program have been contracted for. While it is impossible now for the President to scrap ships under the Hensley proviso, the language nevertheless remains on the statute books and gives strong moral support to the Hughes program.

The Borah Resolution.

Congress went on record for curtailment of armaments a second time when it adopted the Borah resolution calling for a three-Power conference on the subject, and a third time when it voted $200,000 for the expenses of the current conference.

There is no doubt about the attitude of Congress. Congress wants the naval bill cut. It will support any junking proposal that safeguards the interests of the United States. Assurance of a favorable reception of the Hughes plan is made doubly sure by the fact that it will come before Congress with the joint indorsement of the majority and minority leaders of the Upper House, Senators Lodge and Underwood.

Form of Agreement.

The second question, that of the form to be taken by the conference agreements, is more difficult to answer. The administration has made no definite statement on that point, but "feelers" which have been put out point unmistakably to a present intention to have the conference record its will by means of a "gentlemen's agreements" rather than by treaties. Close observers of the conference proceedings believe that the administration is waiting to get the reaction of the country to the two methods before finally making up its mind. There is reason to believe that the conferees at present do not see eye to eye on this subject. Lodge and Underwood, particularly Lodge, would logically incline toward the treaty method, which would enable the Senate to keep its cherished grip on foreign relations.

Well-informed opinion holds that the upshot of the negotiations on Far Eastern questions will be a set of general principles, to be followed up with investigations of specific problems by international commissions. To bring a treaty involving general principles into the Senate would be to invite interminable discussion and possible disaster. The fate of the Versailles treaty is fresh in mind. Senators of independent habits of mind, like Borah, would want to know just how the principles would apply in specific cases.

Joint Document Desired.

The President does not want a fight started in the Senate. All signs point to his leaning toward an agreement or agreements that would not have to be ratified by the Senate. An agreement is made by the executive and there's an end of it. It is the idea of the administration, judging from a number of recent intimations from official sources, that an agreement or understanding, reached by the several Powers in the atmosphere of good will that pervades the Washington gathering, and backed by the public opinion of the world, would have all the binding force of a treaty.

It can safely be taken for granted that if the outcome of the Far Eastern negotiations is as expected, a set of general principles, there will be little in the document to which the Powers, in one treaty or another, have not already subscribed. The "open door" in China, for example, and the principle of China's right (with certain reservations) to control her own affairs, are not new doctrines, but a part of many covenants already in existence. The great gain from the conference, if an agreement is reached, will be in getting the various principles renunciated in one document jointly subscribed to by the Powers under the eyes of the world.

Precedents for Agreement.

There is ample historical precedent for putting an international engagement into the form of an agreement rather than a treaty. Battleships are kept off the Great Lakes by the Rush-Bagehot agreement between the United States and Great Britain, effected by an interchange of notes. Japanese immigration into the United States is regulated by the Root-Takahira "gentleman's agreement." Finally, there is the Lansing-Ishii agreement, with its recognition of Japanese "special interests" in China.

Such is the case that can be made out for the "agreement." There is another side to the argument, a side which is likely to be taken by a good many Senators. This, briefly, is that a treaty or treaties will be needed to make the agreements of the conference permanently binding and prescribe the proper guarantees for their enforcement. Moreover, it is argued, conclusion of a "gentleman's agreement" on such vital matters as those under discussion by the conference would be an invasion of the constitutional right of the Senate to advise on foreign affairs, an invasion more ruthless and unwarranted than any similar act by Woodrow Wilson.

The situation in a word is this:

The President would like to see the findings of the conference take the definite form of an agreement, which would not require the consent of the Senate, but opposition to that method which is already brewing may compel him to bring in a treaty or treaties. The administration is feeling its way toward a solution.

La Follette to Address Idle.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, Glen E. Plum and William Z. Foster will be speakers before the national unemployment conference which will be held by workers and unemployed at Detroit Dec. 3 and 4, it was said tonight. The conference has been called, it was explained, because of dissatisfaction with the results of the recent national conference held here under the direction of Secretary Hoover. The opening session, it was added, would be preceded by a meeting of the international hoboes' organization.

abolition of the extraterritorial rights in China as soon as China's judicial machinery will warrant the change. It is expected that the dispatch of an international commission of jurists to China to study the situation will be recommended in the subcommittee report and agreed to by the conference.

Doubt Expressed by Japan.

In the discussion of the postal question today, the delegates of Japan are understood to have expressed serious doubt whether the present postal facilities of the Chinese Government would fully meet the demands made upon them should the foreign systems withdraw. It was also said to have been suggested by some delegates that the Pekin Government might find difficulty in enforcing reforms which might be agreed to here, in view of the unsettled state of the internal affairs of China. The virtual decision to leave withdrawal to the discretion of each individual Power was the result.

Although no formal mention of it was made in the committee meeting, President Harding's suggestion for a continuance of the conference plan in international relationships was a question of absorbing interest in private conversations between the delegates. Few of the delegates would comment on it publicly, and the only hint as to the possible attitude of the other nations came from M. Viviani, head of the French delegation, who indorsed the suggestion, saying it was not only "a high thought," but a practical one, and from a British spokesman, who declared that any "question of nations" must be approached carefully until the attitude of the American Congress had been expressed.

"Great Britain," said the spokesman, "is most anxious to participate in any movement that would tend to the peace of the world, but, obviously, the President's suggestion is more or less an American domestic question on which it would not be proper for the delegates to express an opinion until the details have been worked out and the Congress of the United States had decided on some definite scheme that would have the full approval of the American people."

Opportunity for Consideration.

Developments during the day served to strengthen the possibility, however, that the plans for future conferences might be of formal consideration before the arms negotiations are concluded. It was pointed out that the opportunity would be presented directly when the Far Eastern discussions reach that part of China's 10 points suggesting that provision be made "for future conferences to be held from time to time for the discussion of international questions relative to the Pacific and the Far East as a basis for the determination of common policies of the signatory Powers in relation thereto."

The Chinese declarations have been adopted by the conference as a basis of discussion, and, although the international conference suggestion included in them applied in particular to the Far East, it is regarded as a possible vehicle for bringing into the discussions the whole subject of the President's "association" plan.

Day's Official Communique.

After the morning session of the committee on Pacific and Far Eastern questions, the following communique was issued:

"The committee on Pacific and Far Eastern questions met in the Pan-American Building at 10:30 a. m. Saturday, Nov. 26, 1921. The committee discussed the matter of foreign post-offices in China and it was the sense of the committee that there should be a withdrawal of the foreign post-offices as soon as it appeared that conditions warranted. A sub-committee, composed of Senator Lodge, Sir Auckland Geddes, M. Viviani, Mr. Hanihara and Mr. Sze, was constituted to draw up a resolution to this effect, for submission to the full committee at its next session. This sub-committee will meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

"The committee on extra-territoriality proposed at yesterday's meeting will be composed of the following delegates:

"United States of America, Senator Lodge; British Empire, Senator Pearce; France, M. Sarraut; Italy, Senator Iricci; Japan, Mr. Hanihara; Belgium, Chevalieride Wouters; China, Drichung-Hui Wang; the Netherlands, Jonkheer van Karnebeek and Portugal, Capt. Vasconcellos.

"The committee then adjourned to meet on Monday, next, Nov. 28, at 11 o'clock a. m.

LEAGUE MEMBERS NOT READY TO DROP IT FOR SUBSTITUTE

on authority that after the arms conference reaches definite agreements the troubles will come, since the lawyers must then reduce them to legal form.

Gentlemen's Agreements.

One thing which the White House sought to make clear was that such agreements as may be reached by the conference will be in the nature of "gentlemen's agreements," as distinguished from formal treaties. The association of nations idea crept into the discussion, but in a measure was but incidental, furnishing a sort of machine through which the conference agreements might be made effective. Again and aagin it was emphasized that the agreements would be as binding as agreements could be made.

This point apparently was stressed yesterday and again today. Foreign delegates look askance at statements by Republican leaders like Senator Smoot that moral obligations assumed under gentlemen's agreements are not binding.

Another point cleared up today is that President Harding does not contemplate inviting Germany to the present arms conference, but is quite willing to invite the German Government and the Governments of other nations to sanction the agreements reached by the conference and associate themselves with the work of making them effective.

The suggestion of future conferences to discuss world questions did not originate in the White House. It has been discussed off and on ever since the conference convened, and is now actually before that gathering as the tenth of China's 10 points.

Several British spokesmen, including the Canadian and Australian Representatives, have expressed the conviction that further conferences might be held not necessarily in Washington, but at different capitals.

Views of Some Senators.

A few of the "irreconcilables" insist that no possible chance should be taken of running into an entangling alliance. According to them there will be a stiff opposition to the Harding suggestion. In the event of a formal treaty there doubtless would be endless debate and effort to hamstring the instrument, as was done with the league.

It was predicted by Senator Hitchcock that the majority of the Democrats would support President Harding. This prophecy naturally makes allowance for the defection of Reed, Watson of Georgia and those who have affiliated openly with the irreconcilable Republicans. This combination, it is calculatted, could not muster more than 20 votes.

Neither does there appear any special resentment because the President contemplates ignoring the Senate and completing his association of nations on the basis of a gentleman's agreement. Some Senators, indeed, seem to regard this as a wise course which would prevent bickering within the Republican ranks.

"League Under Another Name."

Other expressed opinions were:

Senator Cummins, Republican, Iowa, a middle of the road reservationist—An association of nations is as necessary as for members of the same family to meet around the table together.

Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, a strong supporter of the League covenant—I am pleased to note that we are to have a League of Nations—under another name, it is true. However, it is of very little consequence by what name it is called. When the association is formed I am satisfied that it will be along the lines of the covenant framed at Versailles. This does not mean that Article X will be an essential feature of the new association, but the principle of Article X will doubtless find application in the case of China, and also may, to a limited extent at least, be applied to the case of France.

Senator Shields, Democrat, Tenn.—There will be great difficulty in getting any entangling alliance through this body.

Senator Watson, Democrat, Georgia—This new association of nations does not surprise me at all. During the campaign I stated on the stump that Harding and Cox, so far as the League of Nations was concerned, were running on the same platform, for we all, if we are honest, must admit that, in order to be effective, any association of nations must also be a league of nations. This conference here in Washington is, in my opinion, just a damned humbug. I violate no confidence when I say there are many Senators who are intensely indignant over the manner in which they have been compelled to take back seats at this conference while cabinet officers and a lot of little weevils who are attached to embassies and legations are given precedence over them.

Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi—I think we had better join the association of nations that already is organized, in good working order and proving a success. Not only would it solve the problem of naval disarmament but it would meet the situation of which France complains. In the event of trouble, not only would the United States and Great Britain go to the aid of France but 48 other nations would do the same.

VIVIANI INDORSES PRESIDENT'S PLAN FOR ASSOCIATION

Suggestion for Continuation of World Conferences Declared to Be High and Practical Thought.

NOT IN CONFLICT WITH THE LEAGUE

"It Is Only for Mathematicians That Parallel Lines Do Not Meet; We Shall Be Together."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—President Harding's suggestion for a continuation of international conferences to deal with world problems as a result of the developments of the Wasington conference was indorsed today by M. Viviani, head of the French delegation, who said it was not only a "high thought," but a practical one.

"First, the initiative of President Harding is of very considerable importance," said M. Viviani. "It is a high thought and what is equally beautiful, a practical thought. This conference has already a great ideal for its aim. If it is the beginning of other conferences, this is an historic moment. I shall not be for France to stay away.

"Second, humanity for its happiness must solve problems of universal character. Consequently, universality of means must be used. If any great nation should be missing in the cohesion of ideas and in the examination of solutions that would make them most difficult. The initiative of President Harding will allow the whole world to take part.

Nations Have All to Gain.

"Third, we have all to gain by these associations in which we continue to learn the law of equality among nations, and we find what we are missing in offering to others that which we possess. No nation has the exclusive gift of intellectual and moral power.

"Fourth, what will people think in Europe of the President's new idea? Are they not going to think it is in conflict with the League of Nations? I answer, no. America has decided to ignore the League of Nations. That was her right; she has no account to render to anyone. The League of Nations exists. What is to be deplored is that it should exist alone. America through these conferences will come into contact with the rest of the world. Let the world be united in one way or in another way. There is no special protocol for that.

Where Parallel Lines Meet.

"Fifth, I do not know if these conferences and the League of Nations can associate their ends. It does not matter. It is only for mathematicians that parallel lines do not meet. Both sides will meet in different spheres. I am sure that for all great problems we shall be together. Already America has given her adhesion to the international court of justice whose verdicts without her would have been weakened. It will be proven that discussion may be apart where aims are in common."

Farmers to Meet in Capital and Confer With Arms Delegates.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The farmers of the United States today decided to take a part in the arms conference. Through C. H. Barrett, chairman of the National Board of Farm Organizations, a call was sent to agricultural leaders to assemble in Washington, Dec. 6, to meet and confer with the American and foreign delegates.

The interest of farmers is held to be the necessity for bringing about a condition in international society to outlaw war and is predicated upon the fact that without the food supplied by the workers of the soil there could be no war.

Barrett is a member of the advisory council to the American delegation and in his call for the meeting here next month he announces that Arthur J. Baufour, head of the British delegation; Lord Riddell, a member; Sir Auckland Geddes, Ambassador to the United States, and others will attend the meeting. Invitations will be sent to President Harding, members of the Cabinet and all visiting delegations.

FOCH GIVES OPINION ON PEACE

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 26.—Speaking at a banquet in St. Paul tonight, Marshal Foch said the "unified determination of the nations can achieve peace throughout the world as surely as unity of command brought military victory to the allies.

"Once the nations that survived the war as leading Powers have put their houses in order," he added, "they will be in a position to establish peace universally by assisting in the restoration of order in Russia and other places where anarchy exists."

WELLS SAYS EUROPE'S HOPE LIES IN DISARMING, LIFTING OF DEBT AND STABLE MONEY

Says Shadow Over Russia Stretches to London; Losing Confidence in Washington Conference.

By H. G. WELLS.

(Copyright, 1921, by the Post-Dispatch, the Chicago Tribune and the Press Pub. Co.—The New York World.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—In a previous paper I have set out the plain facts of the condition of Central and Eastern Europe. It is a breakup of the modern civilization system due to the smashing up of money, without which organized town life, factory production, education and systematic communications are unworkable.

If it goes on unchecked to its natural conclusion, Central and Eastern Europe will follow Russia to a condition in which the towns will be dying or dead, empty and ruinous, the railroads passing out of use, and in which few people will be left alive except uneducated and degenerating peasants and farmers, growing their own food and keeping a rough order among themselves in their own fashion. We are faced, indeed, with a return to barbarism over all these areas. They are going back to the conditions of rural Asia Minor or the Balkans.

How far is this degeneration going to spread?

Decline Could Be Arrested.

Let us recognize at once that it need spread no further. It is not an inevitable process. It could be arrested, it could be turned back, and a rapid restoration of our shattered civilization could be set going right away, if the leading Powers of the world, sinking their political ambitions for a time, could meet frankly, to work out a bankruptcy arrangement that would release the impoverished nations from debt and give them again a valid money, a stable money, with a trustworthy exchange value that could be accepted with confidence and saved without deterioration. Upon that things could be set going again quite hopefully. Education has not so degenerated as yet, habits of work and trading and intercourse are still strong enough to make such a recovery possible.

Except, perhaps in Russia. Russia for all we know, may have sunken very deep. But if there is no vigorous world effort made soon, the trading class, the foreman class, the technically educated class, the professional class, the teachers, and so forth, will have been broken up and dispersed. These classes are comparatively easy to destroy, extremely hard to reconstruct. Modern civilization will really have been destroyed, if not for good, for a long period, over great areas if these classes go.

Process Spreading Rapidly.

And the process is at present still spreading rapidly. If it gets Germany, and it seems to be getting Germany, then Italy may follow. Italy is linked very closely to Germany economically and financially. The death of Germany will chill the economic blood of Italy. Italy is passionately anxious to disarm on land and sea. But Italy canont disarm while France maintains a great army and makes great naval preparations.

France's refusal to disarm prevents Italy from disarming. The lira sways and sinks, its value fluctuates, not perhaps so widely as do marks and cronen, but much too widely for healthy industrial life and social security. And Italy is troubled by its restless nationalists, a whooping flag-waving crew of posturing adventurers, without foresight or any genuine love of country. If nothing is done, I think I would give Germany about six months and north of Italy two years before a revolutionary collapse occurs.

And France?

"This Rhetorical France."

This new rhetorical France which remains heavily armed while no man threatens, which builds new ships to fight non-existent German armies and guard itself against the threats of long-dead German generals—one of M. Briand's hair-raising quotations is to be found in the Encyclopedia Brittania and must be nearly 20 years stale—the renascent French which jostles against Italy and England and believes that it can humbug America for good and all while it does these things, will it pull through amidst the general disaster of Europe? Will it achieve its manifest ambition and remain dominant in Europe, the dominance of the last survivor, the cook upon the dunghill of a general decay? We doubt it.

Watch the franc upon the exchange as the true meaning of the French search for "security" dawns upon the world. Watch the subscription to the next French loan to pay for more submarines and more Senegalese. It may prove to be a difficult feat after all for France, to wreck the rest of Europe, to destroy her commerce by destroying her customers, and yet to save herself. When France begins to break, she may break very quickly. Under the surface of this exuberant French patriotism runs a deep tide of communism, raw and red and insanely logical.

We talk of the saner, greater France, the substantial French, that is masked by the rhetoric of M. Briand, and the flag-waving French nationalists, of a France generous enough to help a fallen foe and great enough to think of the welfare of mankind. I wish we could hear more of that saner France. And so on. I can see nothing but a warlike orator, empty and mischievous, leading France and all Europe to destruction. I do not see that it is possible for a France of armaments and adventurers to dance along the edge of the abyss without falling in.

Conditions in Britain.

When we pass out of the continental to the Atlantic system and consider the case of Britain, we find a country with a stabler exchange and a tradition of social give and take stronger and deeper than that of any other country in Europe. But she is not a self-maintaining country. Her millions live very largely on overseas trade. She is helplessly dependent upon the prosperity of other countries and particularly of Europe. The ebb of prosperity abroad means ebb for her at home. No other country feels so acutely the economic prostration of Germany; no other country suffers so greatly from the restless activities of France.

She is struggling along now with unprecedented masses of unemployed workers and the state of affairs abroad offers no hope of any diminution of this burden. The housing of her population has degenerated greatly since the war began; she cannot continue to feed, clothe and educate her people as she used to do unless the decay of continental Europe is arrested.

I do not know what political form of expression a great distress in Britain might take. The tendency towards revolutionary violence is not very evident in the British temperament, but people who are slow to move are often slow to stop. The slow violence of the English might not find expression in revolution and might not expend itself internally. They might get resentful about France — and perhaps Germany might be feeling resentful about France, too. But I will confess that I cannot yet imagine what an acutely distressed Britain might or might not do. Yet it is plain to me that the shadow that lies so dark over Petersburg stretches as far as London.

Condition of Europe.

Such, compactly, is the condition of Europe today. I submit to the reader that it is a fair statement of facts in common knowledge. This is not the Europe of the diplomatists and publicists: it is the Europe of reality and the common man. It is a process of decline and fall, going on under our eyes, swifter and more extensive than the decline and fall of the Roman empire in the fourth and fifth centuries. Its immediate cause is the destruction of the monetary system under the burden of war expenditure and war debts.

And the only possible hope that it may be arrested lies in a prompt and vigorous world conference to put an end to war expenditures, including even the French war expenditures that M. Briand's admirers find so justifiable, to extinguish debts and reinstate stable and trustworthy money in the world.

There is no evidence yet that the Washington conference will take up this task or will even contemplate this task. I find myself in the trough of the waves today and less confident of the outcome, even the limited outcome, of things here. I am increasingly doubtful whether the conference will get as far in the direction of a stabilized Pacific as I had hoped a few days ago.

LANDRU TRIAL IS "MORE ASTONISHING THAN STAGE SCENE"

difference today while attorneys representing relatives of missing women, whom the prisoner is accused of murdering, demanded his head. He put on his glasses and calmly made notes when attorney Surcouf cried:

"Under fallacious promises you led Madame Cuchet and her son to your slaughter house."

The sobbing of relatives of missing women was heard all through the court room as Surcouf made his plea and during that of M. La Gasse, who followed, but Landru appeared not to notice and not to hear.

"Landru is a cautious liar," said M. La Gasse, "but he also is woefully weak, with a limited imagination that drives him to silence when pressed with grave questions. Let him tell where Madame Pascal is and I will tender him my hand, but he will say nothing."

"There sits the greatest and shrewdest criminal of all times," declared one of the attorneys in his address. "Citizens, do your duty."

"Send him to the guillotine!" he shouted.

$20,864 FROM TAG SALES, $3113 LESS THAN LAST YEAR

Hospital Contributions Received From 81,226 Persons, as Compared With 90,336 in 1920.

COLLECTIONS TODAY IN THE CHURCHES

Average Gifts for the Sick Poor Smaller Than Two Years Ago — Last Year Was Record.

A total of $20,864.16 was dropped into the glass boxes of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association yesterday, for the benefit of the sick poor. The sum was $3113.14 less than was received in the boxes on Hospital Saturday last year. The amount does not represent the total collection for the purpose; money was received from other sources than the boxes, and the collection will be continued today.

Indications last night were, however, that the total will fall short of last year's collection unless there is an unexpected heavy response from the churches today.

Contributions from sources other than the glass collection boxes totaled $18,638.44, of which $1628 consisted of membership dues. In this category of contributions, firms and professions led with a total of $9,491.95. The total contributions of employes were $7,252.07.

Contributions Show Decrease.

The total number of contributors at the public stations yesterday was 81,226, as compared with 90,366 last year. This number is several thousand in excess of the number of contributors two years ago, although the total glass box receipts yesterday were only $687.78 in excess of the receipts two years ago, thus showing a larger number of contributors, but a smaller average contribution than in 1919. The collection last year was a record one, both in point of the amount and the number of givers.

Today, the second day of the collection, will be marked by appeals from the pulpits of virtually all churches in the city. Pastors were formally asked last night to make such appeals. Last year, 193 churches returned a total of $6799.20, Temple Israel leading the others with $943.68.

Women and Girls Sell Tags.

The glass box contributions were received yesterday, as in former years, by women and girls who volunteered to sell tags and flowers in public places.

In his appeal for contributions, President A. L. Shapleigh of the association said that the last year, as an aftermath of the war, had been trying, and that there was urgent need of the $60,000 which was turned over to the hospitals from the last collection.

The grand total last year was $66,196.37, divided as follows: Glass boxes, $24,022.08; trades and professions, $18,247.42; employes, $14,931.60; churches and Sunday schools, $6,799.26; miscellaneous, $167.50; membership dues, $1886; interest on the endowment fund, $141.70.

The association pays no salaries. Such expenditures as those for postage, stationery, printing and the like comprise the association's expense. It was stated that approximately 96 cents of every dollar contributed actually gets to the hospital beds.

Collections "Satisfactory."

Shapleigh said that, while the glass box collections were not equal to those of last year, they were fully satisfactory.

"In view of the lessened cost of food products and many other necessaries," he said, "we trust that at least an equal amount of physical relief may be afforded the helpless sick."

In the 28 years this work has been conducted, he continued, there occasionally have been collections smaller than the preceding year. He said that as president of the association he wishes to thank the contributors and especially the women who were in charge of collections.

ARBUCKLE DEFENSE EXPECTS TO CLOSE CASE TOMORROW

Finger Print Expert Is Called to Controvert State's Evidence and Is Under Fire.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—The defense expects to close its presentation of evidence in the Roscoe C. ("Fatty") Arbuckle case Monday, it was announced tonight when court adjourned over the week-end.

Finger prints bulked large in today's proceedings. The prints in rooms in the hotel St. Francis, where Arbuckle gave the party last September, at which Virginia Rappe is said to have received fatal injuries at the comedian's hands and as a result of which he is on trial on a manslaughter charge.

Ignatius H. McCarthy, former investigator for the Federal Department of Labor, was called as a finger print expert by the defense. Opposing testimony was offered by E. O. Heinrich of the University of California, a consulting criminologist. Heinrich had sworn that some prints on the door of the room where Miss Rappe was found injured were those of the defendant and that these and others indicated a struggle between Arbuckle and Miss Rappe.

Expert Is Under Fire.

McCarthy's qualifications as an expert were under fire from the prosecution when court adjourned. He admitted he never had testified as such an expert before.

Among other witnesses today were Philo McCullough, a motion picture actor of Hollywood, Cal., and Mrs. Florence Bates of Santa Ana, Cal., friends of Miss Rappe.

Harry B. Parker, rancher, friend of Miss Rappe, said he had known Miss Rappe for 10 years and intimately for five and that he had seen her on several occasions "all doubled up and tearing at her clothes." Once, he said, she appeared to suffer greatly after drinking a small glass of wine. Barker said he had a real estate business in Gary, Ind., as well as his ranch in California.

Mrs. Bates testified to having met Miss Rappe in a Chicago department store in October, 1913, while Miss Rappe was engaged as a cloak model, and the witness as a clerk. On three occasions Miss Rappe tore her clothes, doubled up and screamed and was taken to the store hospital, she testified.

Says Girl Tore Clothes.

During one of the attacks Miss Rappe tore off and utterly ruined a gown she had been displaying in a style show, she said.

Philo McCullogh, an actor of Hollywood, Cal., said he entertained Miss Rappe at his home about seven months ago and "she took a few drinks of gin, became very noisy and tore her stockings and waist off." He was friendly with Arbuckle and visited the Arbuckle home many times, he said.

The defense deposition of Dr. Maurice Rosenberg of Chicago was produced but it was stipulated that all depositions would be continued until Monday.

E. O. Heinrichs, criminologist and prosecution witness for finger print evidence, was recalled by the defense and asked who accompanied him on a visit to the Hotel St. Francis rooms where Miss Rappe is alleged to have been fatally injured. He replied:

"My secretary, Miss Salome Boyle."

"Did you not introduce yourself and Miss Boyle at the hotel as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson?" He was asked.

"Not that I remember," he replied.

NEGRO LYNCHED NEAR BEAUMONT

He Was Accused of Attacking an 8-year-old Girl.

By the Associated Press.

BEAUMONT, Tex., Nov. 26.—Henry Care, a negro, aged 25, was lynched today in the forest near Sour Lake, 20 miles northwest of Beaumont by 300 men. He was accused of attacking Cleo Colter, 8 years old, when she went to a small store operated by Cade to make a purchase.

Theirl girl's father wounded the negro. The officers took charge of the negro, but they had gone only a short ditsance when thew were overtaken by the mob and overpowered. The girl identified the negro before he was hanged, it is said.

CAFE RAIDED, 50 PERSONS DETAINED, AFTER A FIGHT

Head of Police Board and Chief Also Order Raid at Hotel at Fourteenth and Chestnut.

A glass thrown through a window during a fight in the cafe of the Alamac Hotel, Fourteenth and Chestnut streets, at 12:15 a. m. today, erroneously reported to the police as a shooting, caused President Miller of the Police Board, who was at police headquarters, Chief O'Brien and a squad of detectives to go to the hotel.

Upon their arrival the police officials ordered that the cafe be raided and about 50 persons were taken to police headquarters.

They then ordered that the Regent Hotel at the northeast corner of Fourteenth and Chestnut streets be raided also.

$28,444 PAYROLL ROBBERY

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—The highways and byways of New England are under police surveillance tonight in the belief that over some remote road four men in an automobile with a broken windshield might be speeding with the $28,444 payroll they stole in front of the A. G. Walton & Co. shoe factories at Chelsea this forenoon.

The money was snatched from messengers of the First National Bank of Boston as it was being carried into the office shortly after 9 o'clock. Tossing the pouch into the automobile the robbers, exchanging shots with the messengers and their guard, sped away, to be seen later passing through Winchester. Then the machine disappeared. A city employe at Winchester who saw the car reported that one of its occupants was being supported in the rear seat by his companions. It is believed one of the men was shot by the guard of the bank car.

JURY IN REED CASE DISMISSED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 26.—Judge Vories late today discharged the jury in the case of Lewis C. Gabbert against United States Senator James A. Reed of Kansas City, which had been on trial all week. The foreman told Judge Vories that there was no possibility of a verdict. The jury began deliberations this morning.

Gabbert, a St. Joseph attorney, was suing Senator Reed for a division of a fee of $62,500, alleged to have been received by Reed at the settlement of the case of the Interstate Railway Co. against the Kansas City, Clay County and St. Joseph Railway Co., in 1917. Reed contended that Gabbert had been employed in the case independently of the Senator's firm and that he was not responsible for Gabbert's fee.

$10,000 Breach of Promise Verdict

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Miss Margaret C. Lavezzorio, former sweetheart of Amerigo Cuneo, today agreed to accept $10,000, the sum fixed by Judge Hugo Pam of the Superior Court. A jury had returned a verdict of $15,000 in a breach of promise suit but Judge Pam said he would set aside the verdict and grant Cuneo a new trial unless Miss Lavezzorio accepted the smaller amount. A former jury had fixed the sum at $30,000, which was set aside as excessive.

PRINTERS TELL OF TURNER'S PART IN FORGED BOND CASE

Main Part of Work on Issue of $1,500,000 of Counterfeit French Securities Done at Two Shops.

EDITOR ALLEGED TO HAVE VISITED BOTH

Proprietors of Place Where Printing Was Done Identify Turner as Man Who Gave the Order.

Full statements as to the circumstances of the engraving and printing of the counterfeit certificates for $1,500,000 of French Government bonds, for the making of which George V. Halliday, broker, and Harry Turner, editor of "Much Ado," are now under $15,000 bond each, were made to Post-Dispatch reporters yesterday by officers of the Art Craft Shops and the McGill printing office, the two establishments chiefly concerned.

Halliday has admitted his guilt, while Turner has maintained that he was innocent of wrong intent, and that he arranged for the first stage of the work, the engraving, merely to get a $150 commission, and without knowing Halliday's ultimate purpose. They are charged jointly, in a Federal warrant, with counterfeiting the obligations of a foreign country, and the Federal grand jury is expected to take up the case this week.

Of the two mechanical divisions of the work, the first, the engraving, does not show the purpose of the enterprise, as the engravers made merely a pattern-work scroll, without wording. The second division of the work, the printing, makes clear the character of the undertaking, as it is a copy of a genuine certificate. Turner has insisted that his part in the matter ended with the engraving, and he had nothing to do with the printing at the McGill shop.

No Record of New York Firm.

Officers of the Art Craft Shops, who handled the engraving job, said yesterday that Turner represented to them that he was acting in behalf of a New York firm—Downing, Jones & Co., in the Equitable Building. Inquiry has shown no record of the existence of such a concern.

They said also that Turner asked for an exact copy of the engraved border which he furnished them, and which later proved to be the border of the genuine French bond certificates. The plate cost $1000 and the printing of 1000 sheets from it $150, or a total of $1150. The company, thinking that Turner would be appalled at the cost of the plate, sent to him samples of border designs which it had in stock. The cost of 1000 of these would have been $150. Turner, however, said that the sample he submitted was what was wanted.

Turner was particular, they said, as to the exact shade of green which should be used for the engraved border.

The information as to the engraving work was given by Paul W. Moeller, president of the Art Craft Shops in the Arcade building, and A. G. Caffer, salesman. They said they saw no reason why Halliday, whose office was in the same building, could not have placed the order himself, as they were seeking orders for elaborate engraving jobs.

Turner Surprised at Price.

They said Turner called up the office last July, and asked that a salesman be sent to see him. Caffer went, and he relates that Turner handed him the border apparently of a bond, the center of which had been removed, and asked how close the firm could come to it. Caffer told him it could be duplicated exactly. Caffer said he would have to figure on the cost, and took the sample away. The next day he telephoned to Turner, telling him the cost would be $1000. Turner indicated surprise at the price, but said he would find out about it.

Later, Caffer said, Turner sent to the Art Craft Shops a purported copy of a telegraphic day letter, addressed to "Downing, Jones & Co., Equitable building, New York," and stating the terms on which the work could be done. He also furnished Caffer a memorandum, asking him to "O K" the paper, which should be considered a contract.

The paper was not signed, Caffer said, but Turner placed the order Aug. 4, giving Caffer a check of Alice Martin, dancing teacher and financial associate of Turner in the publication of "Much Ado," for $350.

"Before that," the salesman said, "we had taken out to him samples of borders which we carry in stock and which can be furnished for about $150 a thousand, with only a comparatively small charge for work on the stock plate. He said he would 'take it up,' but subsequently informed us that they would not do.

Proofs in Three Colors.

"The sample furnished was in brown. (The brown certificates of Morgan & Co. were for $100. Halliday has stated that the sample submitted by Turner was obtained by destroying a $100 bond by cutting out the center of a genuine $100 certificate. The $1000 Morgan certificates are green.) When the plate was finished we took out proofs in black, brown and green.

"'It looks all right to me,' Turner said, 'but I will have to take it up.' The next report we got was that green was the color wanted, but the sample submitted was too dark. We lightened the color and submitted a proof. Turner again 'took it up' and brought back the reply that the original green was the one wanted."

Moeller said that this was about Sept. 28, as the next entry on the firm's books shows receipt of a $500 check of Schachner & Co., bond brokers, since gone bankrupt, which was given by Turner.

"On the same date, Turner ordered 1000 of the certificates printed in green. On Oct. 28 he ordered 500 more. (It has been established that errors in subsequent printing on the first 1000 made them too glaringly counterfeit.) At this time, also, he paid $50 cash. The charge for printing the first 1000 was $150 and $75 for the additional 500. Other entries in our books show that we received $25, a check from Alice Martin, on Nov. 5, and $75, a check from Alice Martin, on Nov. 19. There is still $75 due on the work."

Turner Told of Purpose.

Caffer said that on one occasion following the delivery of the first batch of work, Turner said to him: "The chances are that you will get an order for 1,000,000 of these. They are going to be used to establish the Junior Players, who are to make motion pictures. The bonds are to be sold at $5 each to school children, who are to be permitted to pay for them at 10 cents a week. It will be an educational system in investment for the school children, showing them how to invest in good securities, and will finance the Junior Players. A New York firm is handling it."

Moeller said that early in the negotiations for the making of the border and background he submitted a copy to Stephen A. Connell, chief of the local bureau of the United States Secret Service, and that subsequently Connell was told of the progress of the negotiations. He received Connell's instructions to go ahead, he said. It is customary for engravers to inform the secret service authorities of any job which does not show its purpose clearly, this being a precaution against counterfeiting enterprises.

After the engraving of the sheets, first the 1000 and then the 500, they were taken to the McGill printing shop at 123 North Eleventh street. This is a small establishment in which Frank P. McGill and his son, Frank L. McGill, do most of the work.

A well-dressed man called at the McGill shop about Oct. 1, the McGills have related, and said that he had some wor kto be done for "W. B. Davis, St. Louis representative of J. P. Morgan & Co." He did not give his name, and the McGills, in speaking of him to the secret service agents later, designated his as "No. 1."

Flattered by Order.

"No. 1," according to t he McGills, told them that the St. Louis quota of the French bond certificates had been sent elsewhere b ymistake, and that Morgan & Co. had decided to have more printed here. The McGills were flattered to receive an order in the name of the banking firm of which they had heard so much, and they told customers and competitors, in the subsequent days, that they were doing some work for J. P. Morgan & Co.

"No. 1," they said, submitted a genuine $100 French bond certificate, except that they were to make the amount $1000 instea dof $100, and the interest on the attached coupon was changed to correspond. When the McGills said they did not have type exactly like some of that in the original, they say that "No. 1" told them to make it as close a copy as they could.

"No. 1" also insisted, they said, that the imprint of the American Bank Note Co. should be printed in green ink, just below the engraved line. The elder McGill hesitated about this, but he said "No. 1" persuaded him, by arguing that printing houses did not imprint everything they turned out. The imprint of the American Bank Note Co., in green ink, made it appear to be part of the engraving.

Embossing Job Required.

Another requirement made by "No. 1" was that the signature of J. P. Morgan & Co. should be placed on the attached coupon. This was an embossing job, and the McGills turned it over to Ecker & Co., in the Benoist building, as a "rush" job.

When the first 1000 printed certificates, for a total of $1,000,000, were delivered to "No. 1" on Oct. 26, he paid $17.75 cash for the job. A few days later he returned, bringing "Mr. Davis" with him for the first time, the McGills said, and introducing him as the representative of the Morgan firm. The McGills now say "Mr. Davis" was Halliday, and Halliday admits having dealt with them as "Mr. Davis."

Two errors had been discovered. One was that the interest sum on the coupon was $33.75, instead of $37.50.

The McGills said that "Mr. Davis" said to "No. 1": "how did that happen? Did you make that mistake or did I?"

"I don't know," the McGills said "No. 1" responded.

"Mr Davis" the printers stated, then said to "No 1":

"Well, you will have to go to New York and get some more engraved sheets." The McGills said that "No 1" replied that he would depart that night and the two figured that he ought to be back in four days

A few days later 'Mr Davis" and "No 1" came back with 500 unprinted engraved sheets and gave orders for the printing of them with previous errors corrected The second batch, for $500,000, was delivered on Nov. 1, and were paid for in cash, $7.75, by "Mr. Davis."

During the negotiations "Mr. Davis" told the McGills that his office was in the Federal Reserve building, and left a telephone number at which he could be reached.

Telephone Incident Recalled.

The younger McGill said he had occasion to call "Mr. Davis", and called the number. He was told, he said that there was no "Mr. Davis" in that office.

The telephone was that of a broker in the Federal Reserve Bank building with whom Halliday was acquainted. This broker later told Connell, of the Secret Service that he had received the inquiry for "Mr. Davis", and had hung up the receiver after informing the person calling that there was no "Mr. Davis" there.

A few minutes later, the broker said, his stenographer told him Halliday had said to her that if there was a call for "Mr. Davis," it was for him.

Halliday came in shortly after, and the broker asked him what the procedure meant. He said Halliday told him that he had an opportunity to get rid of some grocery company stock, and did not want the purchaser to know his real identity.

McGill said that "Mr. Davis" appeared in his office very shortly after the telephone call, and that he told him he had been unable to reach him by telephone.

"Well, if they are not calling me to the phone, I want to know it," McGill said "Mr. Davis" replied. "I'll go back to the office and call you, and then you can call me back."

McGill said that "Mr. Davis" departed and called on the telephone after a time, instructing him to call back at the number he had left originally. McGill he called back and got "Mr. Davis" on the telephone in response to his inquiry.

As has been told, the elder McGill was surprised to read, in a late edition of last Tuesday's Post-Dispatch, that the New York Stock Exchange had received a warning from Morgan & Co. against the counterfeit certificates. This indicated to him that perhaps his recent customer had not been the Morgan firm, as he had proudly supposed, and announced. He informed the District Attorney of the matter after consulting his own lawyer.

Identification of "No. 1."

Thursday afternoon, after Turner's arrest, the two McGills were taken into Connell's office, where there were nine men, wearing hats and coats. After looking about, they were taken out, and was asked by District Attorney Carroll whether they had seen anyone whom they knew.

"Yes," said the father, "the man standing by the window is No. 1."

"That's him, all right," the son said. The man they referred to was Turner.

The McGills were taken out, and Turner was asked whether he had been in the McGill office, in connection with the printing of the wording upon the bogus bond certificates. He said he had not been in any printing establishment in years, except that of Albert von Hoffmann.

The McGills were called back, and were told to look at Turner. He regarded them closely at the same time. The men smiled at Turner, as if in recognition, but he continued to peer at them.

"I might know this man," Turner said, indicating the elder McGill, "but I don't know the other fellow; I'm sure of that."

"Do you work for Von Hoffmann?" Turner asked the elder McGill.

"No, you know I don't," McGill replied.

Both father and son said they could not be mistaken in their recognition of Turner, as they had seen him frequently.

The McGills later were asked whether they recognized Turner by any particular characteristic.

"The first time I saw him," said the father, "I noticed his odd manner of holding his head forward, which gives him the impression of being a little stoop-shouldered. I have noticed it every time I have seen him since."

The son said he had seen Turner so often that he had not thought of looking for any especial characteristics in identifying him. "When you've seen a man that often, you know him," he said. "Of course, I noticed his stout body and heavy face. When I saw him at the office he used to wear a black and white check suit, with a cap of about the same pattern. He kept his trousers turned up, and wore a broad black tape on the inverted trouser-ends, at the back."

Five Firms Aided in Work.

The Arts Craft Shops and the McGill concern were two of five different companies in the printing industry which, with one other individual, contributed to the making of the bogus certificates. The National Steel Engraving Co. made the plate for the border and the background of the bonds; the facsimile signature "J. P. Morgan & Co." on the coupon of the bond was embossed by Ecker & Co.; the die of the signature was made by an employe of an engraving company working at home on his own time; and a rubber stamp of the facsimile signature, "J. P. Morgan & Co.," used on the bond itself, was made by a downtown firm in that business.

W. J. Ecker Jr., head of the Ecker firm, said the order was taken by someone in his office and that it first came to his attention when it was on the presses. "I thought it queer that there should be a call for embossing that name on certificates," Ecker said, "but we are wholesalers, dealing with printing firms, and generally accept work from other firms without question. The work did not again enter my mind."

The articles of evidence in the Government's possession, include several corrected proof sheets, retained by the McGills while doing the printing job; one of the original 1000 certificates, containing two errors which caused Halliday to reject them, this sheet having been obtained from the files of Ecker & Co., and bearing marks in corrections of the errors; the engraved border of a genuine certificate which was used as "copy" by the Art Craft Shops and the National Steel Engraving Co.; and the small insert plate bearing a fac simile of the signature of J. P. Morgan & Co., used on the coupon. This plate was found in Halliday's effects, having been returned by the printers after the job was finished.

Halliday's Release on $14,000 Bond Cost Him $1000.

George Dominick, a professional bondsman, who with Walter Kelly, an attorney, signed the $14,000 bond on which George V. Halliday was released by State courts after his arrest on seven indictments charging embezzlement from clients, disclosed to Secret Service agents who questioned him as to the whereabouts of Halliday when they were seeking him in the counterfeiting case, that the fee on the bond paid him and Kelly by Halliday was $1000 cash. In addition they compelled Mrs. Halliday to place jewelry in a safety deposit vault as security for the bond. The Hallidays said that the value of this jewelry was about $20,000.

How Harry Turner Negotiated Contract for Counterfeit Plates

THE purported copy of a day letter telegram, shown by Harry Turner to A. G. Caffer, salesman of the Art Craft Shops, regarding the engraving work for which Turner negotiated with the shop, was:

Downing Jones & Co.,
Equitable Building,
120 Broadway, N. Y.

Steel plates as per design can be manufactured within six weeks for one thousand dollars. Work will be as near an exact duplicate of sample as possible, allowing for minor inaccuracies of workmanship which would only be visible to those in the trade, which is, I take it, what you desire, after reading your letter carefully. It will be necessary to deposit $500 on the order, balance to be paid when work is finished and accepted. Six weeks is the best possible. Please wire your wishes.

(Signed) H. S. TURNER.

At the same time, Caffer said, Turner submitted this note, addressed to Caffer:

If the foregoing is in line with your understanding, kindly o. k. this paper and return to me and it will constitute a contract between us so soon as I have an answer to the telegram from New York. H. T.

Stephen Connell, Secret Service operative here, has been unable to find any trace of such a concern as Downing, Jones & Co. in New York. A Post-Dispatch staff correspondent, who made an inquiry along the same line, reported yesterday that the firm's name was not in the New York City directory or telephone directory, and that the superintendent of the Equitable Building has no such firm name on his record. In some cases, concerns sharing offices with other concerns are not listed in the building superintendent's record.

WIFE SUES HUSBAND FOR HALF INTEREST IN REAL ESTATE

Mrs. William H. Brueggeman Also Seeks Divorce, Alleging Failure to Support Her Adequately.

Mrs. Elizabeth Brueggeman yesterday filed suit against her husband, William H. Brueggeman, for a one-half interest in realty at 3403 South Grand avenue, valued at $20,000. She also asks for one-half of $1500 she alleged he has on deposit at the First National Bank, and that the bank be enjoined from paying out the money before her rights have been determined.

In another petition she asks for a divorce, alleging that Brueggeman failed to adequately provide for her support and that he forced her to release her dower interest in realty at 6103 Arsenal street. They were married March 4, 1918, and separated last Wednesday. Mrs. Brueggeman says that her husband has gone to Florida.

F. R. Arnold to Tour Europe.

Frederick A. Arnold, vice chairman of the Missouri Commission for the Blind, at the monthly meeting of the commission Friday, was selected to make a tour of the European countries and make a survey of what is being done abroad for the adult blind in the way of education and training and economic development. Arnold will start on his mission as soon as he receives his passports. He volunteered to make the survey and he will bear all the expenses of the trip. He will be accompanied by his wife and expects to be absent several months. His plans include visits to the various institutions and schools for the adult blind in England, France, Germany and Italy. He plans to spend several weeks at the institution for the blind conducted by Sir Arthur Pierson in London.

POLICE ARE STILL WITHOUT TRACE OF 2 KIDNAPED BOYS

Disappearances of Dominick Di Franco and Vincent Castelli as Deep Mysteries as at First.

ONE GONE TWO WEEKS, THE OTHER 11 DAYS

Fathers of Each Still Deny Having Had Any Word From Their Sons' Abductors.

Two weeks have passed since Dominick Di Franco, 7-year-old son of Constantino Di Franco, 5256 Wilson avenue, was kidnaped, and 11 days since Vincent Castelli, 5-year-old son of Vito Castelli, 4551 Laclede avenue, was kidnaped, yet so far as anyone, outside the immediate family, knows, no trace has been had of the boys, and their disappearances remain as mysterious as at the start.

But those who have observed the developments of other kidnapings and who are best acquainted with the Sicilian nature express the belief that negotiations looking to the ransom of the boys are under way and that the lads will suddenly appear either on some street near home or in the downtown Italian quarter, when terms have been agreed upon. There is, however, some evidence that this supposition is wrong.

Dominick Di Franco was abducted by two men, who drove a Ford touring car, on Nov. 14, as he was going to the Shaw School, three blocks from his home, in the morning. Vincent Castelli was abducted by two men and a woman, who used a Ford touring car, as he was returning home at noon, Nov. 17, from kindergarten at the Stix School, three blocks from his home. Both families are Sicilian and were acquainted with each other.

Two Kinds of Italians.

The Di Franco home is on the "hill," as the Italian colony west of King's highway and the Missouri Pacific tracks is known. Here there are two kinds of Italians—those from the north of Italy and those from the south, many of the latter being from Sicily.

Castelli moved to his present home only a month ago from a dwelling over a small store on Ninth street, near Carr street, where he formerly conducted a grocery. In that district, too, were Italians of both sets, the tenements for several blocks forming an Italian quarter.

The theories that have been advanced as to the motive for the two kidnapings are varying, but most of them in substance tend to the opinion that both boys were abducted to be held for ransom, in the belief that their fathers are wealthy. That has been the motive of numerous such cases, although jealousy of business success sometimes has replaced it, with ransom becoming incidental.

Di Franco formerly conducted a grocery in a store at his home, but now sells sugar in large quantities. One police official has expressed belief that he made considerable money by these sales to Italians in St. Louis and St. Louis County, being known in some quarters as the "sugar king." He owns some property on the "hill," including his home, and a large automobile truck, a light truck and a light touring car. Castelli retired from the grocery business when he moved and has planned to enter the fruit business. He has suggested that his son's abduction may have been in jealousy of his prosperity. He owns a large touring car.

Belief of Negotiations.

The belief that negotiations for satisfactory ransom are under way has been expressed by Italian Catholic priests, including the parish priests of the two families; by Italian merchants, northern and southern; Italian residents of the "hill," and the police. A Post-Dispatch reporter has talked to representatives of all these elements. A number of the policemen who expressed opinions have been working in the Italian quarter for years, and while they have many close friends among the residents, they remain unable to obtain from them definite information as to the crimes.

That is because of the traditional desire of the Italians, especially the southerners, to settle their own troubles. They literally will not talk if men of their nationality have committed offenses against them, although their complaints are voluble should Americans or others commit offenses against them. That has been the case in the present instance. Whether or not they entertain ideas of vengeance, both Di Franco and Castelli feel sure from the nature of the crimes that their countrymen are involved.

Their lips have remained closed and they have expressed themselves by shrugs and grunts when questioned, after their first brief statements. Fear also enters into the reasons for their silence, for they are afraid of vengeance against themselves or their sons, police say.

A Post-Dispatch reporter has visited each family several times daily since the abductions were reported, trying to learn something that might lead to an explanation of the case and inquiring if the boys have returned. His answers have been the same as those accorded the police—eloquent nothings.

Police Baffled by Cases.

The inability to get some tangible thing to work on has prevented activity by the police. The families deny that they have enemies and decline to tell with whom they have had dealings in business. Numerous anonymous communications, some of them written in Italian, have been received by the police, purporting to tell where the kidnaped boys are being detained. Perhaps 25 of these have been followed by raids on homes and other places all over the city, but the boys were not found.

The investigation in the Castelli case has devolved on the district Detective Bureau under Sergt. Collard, whose men have made daily visits to the home without success, and who have had little else to work on in this matter. The Di Franco investigation has been under Acting Sergeant Delaney's bureau, and his men have visited the Di Franco home twice a day, but learned nothing.

Nicholas McVey, one of the detectives under Delaney, who walked a beat on the "hill" for a decade and who knows Di Franco well, has paid especial attention to the case. "They'd tell me anything, except something that involved an Italian," he said. However, Di Franco unburdened enough yesterday to ask McVey to follow him while he walked from Sarah street to King's highway on Laclede avenue. Di Franco's idea was that Italians from St. Louis County, going to the market at Sarah and Laclede, might betray guilt on their features if they saw him.

Di Franco Away on Trips.

McVey followed him at a little distance in an automobile, as did a son, Carmelo Di Franco, but the effort was fruitless. Di Franco has made numerous mysterious short trips away from his home. Castelli, as far as could be learned, has made little effort beyond inquiries in the vicinity of his former home to carry on his own investigation. Di Franco's walk yesterday might tend to disprove the theory that he is negotiating a ransom.

Two policemen who are beat partners have made several trips to St. Louis County, when off duty, and wearing citizen clothes, on private information that the boys were being held on farms, but learned nothing.

Di Franco has spent much of his time since his son was taken in directing the erection of a garage and addition to his home, while his wife leaned out an upper window and three daughters, kept home from school until their brother is found, play. The Castellis have remained in seclusion.

ORDERED NOT TO DESTROY WINE

Police Department Restrained After an Arrest at Grocery.

Members of the Police Department, including President Miller, were temporarily restrained yesterday by Circuit Judge Taylor from destroying 18 barrels of wine in the basement of the grocery of George Graf, 2801 South Ninth street. The order was asked by Graf, who stated that he had purchased the wine, which he valued at $3000, before prohibition went into effect, to sell in his place, which then was conducted as a saloon. Since then he has had the liquor on hand, but did not attempt to sell it, he said. However, the police Friday evening arrested him and took charge of the wine, placing a guard at the store to watch it. He alleged that they threatened to destroy it.

Judge Taylor set the case for hearing Tuesday. He refused to embrace in the writ an order directing the defendants to remove the police guard.

The President's First Horseback Ride in Washington

President Harding has found that he has not been getting enough exercise and his physician has ordered him to supplement his golf with a horseback ride every morning. He began Wednesday, which marked his first appearance on a horse in the City of Washington, though recently, on a camping trip with Ford and Edison, he took a short canter.

ST. LOUIS POLICE RAID GANG AND GET ROBBERY LOOT

Three wrist watches were under a carpet in another room and from various other places I took a brooch, diamond bar pin and three stick pins.

"At about that time, a police automobile with four detectives, the reinforcement, arrived, and, turning to our prisoners, I told them they could take their choice between an East side jail or the St. Louis jail. They chose the St. Louis jail and we brought them over."

Men Robbed View Prisoners.

Detectives were dispatched to the home of Louis B. Moss, 4246 Flad avenue, president of the St. Louis Refining Co., where the other two partners in the firm also live. Just after the robbery had occurred Moss arrived at his store and upon being told what had happened, began to weep and became hysterical. The other members of the firm, Charles Shaplin and Edward Extein, who were present during the robbery, were so excited also that they could give no connected account of what had happened.

When the detectives arrived at the Moss home the excitement of the morning was duplicated. Moss was overcome with joy and said over and over again: "I knew you would do it; I had a hunch." The detectives said that two women in the house fainted upon being told of the recovery of some of the diamonds.

Extein and Shaplin, together with Moss' daughter, Miss Bernice Moss, and Miss Helen Downes, of 4030 Oakland avenue, who were in the store at the time of the robbery, were taken by the detectives to police headquarters where the prisoners were paraded before them. The young women pointed out three of the men who, they said, resembled the robbers. They previously had expressed confidence in their ability to make an identification.

They were agreed that one of the prisoners, especially, was one of the robbers. They had described one of the robbers as having a pug nose. One of the prisoners had a flattened nose that might be described as pug. They said they were sure he was among the four who entered the store.

Details of the Robbery.

The robbers ran into the store just as Extein, Moss' son-in-law, had placed on the showcase counter the package containing the diamonds which he had brought from a safety vaule in the Night and Day Bank, where the firm rents a safety deposit box. Shaplin, also related to Moss by marriage, and Miss Moss, were behind the counter.

Extein, after depositing the package, had started to go behind the counter when the robbers, in unison, shouted: "It's a stickup." At that moment Miss Downes, an employe, entered the store. The robbers made way for her to pass and then ordered her and the others into a rear room.

One of the robbers stood guard at the door of the rear room and commanded Shaplin, Extein and the girls to lie on the floor. Miss Downes ignored the order, and explained later that she did not care to soil her dress by lying on the floor. Extein was a bit slow, and the robber threatened to shoot him.

Meanwhile, the other robbers took the package, ransacked the showcase, which contained nothing of value, searched the safe but took nothing from it, and then ran to the front door. "Have you cleaned up?" the fourth robber asked as he joined his companions.

Robbers Flee in Auto.

When they heard the front door slammed the prisoners left the back room. Miss Downes was the first and she reported seeing an automobile occupied by the robbers driven east on Pine street from the store.

Moss said that the firm had made application for theft insurance, but that the policy had not yet been issued. He also said that a portion of the diamonds belonged to customers who had commissioned the firm to sell them. He said that the firm's share of the stock was valued at about $35,000.

Business on Brokerage Basis.

Until about two years ago the firm had carried on a smelting business exclusively, dealing in dental gold. They later began dealing in diamonds, unset and mounted, on a brokerage basis. Moss explained that they have been doing a "memorandum" business, which he described as buying and selling diamonds not on a strictly cash basis. The firm was commissioned by wholesalers to sell to retailers, paying for the goods as they were disposed of. The firm dealt with retailers on the same basis, he said.

MAN FOUND SLAIN ON EAST SIDE AN ALLEGED ROBBER

Body Discovered Near Edwardsville Identified by Finger Prints as That of James Fleming.

VICTIM INDICTED FOR UNION NEWS HOLDUP

Some Shots Fired Into Body at Close Range—His Associates Recently Rounded Up.

The body of a man found dead from nine bullet wounds yesterday at 8 a. m. on a road five miles west of Edwardsville, Ill., was identified last night from finger prints as that of James Fleming, 24 years old, ex-convict, and gangster, who was under indictment at the time of his death for participation in the holdup on Sept. 12 of the Union News Co., 2014 Walnut street, in which $1418 was obtained.

St. Louis detectives who went to Edwardsville to investigate the shooting expressed the belief that Fleming's body had been carried to the point at which it was found and was thrown out of an automobile. Seven of the bullets were fired into his body at such close range that his vest was powder burned. Two other bullet wounds were in the head. The detectives said that known associates of Fleming recently had been brought in for questioning on recent robberies of outlying banks and they believe that these men suspected Fleming of being responsible.

The Granite City police have under arrest two known St. Louis police characters, known also to have associated with Fleming and who were said to have been seen in Fleming's company in a saloon in Granite City early Friday night. It was said that the men had a quarrel in the saloon. In a room which the two men under arrest had occupied, the police found two revolvers.

Fleming was released from the Jefferson City penitentiary last July 8, having been sent there under a 5-year sentence in 1918.

The body was still warm when found by George Stegemeier, a farmer. Stegemeier told Madison County officers he heard several shots in the direction of the road about 3 a. m.

Near the body were five empty cartridge shells and one cartridge. There also were tracks indicating that two automobiles which had come from the west had turned back near the point where the body was found.

Small pieces of money, mostly nickels and dimes, were scattered on the road. This and some small change in his pocket amounted in all to less than a dollar.

Egan Left No Will; Boy to Claim $100,000 Estate

Mother of Youth, Who Says He Is Son of Slain Politician, Named Curatrix So Action May Be Brought.

It became known yesterday, following the appointment of a curatrix for James W. Egan, 16 years old, of 3605 Page boulevard, claimant of the estate of William T. Egan, Constable and Democratic City Committeeman who was mysteriously murdered by gangsters Oct. 31, that Egan left no will and that his estate is valued at approximately $100,000.

The Probate Court granted the application of Mrs. Nonie Stewart for appointment as curatrix of James W. Egan. Her application, stating that William T. Egan was the father of James W. Egan, was accompanied by a written statement signed by the boy, in which he said that Mrs. Stewart is his mother, and that he desired her appointed as his curatrix. The boy resides with his mother and her husband, J. A. Stewart, at the Page boulevard address.

Will File Claim for Boy.

Vincent Dempsey, an attorney, who represents the boy, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that the appointment of a curatrix for his client was preliminary to the filing of a claim in his behalf for Egan's estate.

The estate is now in the hands of the Public Administrator, but William T. Egan's sister, Mrs. Mamie Woelfel of 4551 Arlington avenue, has filed in the Probate Court a petition to have the Public Administrator removed and herself appointed administratrix.

In her petition Mrs. Woelfel alleged that her brother was never married, that he is survived by no widow or child and that his only heirs are herself, Mrs. Nellie St. Cyre, a half-sister, and Florence Kemp, a niece. She declared that she was the only one authorized to administer the estate and that the Public Administrator was usurping her right.

On the other hand, the Public Administrator bases his action in taking charge of the estate on a statement in the published notice of Egan's death that he was "the father of James Egan." The Probate Court, in deciding who shall distribute the estate, will also pass on the claim of James W. Egan that he is the sole heir of William T. Egan. Mrs. Woelfel's petition will be heard Dec. 6.

Deposit Box Opened.

Examination of William T. Egan's safe deposit box, in the vault of the Mercantile Trust Co., disclosed the fact that Egan left no will. It also showed, although no inventory has been taken, that Egan's estate amounts to about $100,000. Friends had estimated that Egan's property would run as high as $200,000.

Persons who were closely associated with Egan were of the opinion that he had left a will and that the document would be found among his effects in the safe deposit box. They based their belief on conversations had with Egan in which, they asserted, he frequently spoke of his financial affairs in a manner which left no doubt in their minds that he had made a will or at least contemplated doing so.

Regardless of what decision the Probate Court makes concerning the claim of James W. Egan and the allegations of Mrs. Woelfel, friends of Egan anticipate a contest over his estate which probably will carry the matter into the Circuit Court for adjudication.

INVALIDED AMERICANS IN CAMP IN MOROCCO

Former Companions in Spanish Legion, in London, Tell of Suffering in Service.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 26—20 Americans who joined the Spanish Foreign Legion last summer remains in a Spanish camp near Iceuta, Morocco, suffering from dysentery, septic sores and vermin, according to stories told today by two of their former comrades, members of the contingent of 13 Americans and 43 Britishers, who reached London yesterday, after seven weeks of campaigning against the Moors on the Melilla front.

These stories of their stranded "buddies" were told by Charles W. Brown, of 162 St. Anne's avenue, New York City and Charles Stephenson, a native of New York whose home now is in Toronto.

Among those left behind in the Spanish camp, they said, are C. B. Lloyd, of 907 West Washington St., Petersburg, Va., a youngster under 17 years of age; Benjamin Margo[illegible], of Boston, Mass., who was wounded while on the Teuton front, and George Corbett, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who paid his own fare from America when he joined the Spanish troops. They are all now destitute, acording to Brown and Stephenson, and their sufferings are bound to become worse, with the rainy season in Morocco just beginning.

Tells of Cruel Treatment.

Brown and Stephenson confirmed earlier stories of hardships and cruel treatment at the hands of Spanish officers. They said they participated in 11 battles between Sept. 17 and Nov. 14, including those of Mount Gourougou, Nador, Zeluan and Mount Arruit. Both, having fought with the Canadian army during the World war, enlisted as British subjects with 45 others, and sailed from Southampton, Sept. 1, on the steamship Almirante Lobo to Ceuta, whence they were sent to Melilla by way of Malaga. Then, after three days, during which time they caught snatches of sleep along the roadside, they said they were sent to the front, having been given a loaf of bread and a tin of sardines. Their personal property had been stolen.

Of their group, they said, four had been killed and 2 wounded. Being unable to understand the Spanish commands led them to much ill-treatment, they said. On one occasion they said they were beaten and sentenced to the hard-labor squad. At another time they were sent to the front with their arms tied behind their backs as punishment for trying to obtain medicine at Melilla.

They told the story of a Greek soldier in the legion who was sentenced to be executed, but they said the Americans in the firing squad purposely jammed their rifles.

Refused Further Service.

Eventually the Americans were released, and they left the front Nov. 4, arriving back at Ceuta four days later, where they said they were well treated for the first time.

They described a dramatic scene at Ceuta, where Col. Millan Astray, himself wounded, harangued the Americans and Britishers, accusing them of cowardice, and appealed to them to stand by their chief.

"Will you fight one more battle and prove your pluck?" they quoted the Colonel as asking. They consented to this request, they said, but were asked to sign a document which would have meant virtual re-enlistment, and consequently they refused further service.

Brown and Stephenson declared there was still much bad feeling against America among the Spaniards who were unable to forget the Spanish-American war.

The Americans here are being cared for by the British Legion and the Y. M. C. A.

MADRID, Nov. 26.—Captain-General Primo de Rivera of Madrid was dismissed from that office today at a meeting of the Cabinet, as the result of an address he made in the Senate yesterday, in which he expressed belief that North Africa had no military value from the Spanish viewpoint. AMERICAN AQUIRES VALUABLE PAINTINGS FROM GERMANY

Durer's "The Saviour" and Matsys' Work Obtained by New York Private Collector.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Two valuable paintings have been acquired through the F. Kleinberger galleries by a prominent private collector here, it was learned today. The paintings were owned in Germany and are "the Saviour" by Albrecht Durer and "The Rest on the Flight from Egypt," by Quentin Matsys.

The Durer picture was painted in 1502 and was for over a century in the possession of the family of Eugene Felix of Leipsic.

The Matsys is the fifth painting to come to New York from the celebrated Oppenheim collection. It was owned by the late Baron Oppenheim during the war. The buyer was forced by reverses to sell it again.

Operation of Maternity Law, and What It Will Do, Explained by Author

Senator Sheppard, in Statement for Post-Dispatch, Points to Harm Done by Lack of Education.

The special session of Congress, which adjourned Wednesday, enacted a number of laws, in which the general public has more than an ordinary interest. These measures have been explained from time to time in the Post-Dispatch, and, now that they have become laws, the Post-Dispatch will publish statements from the authors of the measures, briefly explaining the operation of and the results designed to be accomplished by the laws.

Among the measures which attracted wide attention was the so-called Sheppard-Towner maternity bill, which the President signed Wednesday. This law, designed to disseminate information regarding maternity with the view to eliminating evils resulting from improper hygiene, was sponsored by women's organizations throughout the country and was enacted only after a hard fight, many members of the House and Senate opposing it. In a statement which follows, telegraphed to the Post-Dispatch, Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, the author, tells how the law will operate and what it is designed to accomplish.

Articles will appear in the Post-Dispatch later, explaining other measures enacted into law.

SENATOR MORRIS SHEPPARD.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

UNDER this act Federal and State governments will co-operate in making available for mothers and infants instruction in the hygiene of maternity and infancy. It developed in the hearing on this measure before congressional committees that nearly 18,000 mothers and nearly 200,000 infants under one year of age are perishing every year in the United States from causes most of which could be removed by proper instruction and information. It developed further that practically three-fourths of all women dying from causes connected with childbirth in the United States perish from two diseases which could almost always be prevented by possession of proper knowledge; that many who do not die are permanently invalided from causes mostly preventable through proper information.

Object of the Act.

The object of the maternity act is to convey this information to the mothers of America to make life safer for them and their offspring, to prevent the present enormous waste of the lives of mothers and children in the United States. This information will be made available through consultation centers, supervised by public health nurses and reputable physicians and through extension courses by qualified lecturers from approved educational institutions, through the dissemination of the results of investigations by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor and other suitable methods.

The act will be administered under the general supervision of the children's bureau in connection with a national Advisory Committee composed of the head of the children's bureau, the head of the Public Health Service and the United States Commissioner of Education. The active administration of the law will rest with the State agencies and the local centers, the authority of the Federal Government being limited to approval or disapproval of plans submitted by States accepting the act, to the issuance of Federal allotments, or their withdrawal if a State should cease to observe the spirit of the act, all decisions in this regard being subject, however, to appeal to the President of the United States.

No Compulsion in the Law.

In other words, the Federal authorities under the act have only such authority as will insure the expenditure of Federal funds in the manner intended by Congress. Every State accepting the act and complying with its provisions gets $10,000 the first year, and $5000 for four succeeding years, regardless of any appropriation of its own, and, in addition, each year that proportion of approximately $1,000,000, which its population bears to the population of the Union provided its Legislature appropriates an equal sum.

The act contains no compulsion of any kind on states or individuals. The entry into any home over the objection of the parent is specifically prohibited. The life of the act is limited to five years. It is the hope and belief of those who have sponsored the act that its usefulness will have been so thoroughly demonstrated long before the expiration of five years that it will be made a permanent policy of the Republic.

MORRIS SHEPPARD,
United States Senator from Texas.

FORMER CHICAGO POLITICIAN ACCUSED IN LIQUOR CASE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Warrants were issued by a United States Commissioner today for John P. Tansey, former chairman of the Cook County Democratic Central Committee, charging him with altering whisky removal permits an ddefrauding the Government.

The warrants charged Tansey obtained a permit to buy three gallons of whisky for the use of St. Vincent's orphan asylum, and by adding a cipher withdrew 30 gallons from bond, keeping 27 gallons for his personal use. Later he obtained a permit to buy 6 gallons, it is alleged, and changed it to 60 gallons, keeping 54 gallons of the liquor. An investigation to determine why orphans consumed so much liquor led to the request for warrants, Federal officials said.

GOLD GUNS OUT IN INDIA FOR PRINCE OF WALES

Great Display of Splendor at Baroda in Honor of Heir to British Throne.

By the Associated Press.

BARODA, India, Nov. 23.—The Prince of Wales is experiencing his first taste of the opulence and splendor of Indian Princes as the guest of the Gaekwar of Baroda, one of the most powerful native rulers, whose resources are said to be almost unfathomable and whose yearly income is placed at many millions of dollars.

Americans will recall the Gaekwar's son, Prince Jasinch, who was educated at Harvard, and whose allowance was so great as to make him a Croesus among his less fortunate comrades.

The Prince's train drew up at the station today amid the thunder of cannon, and awaiting him was the Gaekwar himself, with his retinue. From there the young Prince was driven in a barouche scintillating with gold and jewels through the elaborately decorated streets, in which were cheering thousands.

At one point were arranged the battery of famous gold and silver guns with silver carriages and richly caparisoned horses, together with six colossal elephants bearing silver and gilded thrones, each one of which represented a fortune.

The procession was followed by the durbar (as the official reception is called), which took place in Durbar Hall, with its carpeted gold and walls of marble and teak.

Everywhere were gorgeously attired dignitaries who participated in state ceremonies reserved for British royalty.

During the afternoon there was a garden party in the spacious grounds of the palace, where Indian musicians, acrobats and dancers entertained. The Prince also was shown the crown jewels and saw displayed the glittering mass of gems of inestimable value.

Tonight the city was illuminated on the same scale of lavish magnificence. For hours the capital was a blaze of colorful fires, with the city's multitudes wandering in the midst of glowing colonnades, minarets and pylons.

This is a sample of the greetings that the Prince of Wales is expected to meet throughout India.

INTERMEDIATE REFORMATRY NEEDED, DECLARES BLAKEY

He would Not Send First Offenders Between 18 and 30 to Boonville Boy Institution.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 26.—The hearing at the State Reformatory at Boonville Tuesday and Wednesday b ythe State Board of Charities and Corrections served to point out the need for an intermediate State reformatory to which could be sent first offenders between 18 and 30 years old, in the opinion of Al G. Blakey, one of the commissioners of penal institutions, and formerly superintendent of the Boonville Reformatory.

The hearing was called at the suggestion of Gov. Hyde, following complaint by Circuit Attorney Howard Sidener of St. Louis as to the conduct of the institution.

"My contention has been that the reformatory is a plant for the reclamation of youths," Blakey said, "and I agree that men in the twenties and thirties ought not to be sent to the same place or perhaps given the same treatment as boys of 8 to 17. There should be an intermediate reformatory, on one of the prison farms. I could take 200 or 300 men out of the penitentiary and the older ones at Boonville and make them go straight without a wall or a pistol."

Stories, Amusing and Otherwise, Served Fresh From National Capital

Harding, Hughes and Next Nomination; the President's Week-Ends; Our Congressmen in China.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
Wyatt Building.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.

THE conference diminishes, but does not snuff out the corridor and dinner table gossip on matters purely political. Fire nor earthquake could do that in Washington. Speculation and conjecture, the whispered inside story, the hunt for subtleties underneath the obvious—these make up a mental pabulum without which your typical Washingtonian would fall into intellectual decay.

A current example of the food on which the Capital thrives is the talk that is going on about Harding's being, of his own choice, a one-term President. It springs apparently out of thin air; for the President has not said or done anything to indicate that he will depart from precedent and willingly step down after a single term. On the contrary, he appears to be enjoying the job. He is not enjoying it so keenly as he once did, for a reason later to be detailed, but that fact does not argue any lessening of his sense of the dignity and the power of the office.

Possibly it is from a certain humility in the President that the gossip proceeds. This attitude toward the Presidency is not an affectation; it is genuine and it forms one of Harding's most attractive qualities. He gives the impression sometimes that he is still wondering at the remarkable turn of fortune that gave him the Republican nomination—gave him, as he said then, a full house on a three-card draw—and landed him in the White House. It is recalled that Harding had almost to be forced into the race for the nomination and remained in the race with a reluctance that vanished only toward the end. He distrusted his own powers. He was happy in the Senate and he consulted only his own wishes he would have remained there indefinitely.

Those who base a prediction that the President will not run again on the reluctance he showed in 1920 fail to take account of the tremendous influence that Mrs. Harding has had upon his career, from the days of his early struggles to get the Marion Star above the horizon down to the present moment. Mrs. Harding's vote was cast against taking the line of least resistance in 1920. It is wholly unlikely that she would vote for voluntar ysurrender of the capital prize in American public life.

Anything may happen between now and 1924, but a present reading of the horoscope shows a President a candidate for re-election.

What of Hughes? Concurrently with the gossip that Harding will retire runs the forecast that Hughes will be the Republican presidential nominee. This, too, is mere speculation, based on nothing more tangible than the immense popular acclaim given the Hughes proposal to reduce the naval armaments. The old guard in the Senate would be prickly with fright if they thought Hughes was on the cards for 1924. Hughes is not their kind of man. They are not frightened yet—but watch for efforts to throw a wet blanket over any Hughes movement that may develop.

Already there has been the palpable effort in that direction in the form of a widely circulated news story to the general effect that Harding's, not Hughes', was the "Master Mind" that conceived and gave substance to the battleship scrapping plan. The story bore all the earmarks of having been "inspired." From what source it came, whether from close personal friends of the President or from other elements that might be interested in squelching a Hughes boom, is not known. The story caused a lot of talk in Washington, and drew from the White House the disclaimer that the Hughes plan was the work not of any one man, but of all the American delegation working in concert. There would be "glory enough for all," it was said, if the conference succeeded.

As to the President and his job:

He wears the mantle of office with grace and dignity. It is becoming to him. But at times it becomes a trifle irksome. The President is not a thin-skinned man; he has been a newspaper publisher and a public official long enough not to resent proper criticism of his public activities. But criticism accusing him of taking too much "time off" has stung. He cannot reply to it directly, for that would not be a "becoming" thing to do.

His friends reply that the thrusts at the President, because of his golf playing and his frequent week-end outings are unmerited and unjust; that, as a matter of fact, he takes his work with him when he goes out of town and, in general, works longer hours probably than nine-tenths of his critics.

Persons who have seen the President lately have remarked in him an apparent let-down from the snap and buoyancy of his earlier presidential manner. The cares of office seem to be weighing on him. Like Wilson before him, Harding is feeling the isolation the presidency imposes.

In the section under the rear gallery at the third plenary session of the arms conference sat a man who seemed to be deeply engrossed in an inscription on his cane. He remained but a short time. He was Robert Lansing, former Secretary of State, who less than three years ago sat at the peace table in Paris as a Commissioner of the United States.

Opera glasses were trained quite as much on Mrs. Wellington Koo, in one of the boxes, as on the delegates. Mrs. Koo, the wife of one of the Chinese delegates, wears her European clothes with a style and dash that are noteworthy even in Washington at the present moment. Some say she is the best gowned woman at the conference. Mrs. Koo has spent most of her life away from China, her husband having long been in the diplomatic service. The crowd at the plenary conference session did not fail to notice the interesting contrast between Mrs. Koo and Mrs. Alfred Sze, who wore, according to her custom, a modified Chinese costume of blouse and skirt. Incidentally, there is no love lost between Koo, now Ambassador to Great Britain, and Sze, Ambassador in Washington, and also a conference delegate. They are political opponents at home and are said to have clashed when members of China's delegation to the Paris conference.

Speaking of the Chinese, here's an old story in point of time, but one that is probably new to American readers. The conference has brought it out and given it our up-to-date angle.

In the summer of 1920, right after the Democratic national convention at San Francisco, a party of Congressmen took a joy ride to the Orient, paying a nominal charge for passage and meals, on a Government transport. They spent three weeks in China and were everywhere royally and expensively entertained by the Chinese Government. All bills were paid by the Government except the hotel bills during the time spent in Pekin.

Only by courtesy could it be called a "congressional" party, for by the time the tourists got to China there were less than 10 Congressmen in the crowd. The rest of the 65 or 70 making the trip were the wives and children of Congressmen, secretaries, wives of secretaries and so on. The Chinese were surprised to see so many women and children in a party which had come with the announced intention of getting first-hand information about China for the enlightenment of the American Congress.

Their hospitality, however, was unbounded. They took the whole crowd in a special train from Shanghai to Pekin, entertained them for two days at a famous summer resort, gave them side trips here and there over the country, presented them with costly silks; in short, wined and dined and feted them in every way possible. The trip was not an "official" one, being taken purely on the initiative of the Congressmen themselves, but the Chinese naturally made no fine drawn distinction between a Congressman in his official and in his personal capacity. They saw only that a party of Government officials had come to visit their country, and they laid themselves out to be courteous. At ever yplace the special train stopped the party was given an official welcome. Thousands of people took part in demonstrations for the Americans.

There were several incidents that must have puzzled the hosts. For instance, a private car was attached to the special train for the use of Senator Harris of Georgia. Representative Porter of Pennsylvania thought that he, as chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, was entitled to the same consideration as a Senator. So another private car had to be provided for him. Then there was the matter of free distribution of silks. The Chinese designated a store and told the Americans to go to it and make their own selections. They assumed, of course, that the exponents of western civilization would use a certain amount of restraint. The assumption proved to be wrong. According to stories which have filtered back—from Americans, not Chinese—the party almost stripped the place. Thereafter the Chinese parceled out souvenirs themselves.

The Congressman in the crowd with the best justification for being there was L. C. Dyer of St. Louis. Dyer had a bill pending in Congress dealing with the subject of trade with China, and he took occasion to gather some information. Some of the others were Harris and Porter; they of the private cars; Goodall of Maine, a millionaire maker of Palm Beach cloth, who had already announced that he wouldn't return to Congress; Campbell of Pennsylvania; Randall of California, a prohibitionist, who said he was going to make all China dry; and Vare of Pennsylvania, one of the Republican bosses of Philadelphia. Senator Sterling of South Dakota was with the party when it reached China, but turned back at Shanghai.

The Chinese Government spent $150,000 on the party in three weeks and at the end of that time turned it over to the Japanese with—to quote an American who saw the performance—"a sigh of relief."

Now for the new angle. Some of the 125 Chinese here for the conference left their country with the impression that in return for the hospitality which China had shown the Congressmen, their wives, children and attaches, at a cost of $150,000, the American Government would pay the expenses of the conference-bound Chinese from San Francisco onward. When they landed in America they found they had cherished a delusion. In consequence of having had to pay their own way, a lot of Chinese on the staff of the delegation are broke.

The "heathen Chinee" may be peculiar to Americans and likewise there are some things about Americans, especially American Congressmen, that the Oriental mind fails to grasp.

RECRUITING BILL CAUSES DISCUSSION IN FRANCE

Measure Intended to Provide 100,000 Men as Framework for Army.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The Government's recruiting bill to raise a nucleus of professional soldiers as the stabilizer of a smaller conscripted army under the 18 months' service plan was filed today with the Army Commission of the Chamber of Deputies. This bill is still indefinite in its terms, but its advocates consider it capable of producing 100,000 men who will form the framework of a big army in case of general mobilization.

The bill, coupled with Premier Briand's declaration at Washington of a reduction in the army, has resulted in much discussion among military men and parliamentarians.

It is agreed that the country demands 18 months' service, and this probably will be adopted, but there are wide differences of opinion as to what force France should maintain. This doubtless will take a foremost place in the debates in the Chamber and Senate after M. Briand returns to Paris.

Estimate of 170,000 Yearly.

Eighteen months' service, it is estimated by the members of the army commission of the Chamber, would maintain a force of a quarter of a million men. This is based on the fact that there are about 300,000 men of military age annually, from which number could be drafted about 170,000. Some think, however, that there would be such pressure in time of peace for the most liberal exemptions that each class would yield only 110,000 to 120,000 men. From these, therefore, could be raised an army of a class and a half, amounting to 165,000 to 180,000.

In addition, contingents could be recruited from among professional soldiers, as well as Moroccans, Senegalese and Orientals.

Members of the commission assert that the plans of the military authorities call for a total force approaching 500,000 men. But there is an evident desire by the Chamber to reduce the army to the smallest number compatible with the country's safety.

18 Months' Service Planned.

M. Barthou, the War Minister, announced in the Chamber Thursday that reduction of service to 18 months was dependent upon the passage of the physical training bill and upon the recruiting and formation of African units. This physical training bill provides obligatory military training from 16 years of age until conscription. The new recruiting bill approved by the Cabinet Thursday authorizes the enlistment of former soldiers up to the age of 36 years, for two years and upwards. What inducement will be offered to attract professional soldiers has not been determined. The whole matter of the reorganization of the army is still pending.

The three years' service law has not yet been abrogated, but the Government, with Parliament's approval, is applying the two-year plan. The army, numbering now about 500,000, is being reduced by the evacuation of Cicilia, from which place a shipload of the class of 1919 has returned. Others will return as shipping becomes available.

METHOD OF GIVING PULITZER PRIZES BEING ARRANGED

Columbia University Announces Plans for Awards for Best Work in Several Lines.

CANDIDATES TO BE NAMED IN WRITING

New Prize for Best Cartoon Offered—Scholarships to Go to Art and Music Students.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—National competition for prizes worth many thousands of dollars, in art, letters, journalism ond music is being arranged by Columbia University which today announced plans for the award of the Pulitzer prizes and scholarships established at Columbia by the will of the late Joseph Pulitzer. From a wide field of candidates, embracing reporter and playwright, historian and artist, novelist and musician, juries will pick, among other outstanding productions, the best play, the best novel, the best cartoon and the best piece of newspaper work accomplished by an American journal during the year.

These awards, Secretary Frank D. Fackenthal stated, will be publicly made by the Columbia trustees at the next commencement. Candidates for any of the Pulitzer prizes must be nominated in writing on or before Feb. 1, 1922. Rivalry promises to be keener this year than ever before. It was further stated that the purposes of Mr. Pulitzer were being realized by a growing tendency to exalt American standards in art and letters.

Prizes to Be Awarded.

Following are the prizes in letters to be awarded after a nomination by a jury or juries chosen by the National Institute of Arts and Letters:

For the American novel published during the year which shall best present the wholesome atmosphere of American life and the highest standard of American manners and manhood, $1000.

An original American play, performed in New York, which shall best represent the educational value and power of the stage in raising the standard of good morals, good taste and good manners, $1000.

The best book of the year on the history of the United States will bring a reward of $2000.

For the best American biography teaching patriotism and unselfish services to the people, illustrated by an eminent example, excluding, as too, obvious, the names of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, $1000.

For the best volume of verse published during the year by an American author, $1000.

Last year Edith Wharton's "The Age of Innocence" won the prize for the best novel; Zona Gale's "Miss Lulu Bett" received the award for the best play; Admiral Sims' "The Victory at Sea" for the best history; Edward Bok's "The Americanization of Edward Bok" was adjudged the best biography.

In journalism the nomination will be made by a jury or juries chosen from the members of the administrative board of the Columbia School of Journalism and from the teaching staff of the school. A gold medal costing $500 will be awarded for the most disinterested and meritorious public service rendered by any American newspaper during the year. The Boston Post received this prize last year. Previous winners were the New York Times and the Milwaukee Journal.

For the best example of a reporter's work during the year, the test being strict accuracy, terseness, the accomplishment of some public good commanding public attention and respect, $1000 will be awarded.

Last year the award was made to Louis Seibold for an interview with President Wilson published in the New York World on June 18, 1920. Previous winners were Harold A. Littledale o' the New York Evening Post, Herbert Bayard Swope of the New York World and John J. Leary Jr., also of the World.

For the best cartoon published in any American newspaper during the year, the determining qualities being that the cartoon shall embody an idea made clearly apparent, shall show good drawing and striking pictorial effect, and shall be helpful to some commendable cause of public importance, $500 will be awarded. This prize is new. It takes the place of the prize previously offered for the best and most suggestive paper on the future development and improvement of the School of Journalism.

A prize of $1000 again will be offered for the best history of the services rendered to the public by the American press during the preceding year. The only time this award has been made was in 1918, when the winners were Minna Lewinson and Henry Beetle Hough, members of the School of Journalism, class of 1918.

For the best editorial article written during the year, the test of excellence being clearness of style, moral purpose, sound reasoning and power to influence public opinion in the right direction, $500 will be awarded. This prize has been awarded to in the past to Harvey E. Newbranch of the Omaha Evening World-Herald, Frank H. Simonds of the New York Tribune and Henry Watterson of the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Scholarships Are Provided.

Three traveling scholarships, valued at $1500 each, will be awarded on the nomination of the teaching staff of the school of journalism to graduates of the Columbia School of Journalism who shall have passed their examinations with the highest honor and are otherwise most deserving, to enable each of them to spend a year in Europe, to study the social, political, and moral conditions of the people, and the character and principles of the European press. Competition for these scholarships is open to other colleges of the university.

A scholarship will be awarded to the student of music in America who may be deemed the most talented and deserving in order that he may continue his studies with the advantage of European instruction on the nomination of a jury composed of members of the teaching staff of the department of music in Columbia and of the teaching staff of the institute of musical art.

Another scholarship will go to an art student in America, who shall be certified as the most promising and deserving by the National Academy of Design.

PARLEY TO DECIDE ON PEKIN REGIME'S POWER TO RULE

Whether Government Can Manage Its Affairs Big Factor in Settling Problem of China.

BY CHARLES MERZ,
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1921.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26. — The arms conference is guessing at China's age. Further progress now waits on its decision whether or not the Pekin Government is to be rated an adult, mature enough to manage at least a limited portion of its own affairs, mature enough for more sovereignty than it now enjoys. This was apparent in today's deliberations of the Committee on Pacific and Far Eastern Questions.

The committee had two matters before it for discussion. It debated the question of foreign postoffices in China and referred that question to a subcommittee. It discussed China's argument for abolition of "extra territoriality" and referred that question also to a subcommittee. Before the next step is taken in either one of the matters the committee must come to some decision concerning the competency of the Pekin Government.

Little is said in today's official communique about the character of the day's discussion. Regarding the first of the two questions it is simply stated that "it was the sense of the committee that there should be a withdrawal of the foreign postoffices in China as soon as it appeared that conditions warranted."

It is believed, however, that in the debate the American delegation, speaking through Senator Lodge, was in favor of a more or less immediate withdrawal and that opposition to this proposal came from certain foreign delegations.

Resolution Up Monday.

As a result of this failure to agree upon anything more definite, the committee hit upon the phrase, "as soon as it appeared that conditions warranted. Something less sketchy than this was desired by the American and Chinese delegations, however, and so the subcommittee, composed of Lodge, Sir Auckland Geddes, Viviani, Dr. Sze and Hanihara, met this afternoon and drew up a resolution for presentation to the full committee on Monday.

No communique was issued and no statement made following the subcommittee's session. Gut it is understood that without favoring immediate withdrawal, Lodge and his colleagues have attempted to agree on something more definite than a vague proviso about "when conditions warrant."

It is not a momentous issue from any point of view. $t has the exaggerated importance of something seen through a pair of opera glasses, for the reason that it is one of the first specific Far Eastern questions which the conference has taken up. Abolition of the 150 foreign postoffices now existing in China will neither greatly increase the Chinese Government's revenues not reunite the country, nor put an end to foreign intrigue, nor deal a death blow to the bandit-governors.

Opposition Due to Sentiment.

What importance there is in the question of foreign postoffices is sentimental rather than practical. With any pretension to national sovereignty, China connot let such foreign interference develop without protest. And though foreign postoffices represent only superficial issue, from any practical point of view, it is worth noting that to the man in the street, in China, the abolition of this type of foreign interference would seem a gallant victory.

The coolie and the rickshaw man know very little about international finance and diplomacy. But they pass one of these foreign postoffices every day, and it rubs them the wrong way.

Though there is difference of opinion about the abolition of these offices, this question by no means presents such fertile opportunities for disagreement as that other issue which the conference discussed today—"extraterritoriality."

Problem of Extraterritoriality.

"Extraterritoriality," as those dispatches have explained, means the immunity of the foreigner from Chinese law and his right to trial by a foreign court and under foreign law. The Chinese delegation wants this privilege abrogated on the ground that it infringes on China's sovereign rights, produces confusion in the courts and furnishes the foreigner with an argument for not paying local taxes.

But the Chinese delegation does not ask for the abolition of "extraterritoriality" all at once. It asks only for ultimate abolition with a "progressive modification" in the meantime.

No program for this "progressive modification" has been presented by the Chinese, and in Washington there is considerable debate about the manner in which it might be accomplished. Those who were in Paris at the peace conference, however, or those who followed the Paris deliberations closely, will recall that this same question of "extraterritoriality" was then raised by Chinese spokesmen.

On that occasion what the Chinese meant by "progressive modification" was this: The Powers were at once to agree upon two innovations. In the first place, in every "mixed case" in which a foreigner was the plaintiff and a Chinese was the defendant or the accused, the trial was to be held by a Chinese court without the interference of any foreign consular officer in the procedure or the judgment.

In the second place, the Powers were to agree that warrants could be executed within any concession or building belonging to a foreigner, without preliminary examination by any foreign officer. The point of this proposal was to close the foreign concession as a place of refuge for the Chinese fugitive from justice.

It has naturally been an intolerable nuisance for the Chinese courts to have such a fugitive able to step over the line under a foreign flag and, so long as he stayed there, remain as secure from all pursuit as if he had fled to Bombay or the Argentine.

Proposition at Versailles.

These were the two planks in a program of "progressive modification" which the Chinese proposed at Paris, and it may be said that they are likely to be put before the present conference, with the same end in view It is possible that a third suggestion will be offered—the proposal to abolish "extraterritoriality" gradually in one local district after another, after it develops that in this district or that one Chinese courts and the codification of Chinese law have progressed far enough to insure justice for the foreigner.

These are the concrete propositions which the Chinese delegation is likely to submit to the special sub-committee on "extraterritoriality" at its first meeting. Meantime the larger committee will be prepared to receive reports from the several investigating sub-committees it has recently created. The reports on post offices and the tariff will come in first. One of them, at least, will be ready in time for the next session.

NEW ERA HAS COME, SAY WOMEN ADVISERS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Conviction that the Washington conference "has marked a new era in diplomacy" is expressed by the four women members of the Advisory Committee to the American delegation in a letter addressed to Lady Astor, member of the British House of Commons, made public tonight.

The letter, which is signed by Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Mrs. Katherine Philips Edson, Mrs. Elinor Franklin Egan and Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, is in reply to a letter from Lady Astor transmitting the views of the women of England, as expressed through 87 national organizations, with respect to the armament conference.

"This conference has marked a new era in diplomacy," the letter written by the Advisory Committee women says. "We now realize that here in America, as in other countries, public opinion has found its new way to power and is affecting the course of statesmen who once could settle everything behind closed doors.

"We Have Learned Need of Peace."

"We do not agree with these people who have little faith in the outcome of this conference, who believe that nations having been selfish and having settled their disputes by war, must therefore continue to do so. These people are filled with suspicions and call for more armaments and increasing preparations for war, begetting a spirit of fear and distrust.

"We believe with you that great war has taugh us the nee dof peace and that no nation can stand by itself. We believe that if we want our type of civilization and culture to endure and to progress that this fierce race for armament must cease. We all know that another world war would be more swift, more extensive, more destructive than the last, and might well be the beginning of the war degeneration of our race.

"The conference was called together three weeks ago. Already the decks have been cleared for action, all side issues brushed away and a concrete, far-reaching proposal for immediate limitation of naval armaments has been advanced by the United States and accepted in principle by the two other great naval Powers, England and Japan.

"Now must come the vast and stupendous work of adjusting the details of these principles, of little by little moving the suspicions, the hatreds, the fears of age-long existence. Nearly a million of the best of your manhood, as 50,000 of ours, fell fighting on the field of battle. * * * It is for us to see that the task is finished."

After cutting her the thief took the purse and ran away. He was pursued by several men but escaped in an alley after dropping the purse.

BRITAIN TO SEND WARSHIP TO ASIA MINOR IF NEED ARISES

Note So Informs France; Terms and Purpose of Treaty With Turk Nationalists Asked for.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Baron Hardinge, British Ambassador to France, today informed the Government that Great Britain was considering the sending of a warship to the Asia Minor port of Mersina for the defense of British interests if the need should arise. Great Britain, it is declared, will act in this matter in agreement with France.

Denials from London of a reported concentration of British troops at Cyprus and debarkation of these troops at Mersina and elsewhere, says a semi-official note on the subject, have reduced the matter to its true proportions, Great Britain having shown that the attitude of France not only is correct, but courteously friendly.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Onswering the Fernch note on the treaty recently negotiated by France with the Turkish Nationalist Government at Angora, to which Great Britain has taken exceptions, a British note was handed last night to the French Ambassador here, reiterating, it is understood, the British expressions of desire for a furtheir explanation of the terms and purpose of the separate pact made by France with the Government of Mustapha Kemal Pasha.

Fokker Exhibited in Paris.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Severe criticism has been aroused by the exhibition of a Fokker airplane at the aviation salon, it being held that it is too early after the German army of Fokkers flew over and bombarded Paris for a machine made by the same man to be admitted to France for show purposes. The plane will be seized under a writ granted to Esnault Pelterie, a French airplane builder, on the ground of infringement of the "Broom-Handle" system of direction. The name "Fokker" has already been removed from the machine.

SAYS GERMANY CANNOT PAY REPARATIONS DUE IN JANUARY

Manager of Former Bayer Company Says Chemical Industry Has Cut Production in Half.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Privy Councillor Duisberg, general manager of the Farben Fabriken, formerly the Friedrich Bayer Co., speaking today before representatives of the German Chemical Industry, said it would be impossible for Germany, from her own resources, to make her reparations payments, due next January and February.

Should their Ruhr Basin eventually be occupied, he said, the results would not be so fatal as frequently supposed. "We have already had to endure worse," he added.

A systematic effort has been made, he declared, to destroy the competitive power of the German chemical industry by representatives "interested in the industries of other countries, which we compelled to develop their own dye manufacture when the war severed them from the German supply."

Denying that the German chemical industry constituted a war menace, Herr Duisberg asserted that, due to overproduction in the chemical production and the waning consumption in Germany, the industry this year had fallen to half its former peacetime production, and that exportations had been seriously hampered by tariffs designed to protect the infant industries of other countries.

Should this campaign cripple or destroy the German industry, the speaker declared, Germany's ability to meet her reparations payments would be gravely impaired and "a large percentage of our population condemned to hunger." He expressed the hope that an economic understanding throughout the world would eventually be reached.

That Army Mule May Swing a Wicked Hoof, but He Couldn't Kick in With a Victory Over Navy

Touchdown in Second Quarter Gives Navy 7-0 Victory Over Army

Barchet Circles End for 20 Yards and Starts Midshipmen on Advance Which Brings Only Score of Annual Battle Between Service Elevens.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The battleships of the Navy eleven plowed through the heavy seas of the Polo grounds today, battered the Army's fortifications in the rain, captured the annual service football classic by a score of 7 to 0 and took the lead in the series. Since 1890 the Navy has won 12 times and the Army, 11.

The Navy scrapped its airplanes upon discovering early in the game that dreadnoughts were more effective for making progress against the enemy. It made an attack with line plunges and end runs that resulted in an advance of 53 yards to a touchdown early in the second period.

Barchet was the stellar battle cruiser in the progress toward the Army line and, indeed, througout the game. From his own 44-yard line he circled end on a kick formation for 20 yards. Conroy and Barchet then alternated in carrying the ball off tackle from a tandem formation until the former smashed through for a touchdown, followed by King's goal. The progress to the goal comprised 13 plays, during which the Navy earned first down four times.

Outrushed and outplayed in the line, the Army threatened to tie up the game late in the last quarter as the result of the brilliant work of French. Receiving a punt on his own 40-yard line, he ran it back 10 yards and followed this up with a 28-yard run around his right end with interference provided by a double shift of the backs to the right before the ball was passed. In two more plays he had put the ball ten yards away from the Navy's goal line, but was thrown for a five-yard loss in attempting to repeat.

Intercepted Pass Costly.

Here Hamilton, a substitute back, intercepted a forward pass, one of five which the Army tried in vain during the game, and the threat of a tie score was averted. Hamilton was tackled as he grabbed the ball eight yards from his own goal, and although the Navy was penalized for offside, it soon kicked out of danger just before the game ended.

The Navy had the Army on the defensive most of the game, twice having the ball within Army's 25-yard line in the second period, only to lose it. Once it was held for downs, and on the other occasion lost the ball on a fumble. Most of the play in the third and fourth periods was in the midfield mud, but the Navy was nearer toward its opponents' goal.

The Army had one real scoring opportunity aside from that which was lost by the interception of a forward pass in the fourth period.

This was in the first quarter, when right after the kickoff it carried the ball from its own 26-yard line 41 yards to the Navy 33-yard line, where the Navy solved the mystery of the double hop of the Army's backs and compelled the Army to resort to an attempt to score by a goal from placement. Mulligan failed. Standing on the 42-yard line he booted the ball straight, but it went under the cross bar.

The advance that culminated in this attempt was the only exhibition of offensive power by the Army until the flash toward the end of the game. Smythe started the thrills on the first lineup of the game by a 20-yard end run from kick formation. French made one smash that gained nine yards and another that earned 11, but these gains were partly offset by a 15-yard penalty for holding.

Forward Passes Fail.

On its own 20-yard line after the touchback due to Mulligan's unsuccessful kick from placement, the Navy had its first chance of the game to display its heralded offensive strength which enabled it to go through the season with only one defeat. After 13 plays, which earned first down four times and included a 20-yard run by Barchet, it had the ball 22 yards from the Army goal as the first period ended, only to lose it on downs shortly after the start of the second quarter. Two forward passes in Navy's own territory were grounded during this attack and the Navy stuck mostly thereafter to straight football involving tackle play from tendem and a deceptive criss-cross.

On the kickoff, after the Navy's touchdown, Barchet ran the ball back 42 yards to midfield. Five more plays, including a 15-yard run by Conroy and one of nine yards by Koehler, put the ball on the Army's 20-yard line. Three plays made no progress and an attempt at a placement goal ended in loss of the slippery ball on a fumble.

Battle in Midfield.

Illustrative of the midfield stalemate in the third period, was the fact that the Navy had the ball in enemy territory only twice. One advance to the Army 45-yard line that included a 15-yard end punt by Barchet was nullified by a penalty for holding and on another occasion the Navy lost the ball on a fumble at the Army 43-yard line. The Army did not have the ball within the Navy's 45-yard line until a poor Navy punt gave it the ball 41 yards from the Navy goal as the period ended. The chance to profit thereby was lost by an Army fumble as the fourth period began.

Barchet made one smash of 14 yards in the last quarter, but the Army's defense was stiffened by substitutes. The Navy never got beyond the Army's 40-yard line in this quarter, nor did the Army reach a similar position in Navy territory until the sensational end-game threat to score.

The Navy earned first down 13 times compared with the Army's five. The Navy attempted four forward passes. One gained five yards. The others were grounded. The Army tried five forward passes. Four were grounded and on. intercepted.

Muddy Field Stopped French and Reduced Army's Attacking Power, Roper Writes

By W. W. (Bill) Roper.

Head Coach, Princeton.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The Navy, in much better physical condition than I anticipated, defeated the Army today by one touchdown, made in the second quarter. The game was played under horrible conditions and under the circumstances was remarkably free from fumbling.

The Navy outclassed the Army in the first half, gaining through the line and around the ends repeatedly. The defensive play in this half in the Army line was very poor. The line seemed to lack charge and the tackles and ends played entirely too wide. I didn't like the position of the Army tackles as they stood on the defense. The left tackle would have his right foot forward, and his back almost to the play. Both the Army tackles were boxed time and again and the ends were entirely too wide to give the proper support. The Navy offense is distinctly of the close order variety and I was rather astonished at the ground given by the Army forwards.

The Navy showed nothing in the way of offensive formations except that the quarterback handled the ball on some plays. This was a distinct departure from Folwell's general plan of attack shown up to the present time. The Navy gained most on a drive outside of its own left tackle. Barchet was particularly effective in this play. Neither side was able to complete a forward pass and the Navy only tried a couple and the Army but a few more. Forward passing was at a distinct disadvantage because of the condition of the ball.

The Army offense was very different from anything it had shown before. Much to my astonishment the soldiers had eliminated the quarterback in handling the ball and showed a brand-new style of attack utterly foreign to Army traditions and Daly's previous coaching. The Army backs lined up in close formation either right or left and at a signal stepped over two or three paces and then came to a stop. There would then be a further shift with the tackle and end on the line shifting at the same time. The scheme of the Army attack was to outflank the Navy defense with French in a position to carry the ball around the end. In the first half the Army never got its offensive play started, due to a large measure to the condition of the field. It seemed to me that the Army backs on their end runs would cut in too close in the early part of the game, but of course the condition of the ground was mainly responsible. French is distinctly a wide end runner.

Weather Hampered French.

It is a great pity it wasn't a clear day. The Army had built its hopes on a wide open end running attack and had the elements permitted I feel sure French would have gotten away on several good runs as he is always dangerous even under adverse conditions.

The Navy had little, if any, kicking game and had to hold the ball as long as possible. The Army gained on every exchange of punts. French placed his kicks beautifully, and this superiority was a big help in holding down the Navy attack which showed a lot of concentrated power in the first half.

At the beginning of the second half conditions changed entirely. The Army line was a decided contrast to its play in the beginning of the game. The tackles played in closer and charged harder. The Army forwards repeatedly got behind the line of scrimmage and stopped the Navy backs before they got going. On the other hand, the Navy seemed to lose some of its drive and was not as dangerous or as aggressive.

Until late in the last period the Army backs seemed to have a great deal of difficulty in getting around the end. French opened up with a beautiful run around the Navy left end in this last drive which carried the ball deep into the Navy's territory. For a couple of minutes it appeared that the Army was on its way to a score. On third down Army tried a forward pass about 10 or 12 yards from the goal, which was recovered by a Navy man, and with it went the chance to score.

"Break" Helps the Navy.

Capt. Larson, who had been a tower of strength to his team all afternoon had to leave the game at this point and a substitute center, as was to be expected, had a great deal of difficulty in getting the ball off. The first play resulted in a bad pass and the Navy then suffered a five-yard penalty which made it kick from behind the goal line. Right here the Army had a hard "break." The pass for the kick was none too accurate and the Navy fullback was only standing about six yards behind the line of scrimmage. As he was right in the middle of the goal post, this possibly accounted for his failure to get back any further. The Army forwards were all around him when he kicked the ball and it was blocked. Instead of bounding back behind the goal line, it shot off to the left and down the field 10 or 15 yards where it was recovered by the Navy left end, and a moment afterward time was called.

The offense shown by the Army is certainly an interesting departure from what the team was expected to use, and it does seem a bit hard that the day of all days when the Soldiers needed a dry field conditions were just the reverse. French is a great back and it is too bad he didn't have a dry field. I consider him easily the star of the day.

New Cue Champion, and Diagrams of History-Making Plays in Recent Tourney

SCHAEFER'S RUN OF 318 IN MAKING RECORD AVERAGE OF 200 AGAINST COCHRAN - NOV. 19 - '21 SCORE 400 - 0
318
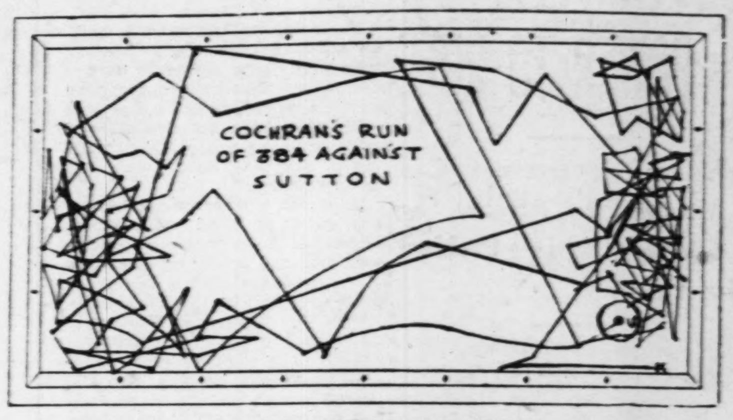
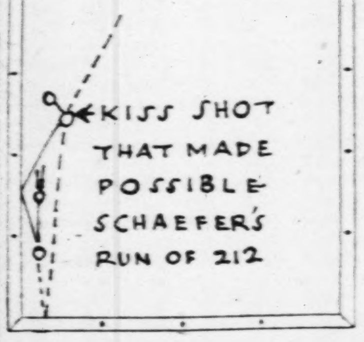
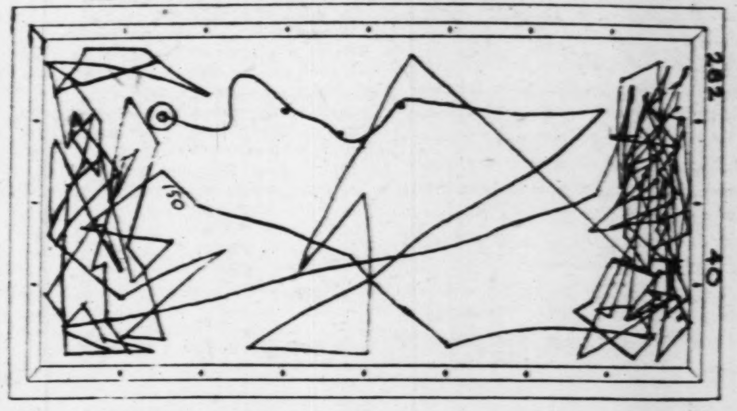
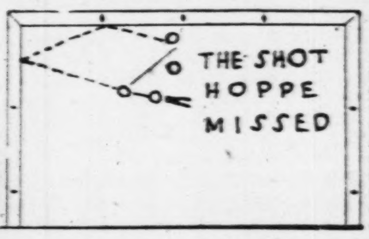
175





JACOB SCHAEFER





THE above diagrams shed interesting sidelights on the recent 18.2 balkline billiard tournament held at Chicago. Two of them show what good fortune attended the present champion.

In winning his title game of 500 points, Schaefer made one run of 212. Yet, had it not been for a lucky kiss-shot, as shown in the diagram, Schaefer's run might have ended at 31 instead of 212, which would have left Hoppe with a good lead. The lucky shot was a position draw. Schaefer's cue ball was about to miss the second object ball, when along came the first object ball and bumped the cue ball into a score, leaving all three balls in perfect position.

The other fortunate shot for Schaefer was Hoppe's muff on an easy draw shot. He miscued in the middle of a run, with the balls in seemingly perfect control. The miscue left the balls set up for Schaefer, who proceeded to collect a big cluster.

The other diagrams show the course of the cue ball during various runs made in the tournament. They show clearly that the great players of the game make practically all of their points at the ends of the table. This system gives the cueist a table only one diamond in width, and the end of the ordinary table for its length.

The start of each run is indicated by the cue ball and the letter S.

HARD LINES.

THE "Midday" was approaching fast,
As through the linotype there passed,
At seven minutes after nine,
This stirring and prophetic line,
shrdlushrduishrdlushrdlu

The writer scratched his puzzled dome
Then made correction for the "Home."
When next he saw his little skit
It read as follows, or to wit:
etaoin etaoin

"How come!" exclaimed the hapless wight,
"I'll have to change it for the "Night."
So, suiting action to the word,
He made the change and this occurred:
cmfwyp cmfwyp

And when the "City" had appeared
Once more he found his stuff was queered.
"Try, try again," the young man said,
When these immortal lines he read:
vbgkqj vbgkqj vbgkqj vbgkqj vbgkqj
xzfi*?⅛xzfi*?⅛xzfi*?⅛xzfi*⅛xz*⅛

But when the "Final" went to press
It brought an end to his distress.
The words appeared correctly spelled,
Whereat triumphantly he yelled
HROADLIN!

HARVARD TO USE NEW SYSTEM WITH TICKETS

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 26.—There will be a new deal in the allotment of seats for the next Yale-Harvard football game in the Stadium, two years hence, the Harvard Athletic Association announced today. One detail of the changes proposed will give freshmen and sophomores precedence over graduates and university officers. Although nominally entitled to two tickets each, these lower classmen this year were cut to one each because of the large number of graduate applications.

Rules established in 1910 for ticket distribution have been found inadequate to meet changed conditions, and a new committee is to be appointed to draw up a revised plan. It is no longer possible to assure all Harvard men of seats for themselves and at least one companion, and the new order of things will take this fact into account.

ST. JAMES IS WINNER OVER DE PAUL, 14 TO 7

HAVERSPORT, Miss., Nov. 26.—Two touchdowns scored in the first period by St. James High School of this city, were enough to defeat the De Paul Academy eleven of Chicago here this afternoon, 14 to 7.

Burke of De Paul fumbled the first kickoff of the game, which Holloway recovered for St. James, and Moynihan, the local quarterback, carried the ball over. The second tally came a few minutes later when Tanian blocked a De Paul punt and Duckley made the score.

A series of forward passes in the third period gave the visitors a touchdown.

HOLY CROSS EASILY BEATS BOSTON COLLEGE

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 26.—Holy Cross exacted the heavy toll of six touchdowns from Boston College in the annual football meeting between the two rivals at Braves' Field this afternoon. The score was 41 to 9. A field made heavy with rain proved little hindrance to the Holy Cross back field, which carried out a fast running attack mixed with a system of forward passes that the Maroon and Gold could not halt.

McMillin Stars in Charity Contest

Centre Quarterback Makes Run of 86 Yards for a Touchdown.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 26.—"Bo" McMillin, Centre College, all-American quarterback, and "Eddie" Casey, Harvard, all-American halfback, upheld their gridiron traditions today by piloting to a 16 to 0 victory, a "rainbow" team composed of former star gridiron players from a score of universities and colleges, over a "starbuck" team composed of Ohio State University stars at Ohio Field. Players donated their services and the proceeds went to local charity.

The little Centre quarterback, his goal in danger, circled the end, wriggled his way through opposing tackles across the field, and, in an 86-yard dash, planted the oval behind the goal. This wonderful play, which came in the third quarter, had been preceded in the first quarter by another touchdown by Casey, who received a forward pass and dashed 37 yards to the goal.

Goal was kicked after each touchdown and the other two points were made on a safety.

In the "starbuck" line were Harley, Sinchcomb and others of Ohio State gridiron fame.

The game was played in a sea of mud.

SIX NAVY STARS WILL GRADUATE NEXT JUNE

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 26.—Navy's triumph over Army in the annual football struggle today was received with wild enthusiasm among local fans, who stayed at home largely because they were unable to get admission cards, and by people of the town generally. The result puts Navy one game in the lead, the Middies' victory last year having made the series even at 11 each, and one game resulted in a tie.

The Middies will suffer the heaviest losses in years by graduation next June, as six members of the team belong to the first class.

Those who will graduate are: Capt. Larsen, center; Frawley, right guard; King and Wiedern, tackles, and Cruise and Koehler, backs.

Nebraska Invited to Play Game With Coast Football Eleven Jan. 2

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 26.

THE Nebraska Cornhuskers, Missouri Valley conference football champions, whose most noteworthy achievement during the season was their victory over Pittsburg have been invited to play a post-season game, Monday, Jan. 2, in San Francisco. The invitation was received today by Director of Athletics Fred W. Luehring by wire from J. J. Lane on behalf of the Native Sons Athletic Club.

Piker Basketball Practice to Begin

Squad to Report at Francis Gymnasium Tomorrow to Coach Applegran.

The Washington University basketball squad will hold its first practice tomorrow afternoon at Francis Gymnasium. Coach Applegran, who was assistant football coach, will direct the men this year. He is backed by a splendid record, both as player and coach, having been all-Western guard while he was at Illinois.

This year's Varsity is captained by Tommy Thompson, forward. It is doubtful if Kraehe, last year's captain, will join the squad, for Ollie wishes to devote more time to his studies. Thumser will be back to fill the position of center or forward. Dean Leffler, who is one of the best guards in the Valley, has been out practicing for the last two weeks and is on edge for the season's campaign. Other members of last year's team who are certain to report include O'Brien, Berry, Linnemeyer, De Bolt and McMahan.

Plenty of new material for the Varsity, both from last year's freshman squad and other sources, will be available. The following are expected to report for practice: Schnaus, Long, Thym, Russell, Cantwell, Shanley and Winkleman. Johnson and Manning will be eligible the second semester, and with the possible return of Henry Hurd and Jack Minner, there should be plenty of competition for places on the Varsity.

This is really the first year that the champion team of the Missouri Valley will actually be determined, as each university will be matched with all the others.

The schedule follows:

AT HOME.	ABROAD.
Jan. 21—Grinnell.	Jan. 7—Nebraska.
Feb. 3—Oklahoma.	Jan. 9—Missouri.
Feb. 4—Kansas Aggies.	Jan. 14—Kansas Aggies.

Feb. 15—Missouri.	March 2—Ames.
Feb. 22—Kansas U.	March 3—Grinnell.
Feb. 25—Nebraska.	March 4—Drake.

The majority of the home games fall on Friday and Saturday ,though the Missouri game comes on Wednesday.

Knox kicked both goals and added three points to his team's score with a field goal from the 30-yard line. The other Des Moines touchdown came on straight football.

Following the two touchdowns and the field goal by Des Moines, the Indians took the aggressive and put over their only score, a touchdown on a forward pass from McLemore to Levi, who carried it over. McLemore kicked goal. Ideal weather favored the players.

Schaefer Became 'Money' Player in Billiard Academy

New Cue Champion Accustomed to Having Large Sums Bet on His Play.

HOPPE NEEDS NO PITY

Defeated Champion Still Holds Two Titles and May Try for Two Others.

By John E. Wray.

Willie Hoppe, 15 years on the 18.2 balkline billiard throne, has been toppled. Jake Schaefer, son of the wizard, pushed him off the [illegible] seat, in sensational matches at Chicago, during the international tourney last week.

Naturally one's sympathy goes out to the old hero. Honors sufficiently recompense the new one, but it is not every day that a man 15 years in the saddle is unseated.

But shed no tears for William F. He still has "his." He will continue to get his. He may even turn the tables on his conqueror. For this is the situation today:

Hoppe lost the 18.2 balkline title; but he has already challenged the winner and will play him before April 1, in a long match—a better chance, Hoppe thinks.

Hoppe, despite the defeat, is still world's champion at 18.1 balkline billiards, a much more difficult game than 18.2, known as the "champion's game."

Willie is also champion at [illegible], a title he won in tournament several years ago.

So why spill the salt tear for William, who, after all, is only [illegible] od, is still a double champion and has a chance to regain the only title he lacks to complete his glory.

May Seek Three-Cushion Honors.

There is still another chance for Hoppe, although it is out of his usual line and is one in which his greatest gain will be merely a little more limelight. This is a match with August Kieckhefer, three-cushion champion, to be played around Jan. 1, so it is said. The match is in the making and may go through.

Hoppe does not specialize at this game, but he can equal them at it. He holds the world's record of [illegible] consecutive three-cushion points made in a match with Charles Peterson. He also has made some phenomenal averages, but these have been discounted because it was said that he was opposing a player who was not using the proper "safety" precautions.

Hoppe's downfall was a terrible blow to his associate, Charles Peterson, and to his manager, R. B. Benjamin, both of whom have been accustomed to believe Hoppe invincible—as indeed almost every other follower of billiards has believed. There has been a tendency to apologize for Hoppe, on the score of previous indisposition. The fact remains that almost up to the first day of the tourney Peterson and Benjamin expressed the view that Hoppe was getting better than ever in his life, and he could not lose.

Peterson, who knows Hoppe as his A. B. C's, said that Schaefer had progressed very rapidly in the last year, whereas Hoppe had only gained a small percentage. Hoppe, he said, was probably 5 per cent better than before and Schaefer 25 per cent better than when he last opposed Hoppe in a tournament game.

Schaefer Takes Seven-League Strides.

Schaefer's improvement has been manifest. He defated Horemans in long matches so decisively and by such wonderful margins as to rouse the admiration of all the billiard world. It only remained for him to attain the same level to be a factor in the international championship. He more than maintained it—and he had to.

Heretofore all of Hoppe's opponents have been over-awed by the champion's reputation. This time Schaefer was not. He displayed the gameness that once made his father great and won his pater the cognomen "wizard of the cue."

Schaefer received stern schooling while playing in Eddie Graney's billiard "academy" at San Francisco before the law closed that institution. There a player had to show everything under all kinds of trying conditions. Accustomed in the Graney resort to have big sums wagered on him, his experience made him a great "money" player. That was the sort of stuff he manifested in the recent championship.

"Young Jake" is not a rugged fellow. He has not the temperament of Hoppe. He is frail and inclined to be sickly as was his father. He may lack the physique to maintain his prestige.

In fact, he is coming into his title at a time when kingly crowns of all descriptions, especially those relating to billiards, are especially insecure. Today Cochran, Horemans, Conti, and Hoppe constitute real menaces to his championship. And he will have to prove his right to the throne twice before next June in challenge matches.

raehe Only Piker Player To Gain Place on Valley's All-Star Football Eleven aska, Conference Champion, Gains Four Places on First Team, Oklahoma and Missouri Two Each, and Washington, Kansas and Ames One Each.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 26.

An all-star Missouri Valley Conference football eleven, representing a posium of the views of conference coaches, officials, athletic directors newspaper writers, includes one member of the Washington University team. Oliver Kraehe, captain and tackle on the Pikeway machine, d a place as tackle on the mythical all-conference eleven.

The first team selection of all- from the Missouri Valley con- ce for the season of 1921 comes to being a representative than any all-star eleven of years. Of the nine schools in valley organization, six are rep- ted on the first squad.

Nebraska gained four places, Ok- ma and Missouri two each, and hington, Kansas and Ames one The Kansas Aggies, landing no er on the first team, placed on the second and two on the , finishing second to Nebraska number of positions on the three -star elevens selected. Nebraska ded 10 men on the three squads Oklahoma followed the Aggies t with a quartet. Missouri, shington and Drake gained three itions each.

To a degree surprising and dem- rative of the worth of the sys- used in selecting these elevens three squads reflect the keen- of the valley race.

Ten Places to Nebraskans.

Nebraska, of course, was the bell of the valley. Nebraska holds r places on the first team, four the second, two on the third. No would be disposed to quarrel the ardent Cornhusker rooter, would take the entire Nebraska n for his all valley team. So 's that.

Missouri, Washington and Drake h holds three places on the three ens. Missouri beat both Wash- on and Drake, but a single chdown brought victory in each . Against Washington, Missouri d in the closing minutes of the . Against Drake Missouri ed the Iowa goal line on the play of the game and was ugh for the afternoon.

The three teams, therefore, seem t as evenly matched as the star selections would indicate. souri's superiority may be nted to in the fact that the Ti- landed two first eleven posi- , Washington taking only one Drake failing to enter the select .

rsh, the big Oklahoma end, a corking running mate for son, not so great a player as the Nebraskan, but an athlete who would do a double credit to any team.

Herbert Blumer, Missouri captain and tackle, is an ideal type of football player. He is an aggressive, breaking-through tackle, of the type that smashes and spills opposing plays before they gain headway.

Kraehe a Fine Tackle.

He has a fine running mate in Kraehe, the Washington leader, a tower of strength on offense and a great defensive tackle. He is a smart football player, able to tell his mates what to do and show them how to do it.

In Jones, Kansas captain, and Pucelik, Nebraska, the guards are above the usual run of Valley guards. Of Jones, a Valley athletic director whose team met defeat at the hands of Kansas, said. "He played like an All-American guard."

And what a center has the first team in "Polly" Wallace, the captain of the Iowa Aggies of Ames. A wonderful roving center, making more tackles than "Swede" Carlson of Kansas was wont to make. In only one game this season did Wallace rise to his real heights. That was in the Missouri game, the first half of which saw the Ames center making four out of five tackles for his team, playing as great an individual defensive game as any football man ever played.

Wallace an Ideal Type.

Wallace was injured in the last half of the Missouri game and never again was up to his real standard. But he finished the season playing the full time against Nebraska. Wallace will go down in Valley football history as one of the great Valley centers of all time. A player of ideal sportsmanship, clean all the way, a fine tackler, but devoid of the kneeing, leg-twisting rough tactics that so many football players seem to deem a part of the game, thereby lowering their own moral football code and besmirching the game they should protect. A man can be a great football player without the little petty stuff. "Polly" Wallace is proof enough of that. And "Polly" Wallace had to have all the qualifications mentioned to beat Bunker of Missouri out of the first team job. For Bunker of Missouri is just another "Polly" Wallace.

The first team backfield lists Preston, Nebraska, at quarter; Hartley Nebraska, at full, and Lewis, Missouri, and Hill, Oklahoma, in the halfback positions. This quartet of backs easily could adapt itself to the quarterback passing style or the direct pass.

Preston is a fine quarter, great in returning punts, a good field leader, but no greater than "Chuck" Lewis of Missouri in either. Hill, the 180-pound Oklahoma back, possesses everything a halfback is supposed to have. He is a wicked line plunger, his low structured architecture making him a hard man to get hold of and a hard man to stop. Through a broken field, shifting, dodging, changing pace, what a pair of backs Lewis and Hill would make on the same squad!

And with Hartley to drive with them! The entire Nebraska back field this year was a fiercely driving hard-to-bring-down bunch and Hartley was the equal of any of them.

A Team of Great Man Power.

What a team this first squad is! In the first place, it has the weight and the speed to back up the weight—the man power is there. Secondly, it so happens that five of the eleven men are Valley captains, signifying the fine quality of leadership, the caliber of first team brain power and a high standard of sportsmanship. How a great coach would revel in such material!

Soccer Secretary Has Disappeared

Scholefield's Accounts Irregular and He Is Removed From Office.

From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Mystery surrounds the disappearance of James E. Scholefield, secretary of the United States Football Association, the governing soccer body, who has been missing since Nov. 15. He was today removed from office "for cause," according to an announcement promulgated over the signature of U. S. F. A. President George Healey of Detroit. Thomas W. Cahill of this city, who until his retirement at the annual meeting at Philadelphia last spring served as honorary secretary of the association from its incorporation in 1913, returned to the office as secretary pro tem in the emergency.

Scholefield was one of the leading referees of the country and continued actively as an arbiter after taking office as secretary of the U. S. F. A. He was chief of staff of American Soccer Referees this season and recently oficiated at the Harvard-Princeton match.

Sending word he was indisposed, Scholefield failed to appear at his office, 126 Nassau street, this city, after Monday of last week. The following day he was seen in Union Hill, Weehawken and Norfilk, N. J., carrying a traveling bag. His wife and infant son arrived in New York several days ago from their home in Bristol, Conn., to search for him.

Investigation of Scholefield's affairs by a special committee appointed by President Healey resulted in his formal removal from office today. U. S. F. A. Treasurer William S. Haddock of Pittsburg has advised national soccer headquarters the secretary's financial accounts are irregular. Scholefield was heavily bonded and thus the national organization is protected against loss.

At the time of his appointment by the national commission of the U. S. F. A. Scholefield was president of the Connecticut State Football Association, one of the 26 bodies affiliated with the national association. He was born in Lancashire, England, and refereed in leading English association football leagues for several years before coming to this country.

St. Leo Protest To Be Taken Up

Western Cup Committee Officials to Hold Meeting Here This Morning.

The St. Leo-Gillespie (Ill.) second round United States Football Association cup game will come up for discussion again this morning when officials of the Western division of the U. S. F. A. meet at the Statler Hotel. Drawings for the third round of competition will be made and various protests decided.

The St. Leos protested the victory of the Gillespie team by a score of 4 goals to 3 on three points. The management of the Municipal entry claims that the field was not inclosed; and that Gillespie used two ineligible players.

One of the athletes in question is John Reid. In the lineup given out by Manager Phillipin, Reid was at left halfback. However, George Klosterman, St. Leo manager, claims John Reid did not play.

J. G. Barrett, chairman of the Western Committee, wired Phillipin of the charges and asked him, to produce the man who played left halfback at the meeting here tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

In all Barrett stated that there were seven protests to decide.

According to the Western officials one of the decisions of the local committee has been appealed to the appeals body of the National Challenge Cup Competition. This is in the case of the Firestones of Akron against the Magyars of Cleveland.

The meeting tomorrow starts at 9 o'clock.

NEW GOLF OFFICIALS WILL HAVE TO HUSTLE

When the new United States Golf Association officials take the reins of ofice after the annual meeting next January, they will have to break records to hold the pace set by those in charge during the past year. It speaks well for Howard F. Whitney, the president, and his associates, that with the exception of August there has been an executive meeting every month.

What is more, the committeemen all had their special duties, one looking aprticularly after the selection of championship courses, another the eligibility list, another seeing that balls and clubs came within the requirements, and so on.

Probably no official worked harder and more unselfishly than Whitney, and it is therefore with regret that followers of the game learn of his refusal to serve another year.

Lestern Kern of the University of Pittsburg, was second, and Louis Hocht, Falk Memorial, third.

Dartmouth Uses Forward Pass to Trim Georgia 7-0

Heave of 50 Yards by Robertson Results in Only Score of Game.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 26.—Dartmouth triumphed over the Georgia University gridiron warriors, 7 to 0, today in a post season game, which was fiercely fought, but cleanly played from the kick-off to the final whistle. The Green team outplayed the Georgia Bulldogs in straight football, but were never able to sustain their attack long enough to reach the goal by rushing.

The only score came when on its own 37-yard line and with the second period almost over, the Big Green team resorted to the aerial attack. With one minute to go, and on the fourth down, Calder shot the ball back to Robertson, who [illegible] it straight and true down the field almost 50 yards. Lynch, a fleet end, was on the spot and snatched the pigskin out of the air and raced the remaining 20 yards to the goal and victory. Neidlinger kicked the goal and the scoring was over.

The game was played under a leaden sky, with a cold misty rain, but this had no effect upon enthusiasm. The Georgia student body in full was down from Athens to cheer its team.

Georgia Weak on Attack.

The Georgia team was mighty on defense, but weak compared to Dartmouth on attack, for the Green team gained 197 yards on straight football and made 10 first downs to Georgia's 156 yards and seven first downs. Dartmouth was penalized six times for off-side and once for holding, and Georgia incurred two off-side penalties and one for holding.

Fumbles were more frequent by the visitors and twice Smith playing safety, fumbled punts which Day of Georgia pounced upon. In the second period such a play gave Georgia the ball on Dartmouth's 20-yard line, but the Dartmouth line held. A forward pass failed at a crucial moment and Georgia's chance was lost. Dartmouth obtained the oval on Georgia's 20-yard line in a similar manner, but met the same fate. Other attempts at scoring included two failures at drop kicks from about the 35-yard line by Randall of Georgia and one by Robertson of Dartmouth.

Randall Gains Consistently.

Despite his ineffectual kicks, Randall was one of the stars of the game, gaining more consistently than any other player. Fletcher relieving Randall, who was slightly injured also gained ground at times. Calder, Burke, Edwards and Smith were the chief ground gainers for the New Hampshire team and Robertson playing tackle, was a power on defense.

Dartmouth succeeded in one out of a dozen forward passes while Georgia failed in all 10 tried. Powerful defense on each side made the game one of frequent punting, for Dartmouth could gain only at times and Georgia's gains were chiefly in the third period, when the Bulldogs had things much their own way on attack, save for lack of the final punch to sweep across the goal.

Lineup and summary.

Dartmouth (7)	Position.	Georgia (0)

WISCONSIN WILL LOSE SIX FOOTBALL REGULARS

Coach Richards of Wisconsin developed one of the most powerful elevens in the conference the past season, and although some of the best members are graduating this year he has a wealth of material with which to put an even stronger machine on the gridiron next year. Six first-string men will be lost to the team, Capt. Sundt, Elliott, Gould, Bunge, Brader and Woods.

Regulars who are eligible for another year form a powerful nucleus for the team. They will be headed by Rollie Williams, elected captain of the 1922 squad, star halfback and quarter, who will most likely direct his team at left half. Gibson will be available for quarter or half.

Tebell has done consistent work at right end in every game and will be a valuable man at the position. Burmur, at present a tackle, is the most likely candidate for Bunge's place at center. Hohefeld probably will be shifted from a guard to a tackle, and Christianson remain at his guard. The strongest possibilities are Carlson and Taft for end; Perse, center; Crozier, fullback, and Witten, a particularly strong bidder for half.

The greatest asset to be looked for from the list of ineligibles is Shorty Barr. His ability was sorely needed on this season's team, and will prove even more valuable next fall.

Cincinnati U. After Neale.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 26.—Boyd Chambers, athletic director of the University of Cincinnati, will not coach the football eleven next year, but will remain as athletic director. It is said overtures for the position of coach will be made to Earle Neale, outfielder of the Cincinnati National League baseball club, who has had great success this season at Washington and Jefferson College.

Notre Dame Has Best Forward Pass Attack in Country, Roper Writes

Princeton Coach Says He Is Sure the Winning Football Combinations Will Be the Teams That Can Pass and Know When to Use the Play Effectively.

By W. W. (Bill) Roper.
Head Princeton Coach.
(Copyright, 1921.)

Several years ago, I saw Notre Dame play its first game in the East. It was at West Point. I don't recollect the exact score; it was somewhere in the thirties in favor of the Westerners. West Point didn't have a look-in, while the Notre Dame ends and backs had a field day. I have never seen better forward passing than Notre Dame showed that day against the Army. There was a player by the name of Rockne at end on the Notre Dame team. He seemed able to catch a forward pass anywhere and at any time.

This same Rockne is now athletic director and football coach at Notre Dame, and his team this year has the best forward passing attack in the country, to my way of thinking, or at least as good as any that I have seen. This is a high compliment, I know, to pay any team in the West—where the forward pass has been developed to a high degree of efficiency, and where they throw and catch a football like a baseball. But Notre Dame's record justifies everything I have said.

The team has gone through a very successful season. It has lost one game, to the University of Iowa, probably the best team in the West. They are the only team to beat Nebraska. Notre Dame came East a few weeks ago for a series of two games. They played West Point on a Saturday and the following Tuesday met Rutgers at the Polo Grounds in New York. They won both games rather easily by big scores.

Two Victories in Four Days.

It is no small feat to travel 22 hours on the train and play two football games in four days and win both of them by big scores in the bargain. The real reason why Notre Dame could get away with both games so handily was because of its style of play. Had the Notre Dame attack consisted of a close rushing game inside of tackle, the job would have been much more difficult.

I remember back in 1900, Princeton tried playing two games four days apart. We played Cornell on Saturday and on the following Tuesday, election day, the Tigers met Columbia in New York. Before the second game was over, we had to call for re-enforcements from the stands, and get two or three of the members of the scrub, who happened to be watching the game, to hurriedly put on some extra suits and fill in. Every man on the Princeton team was completely done up and practically through for the season. Of course, this was in the good old days of bulldogs and beef, push and pull. But even then, making all allowance for changed conditions, there are very few teams that can play two games in four days and not show the effects of it.

Style Does Not Overtax Men.

The beauty about the forward pass and a forward passing game is that it does not overtax the endurance of the players. The more I see of the passing game, the more I feel sure the winning combinations in the future will be the teams that can pass and know when to use it effectively.

I know a good many coaches and players will disagree with me, especially those in the East who believe in the traditional close rushing game. But statistics will bear me out, I know. I venture to say twice as much ground has been gained this year by the use of the forward pass as by plays inside of tackle.

I was talking to an old Yale man the other day about the Princeton-Yale game. After complimenting my team on its game fight under great disadvantages, he said "he didn't think Princeton had much of an offense." "Why, your attack consisted mostly of forward passes," he remarked. I had to plead guilty to this indictment. Personally, I don't care how a team of mine gains ground as long as it keeps going. In the last analysis, it is the yardage that counts.

I admit no team can go into a game against a rival even appreciably as good and hope to win by forward passing alone. There must, of course, be a combination of open and closed play, and it must be so adjusted that the defense does not not know what to expect.

Long Pass More Dangerous.

This is the beauty of the Notre Dame attack, which is built on a long forward pass down the field, but which is supplemented by a very effective running game from the same formation. Rockne combines a long and short pass with the rushing game. The long pass is the more dangerous. If it is recovered, it is sure to be a long gain. If it is not completed only a down is lost. While if it is recovered by the other side it is just as good as a punt. The team trying the long pass has everything to win and little or nothing to lose. Notre Dame works on this theory. Nothing makes a defense more uneasy than the expectation of a long pass down field. The backs and ends always have a tendency to drop back with the receivers. If this is the case, a short quick pass near the line of scrimmage will always work. This is another pet play of Notre Dame and the team has gained nearly as much ground from short passes as it has from the long ones.

The combination of a long and short pass works very well together. You may guard against one, but it is difficult to guard against both. There are so many different possibilities and so many different zones the ball can be thrown in.

Passer Must Be Protected.

The real success of any forward passing attack lies in affording the passer adequate protection in making the pass. The more time the passer gets the more effective the play becomes. If the man throwing the ball is hurried by the defense, the pass is very apt to go wild and there is a great deal more possibility of its being recovered by the opponents, as the thrower in his anxiety to get the ball off, thinks of very little else. In the Harvard-Princeton game, Gilroy intercepted one pass and nearly got another, and in both instances the Harvard man throwing the ball was hurried in making his pass to such an extent that he had little if any time to watch where he was throwing the ball.

One of the strongest points in the Notre Dame forward passing attack consists in the protection given the passer. Rockne has worked this important detail out to a fine point. With the result that the man throwing the ball has plenty of time to pick his man and throw it to him.

The Notre Dame center handles the ball in a rather unusual way and makes all his passes with one hand. I have never seen this done by any other team. The center keeps his other hand on the ground and uses it to charge with. There is no doubt this helps his offensive charge and does not seem to handicap his passing.

5 Soldan Players Given Places on All-Star Eleven

Cleveland and McKinley Get Two, While Central and Yeatman Are Awarded One.

1921 All-Star High School Football Team

Name	Position	School
Paule	L. E.	Cleveland
Levy	L. T.	Soldan
Albin	L. G.	Soldan
Fisher	C.	Central
Hanley	R. G.	McKinley
Cincinola	R. T.	Yeatman
Hirsch (Capt.)	R. E.	Soldan
Eichler	Q. B.	Soldan
Jestes	L. H.	McKinley
Plank	R. H.	Cleveland
Dunham	F. B.	Soldan

Soldan High School, winner of the Interscholastic League championship, was awarded five places on the all-star high school mythical eleven for the season of 1921. Cleveland and McKinley each received two places and Central and Yeatman one each.

Because of the reluctance of several coaches to give an opinion on the merits of the various players, the selections were made from statements of seven officials, who handled the high school contests, and close followers of the preparatory gridiron activities.

Two of the men selected for the squad, received unanimous indorsement. Capt. Fred Fisher, the giant center of Central, overshadowed all rivals for the pivot position. This is a great accomplishment, due to the fact that all of the teams possessed good center rushers. Weilbacher of Cleveland, Moore of Yeatman, Fisk of Soldan and Collins of McKinley are all above average, but were completely outplayed when faced by Fisher.

Dunham Best Fullback.

Dunham, fullback of Soldan, leads all the way on the fullback job. Added to his dynamic line smashing is good kicking and passing, together with speed. Williams of Cleveland is the nearest approach to Dunham, but cannot enter the same class.

Captain Syl Hirsch of Soldan, a great defensive end, and Paule, the Cleveland end and back, are awarded the flank positions. Both men can be shifted to the backfield and can carry the ball well from an end formation. Goeddal of Cleveland was out of the game too much to receive consideration.

Levy, the Soldan tackle, who played a very consistent game throughout the year is placed at left tackle. This boy made more open field tackles than any of his teammates at Soldan. Right tackle was hotly disputed but finally given to Cincinola of Yeatman despite the fact that the scrappy Italian missed two contests. The selectors agreed that he had displayed superiority over his opponents in the games in which he took part.

Albin and Hanley Guards.

The guards were placed in care of Albin of Soldan at left and Hanley the McKinley center, guard and tackle at right. Albin played steadily throughout the year and was a large factor in breaking holes for the West End backfield. Hanley quit the game in midseason but returned and took part in three games at tackle, center and guard. He did all [illegible] the crimson school, bolstered the weak McKinley line greatly and although playing with a weak team displayed excellent football.

There was no hesitancy in picking the field generalship. Eichler, the starry quarterback of Soldan, was given the verdict over Erwin Fischer, the Central signal caller. A claim that Fischer did not have the opportunity to shine, with Eichler guiding a winner, [illegible] was countered by Eichler's scoring and [illegible] carrying [illegible].

Plank of Cleveland was placed at right halfback. The strength of this lad lays in his speed while on the offensive combined with a brilliant defense play. The other half position was awarded to Jestes of McKinley. Although [illegible] season [illegible] material in the crimson school, Jestes carried the [illegible] as a regular [illegible] an open field runner, and good kicking ability.

Hirsch Given Captaincy.

Due to his successful season as leader of the champion Soldan eleven, Hirsch was made captain over Fischer of Central and Jestes of McKinley, leaders of their respective schools. A large number of [illegible] considered [illegible] tors and a great difference of opinion [illegible] position receiving the greatest number of indorsements.

The majority of the selectors believe that the 1921 Interscholastic was considerably weaker in [illegible] position than in former years.

Watkins and Alexander Tie.

In the sixth handicap tournament of the St. Louis Police Revolver Club, C. R. Watkins and Howard Alexander tied for the first place with a score of 177½ points out of a possible 200. W. F. Greene [illegible] the scratch man, William Spencer, [illegible] position, with a score of 160 points. Following are the scores for the last week:

C. Watkins	20.75	177½

Last Call Sounds For Mike Gibbons' Ring Title Hopes

At the Age of 34, Famous Middleweight Is Now Making Final Drive for Crown.

AGE BEGINNING TO TELL

Knockdowns in Last Two Fights Bespeak Approach of Clever Boxer's Decline.

Heisner Will Referee Gibbons-Ratner Match; Leo Heyman in Hospital

LEO HEYMAN, president of the Angelica Physical Culture Club, was taken to St. Luke's Hospital, yesterday, to undergo treatment. Heyman suffered fainting spells in his office at Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, yesterday, and was ordered to take a rest at once, by his physician. Heyman's handling of the club in connection with his regular business, overtaxed him, it was stated.

Harry Sharpe, referee, will act as president of the club until Heyman recovers. Walter Heisner, who retired earlier this year as referee, has consented to act for Sharpe as third man at the Mike Gibbons-Augie Ratner bout, Dec. 5.

By John E. Wray.

Middle-age is closing in on the greatest middleweight boxer of the country, but still the title eludes his grasp. Every day makes it more and more improbable that Michael J. Gibbons will win the crown to which his great skill and all-ground ability for nearly a decade have entitled him.

Mike is scheduled to box here Dec. 5 against a coming young 158-pounder, Augie Ratner, a boy who won his spurs in the interservice games held at London in 1918 and who has since lived up to the reputation he established at that time. For this reason his recent record will be of interest to local fans.

Mike is now 34 years of age, and is going on toward his thirty-fifth lap. This is the prime of life for the average man, but it is nearing the sere and yellow for the "box-fighter." A few years ago Mike was in his heyday. He flattened one of the most highly press-agented fighters in the world, Young Ahearn, and he gave away his life blood in avoirdupois to meet the cleverest welterweight that ever wielded a glove—Packy McFarland—gaining a draw despite the handicap. He was so far in advance of the Frank Klauses, Jimmy Clabbys and Eddie McGoortys of his day that he could not even get a title match. When Al McCoy won the honors on a fluke there was no getting Al into the ring with Mike. And the same went for all the rest of the title-holders.

Then Mike, sore, quit the ring. Now he has been pulled back again, at the fag end of his physical time, and asked to show the same stuff that made him a wonder man in his day.

Two Foes Floored Mike.

If you believe the results of recent fights, he has not been doing so well. He has won many bouts on points, against men of ordinary class. But the other day he tackled a tough customer in "Happy" Littleton. He was knocked down cleanly. He came back and made a good finish. Last Friday night he was knocked down twice by Tommy Robson.

All of which makes one wonder if Mike is going to last long enough to get a chance with Johnny Wilson (Panica) for the title. Wilson is considered very ordinary. If Mike and he met now, over 15 rounds, Mike yet might win the title that he has so long coveted—that so long has eluded him.

O'Dowd vs. Flanagan, Next.

Several bouts are on the iron for St. Louis fans. The first feature will be held next Wednesday at the First Regiment Armory when Eddie O'Dowd of Columbus and Patsy Flannagan, the local bantam, will battle 12 rounds, 118 pounds, under the auspices of the Business Men's Athletic Association.

O'Dowd is a first rate boxer. His defeat of Jimmy Murphy here classified him among the best boys of his weight to appear here in recent years. Recently he outpointed Babe Asher and Young Sharkey and gained a draw with Abe Goldstein.

Grub Whalen, the local boxer, has been matched to meet Bobby Anderson, the Duquoin (Ill.) slugger, in the eight-round semi-windup.

Ward to Box Lawler.

The Centennial Athletic Club is planning to exhibit Jack Lawler against Bobby Ward of St. Paul, Dec. 14. Ward is now in the title hunt. He is 27 years old and has never made much of a stir but they say he is willing and will stir up a battle with any opponent. Lawler's style is well known here.

Amateur Show Dec. 15.

Freddie Gilmaster's amateur bouts at the South Broadway have attracted so much attention that he is announcing his third show for Dec. 15. All classes will be filled, if applicants show up, and a special class will be arranged for three boxers whose minor injuries kept them out of the finals of the last tourney. Eddie Reith and Frank Neikert are two of the boys who are expected to make a strong bid in the 118-pound special class.

A heavyweight amateur is wanted to pair off with Ed Arent of the South Broadway Athletic Club. He won his last fight without an effort. Kingdon Belmont, the Collinsville professional, has two or three boys of merit he thinks may be able to make good.

Football Has Improved Since Day of Flying Wedge, Edgren Writes

In the "Good Old Game" the Object Was to Incapacitate as Many Members of the Opposing Team as Possible—Mass Plays Ground the Enemy Under Foot.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1921.)

FOOTBALL, as a game of skill, has advanced rapidly during the past year or two. Football as a game of brute strength, bulk, weight and hammering force, disappeared years ago.

The "good old game" was mourned for a long time by those who had played it, but there is no denying the fact that the new game is more exciting for both spectators and players, just as hot a competition, and less dangerous than the old style of play.

Twenty-five years ago the football that had to be played by giants was at its height. Yale had such men as Heffelfinger, Cross and Hickok.

"Heff" was a bigger and stronger man than Jess Willard. As tall as Jess, he was half a foot wider across the shoulders, perfectly proportioned, and in spite of his great bulk and weight was wiry and lean muscled, carrying no fat at all.

I think he was the biggest and strongest man I ever saw in any athletic sport.

Hickok was about 6 feet 2 and weighed 220 pounds, but he could run a hundred yards in 10 2-5 seconds, which made him one of the fastest big men I remember on a football field. Harry Cross was about 6 feet 4, and weighed 230 pounds, being a smaller Heffelfinger in strength and proportion. These three men, besides being remarkably skilful and speedy, were about as husky a center and guard combination as any college could boast.

Michigan had the Hooper brothers at center and guard, 240 and 230 pounds of lean muscle.

Princeton had, among many big men, Bucky Hall—a 6 foot 6 giant, built like a Hercules, and "Big Bill" Edwards, since famous in New York's political history.

School Teams Were Heavy.

Even the high school teams in those days were often made up of phenomenally big men.

The Oakland High School in California had the heaviest and most powerful scholastic line in the United States in the early nineties, with Lou Blake, 260 pounds, as center and Oliver and Wilbur as guards, 220 and 215 pounds, respectively.

Of the men I have mentioned many were also track and field athletes. Hickok being intercollegiate champion for years with hammer and shot, Cross a close second, Heffelfinger a hammer thrower, Bucky Hall, a great shot putter; Wilbur better than 47 feet, with the 16-pound shot, and so good a boxer that if he had taken up boxing professionally he could have given Jim Jeffries a run for the championship.

The Flying Wedge.

Butte, Mont., had a football team with a 220-pound average line. These men, or most of them, played in the day of the "flying wedge"—a football formation which has been prohibited because its crushing force caused many injuries and deaths on the gridiron. The abolition of the flying wedge started the ruling out of mass plays, piling up and roughing generally, and brought about the modern style of football with all its forward passing and open play.

In the flying wedge the attacking team fell into a wedge formation as the ball was put into play, the man with the ball slipping into a protracted position within the entering point of the wedge. The whole wedge then swept forward on the run, the men locked together, crushing down and trampling over all opposition.

For myself, I'll never forget the sense of power in attacking at guard position in the flying wedge, the momentary check as the opposing line flung itself at the point and sides of the wedge, and the surging forward as the press from behind drove the point of the wedge on and over the opposing defense, grinding it down and under foot.

Won't forget, either, the sensation of being ground down under the flying wedge. It cost me two dislocated shoulders and a dislocated knee—mere incidents in the "good old game."

Mass Play Was Effective.

There was also, following the abolition of the flying wedge, some mass play that was hardly less effective. The object of the play, in those "good old days," frequently was to cripple or disable as many of the opposing team's best men as possible. I played guard or center occasionally on a rather famous Western team. The instructions of our captain just before we went out on the field against an invading championship combination were characteristic.

"Boys," he said, "of course you know we don't want any rough stuff and I don't want any of you to begin it. But I hear that certain men of ours are to be laid out (naming them). If that starts, you know what to do."

In that game eight men from each team were carried from the field, two from each team taken to the city hospital with broken bones. Yea, Bo! They were rough old days! To show how seriously the game was taken by the players, the invaders, who had whipped everything in moleskins, from Chicago to the Pacific, losing by a point, went before a notary public after the game and took oath that they wouldn't cut their hair until they revenged their defeat. And they came down to play us next year with their hair over their shoulders, like a lot of wild Indians. And lost again, incidentally. As I never saw them again I don't know whether or not they've cut their hair to this day.

Most Anything Went.

In the good old days it was customary, when an opposing runner was downed with the ball, to pile on him and crush him as much as possible before the referee's whistle blew. If a heel of a knee could be planted in his anatomy where it would be most effective, so much the better.

The instant a man was tackled the whole opposing team ran toward the spot at full speed, man after man hurling himself into the mass on top of the fallen runner. It was amusing to see a belated back or end come tearing in, last man, and leap through the air to "pile on."

Slugging, too, was one of the fine arts. Wherever the referee's eye could not spy it it was considered perfectly legitimate to wallop a crouching opposing line man under the chin with elbow or fist. A good counter punch was an asset in any line, and more good uppercuts have been struck on the old-time gridirons than ever were landed in the ring.

Buck Wilbur, "the Slugger."

Mike Murphy, the great old-time trainer of Yale and later Pennsylvania, told me about a wild man from the West, one "Buck" Wilbur, who appeared at Yale and tried out for the team.

"He could put the shot 45 feet, high jump over six feet, and lick any man I ever saw," said Mike. "He was the greatest allround athlete I ever knew and would have been the greatest fullback Yale ever had if I could have taken the fight out of him and made him play football.

"But he would slug. He sat on the junior fence once and whipped 10 men who came to put him off. He laid out so many of my men on the football field that I thought I'd either have to tame him or drop him.

"Talking to him did no good. He'd been playing up in the Northwest, where slugging went, and he couldn't help using his fists whenever he got excited and in close quarters. I had a man then I thought could tame anything on legs—one of the greatest guards Yale ever had. I went to him and explained the thing.

"'This fellow Wilbur will be a valuable man if I can cure him of roughing,' I said. 'I want you to do it. Teach him a lesson. I'll put him opposite you today and I want you to slug him and knock his head off. Never mind the elbow; use your fist.'

"He agreed. I put Wilbur out on the end, where there'd be plenty of room, and my man opposite him. Play started. My man walloped Wilbur, and Wilbur walloped my man—once. My man dropped, knocked out cold. He was on the hospital list and couldn't play for two weeks. I had to drop the other fellow. He'd have crippled my whole team."

And as Mike finished his story he shook his head regretfully. "If I could have cured that fellow of slugging he would have been a great man for Yale," he said.

Fought Down Opposition.

Open play and the spirit of modern football have changed all that. When the Rules Committee first met to cut the mass plays out of football and make it a faster and more open game, they met with strenuous opposition and criticism from the old players. They were accused of trying to kill American football and make it as mild and ladylike as English rugby. But they went ahead. They had to. Legislatures would have prohibited football play in another year, because of the number of fatalities and serious accidents.

But the new football is a better game. Old football, with its endless mass play, endless hammering at the line, endless piling on, heavy, crushing, pushing slowly up and down the field, was far less interesting than today's game.

Whittier Willing to Play.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 26.—Esek Perry, coach of the Whittier College football team, holders of the Southern California title, said today Whittier would be glad to play the Lombard College team, Dec. 15.

TEE, FAIRWAY AND GREEN BY "CHICK" EVANS

The Hall of Fame and Bobby Jones.

(Copyright, 1921.)

The Southland, which has long craved an amateur golf championship, was bitterly disappointed when Bobby Jones failed to emerge from the heap at St. Louis last September. There was widespread feeling that this was Bobby's year.

Bobby Jones first flashed across the horizon at the Merion championship in 1916. His achievement there startled the country. At the time Bobby was but 14 years old and, of course, not expected to qualify, but he began by getting in the headlines on the first day of the qualifying round and he continued his flashlight career well into the middle of the week. In the morning qualifying round Bobby made a fine 74 that even an 89 in the afternoon could not spoil.

When the news of this 74 was flashed over the coutry, golfers unacquainted with the Merion course considered it one of those strangely automatic performances by which comparatively ordinary players astonish the world occasionally in one round and fall down ignominiously in the next.

Debut of Bobby Jones.

For his first match round Bobby drew Eben Byers, a former national champion, noted for his match-playing skill. Then even at Merion, where golfers should have known that the course did not easily lend itself to flash-in-the-pan performance his fine playing in the qualifying round was discounted, and it was freely predicted that Tuesday night would see the youngster hopelessly beaten by the seasoned player. But these prophets did not know Bobby Jones or his game. The boy had the advantage from the start, and although Byers cut down the big early lead the lad won. Of course, it can always be said that a player of the same skill but less temperamental than Byers might have defeated the Georgian, but the fact stands out and the assertion cannot be proved.

The next day Bobby gave another exhibition of his ability when he defeated F. W. Dyer, the brilliant Montclair player. In this match young Jones was 5 down on the first six holes, but the end of the match found him again the victor.

In the third match round the little Georgian met Robert Gardner, the national champion, and although Gardner was one down at noon after a fluctuating morning round, I do not think anyone acquainted with the games of both ever doubted Gardner's victory over the 36-hole route.

Record Was Phenomenal.

The whole Merion record of the little schoolboy seemed phenomenal. Before it occurred everyone would have said that it was impossible. It was not supposed that so young a boy could hold his own on the long game, but the longest driver in the country could not outdistance Bobby on the average at Merion. The truth of the matter is that Bobby was no slight stripling, but was solidly built, and weighed about 140 pounds. He had no physical weakness to combat and his game was as sound as his sturdy body. He had the excellent teaching of Stewart Maiden.

Since those days Bobby Jones has been a factor to reckon with at every golf championship. He has come near on several occasions and this year was only eliminated by the superb play of Willie Hunter, the English star. Hunter was in form and had to use everything in his wide assortment of golf knowledge to end Bobby's chances on the seventeenth green.

Speculation on Bobby's chances of an amateur championship is always interesting to golfers who have never forgotten those wonderful days at Merion. Bobby has perhaps never surpassed that particular play and it may be that he has at last found his nerves. At Merion he had nothing to consider, playing with a happy abandon which is undeniably a factor in good golf. He made a reputation, and it is hard to live up to a reputation. Still, Bobby has the advantage of a sound game. He plays his shots with precision and so I personally feel that while the South's and Bobby's disappointment may have been great at St. Louis this year, sooner or later the doors of the championship must swing open to admit the sturdy young Georgian.

Barney Dreyfuss Owes Explanation For Trade Talks

Is Pirates' Owner Merely Disgusted or Does He Suspect Various Players?

Considerable curiosity has been expressed in professional baseball circles over the report that emanated recently from the office of Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburg club, to the effect several of the 1921 Pirates would go on the auction block at the annual meeting of the National League, writes I. E. Sanborn in the Chicago Tribune.

The world wants to know what Barney was trying to tell it about the players with whom he is willing to part either for coin or in trade. Was the Pirate owner simply disgusted with the failure of his hired men to win the pennant, or does he suspect something? Time was when the guy who emitted even a mild "boo" against the honesty of baseball was roasted so hard he could not sleep nights. Times have changed since 1919.

Against Sales During Season.

Folks are wondering if Dreyfuss meant anything by his alleged proposal to revamp his team and omit from the 1922 lineup several star players of this year. Taken in conjunction with the Pirate chief's avowed intention to curtail the sale of ballplayers during the playing season, it looks as if he was on the warpath to eradicate some of the things which have hurt baseball in the past.

For years envious pennant chasers in the National League have raised the cry that McGraw "got what he wanted when he wanted it"—always. That was not true in the altogether. The New York Giants frequently in past years have been able to purchase needed playing material from other teams in the same circuit in midseason or later, and these purchases undoubtedly have helped the Giants win several pennants.

Giants' Backers Have Roll.

McGraw always has had a bank roll and a generously minded club owner back of him, and when a tail-end team began to be pinched for money, with no chance to get it at the gate, the New York club has been able to buy needed material in exchange for the coin which the weak club owner needed. But in spite of the leverage of ready money, McGraw was denied the ambition of winning a world's pennant for many seasons, and not until this year was he able to get everything he wanted when he wanted it, making 1921 a year long to be remembered by the veteran leader of the Giants.

No suspicion attaches to the result of the last world's series. McGrew outgeneraled Huggins, just as a lot of managers have been doing in previous years, and there was no doubt of the outcome of the 1921 series, if the Giants proved anywhere near the class of the Yankees—which they did.

Pirate Slump Expected.

Dreyfuss either is sore on his athlates for their slump at the end of the season, or suspects something. He probably will spill it later, if he does. As for the weakening of the Pirates in the last month, it was expected by a lot of folks, and those who were rooting for Pittsburg hoped the slump would come earlier in the season. If you ever competed in a mile or two race you know perfectly well the tough job a contestant has to set the pace all the way and still finish in front—or even one, two, three.

The pacemaker always is worried and has to look back to see what the rest are doing, while the men close behind him know exactly what they have to do to close up the distance before they reach the wire. That is an explanation sufficiently logical to account for the failure of the Pirates at the finish.

If Dreyfuss has any other thought he ought to tell the world about it.

JONES PUTS FOUR IOWA FOOTBALL PLAYERS ON ALL-CONFERENCE TEAM

Coach Howard Jones of the Iowa football eleven has picked the first mythical all-conference team selected here. He gives four of his men places, Ohio three, Wisconsin two and Chicago two. Aubrey Devine is made captain. With a powerful line, three speedy, shifty backs, and a demon plunger in Gordon Locke, Jones is believed to have selected a whirlwind aggregation that would beat anything it might meet in the country. The Iowa expert's choice follows:

Rigt end—Belding, Iowa.
Right tackle—Slater, Iowa.
Right guard—McGuire, Chicago.
Center—Bunge, Wisconsin.
Quarterback—Aubrey Devine, Iowa, captain.
Right half—Thomas, Chicago.
Fullback—Locke, Iowa.

In the raid Walton captured three men, all of whom have since been identified in connection with bank robberies in Iowa. One of the men was Earl Cox, husband of the housekeeper for Michael McNamara, "The Shamrock," at the time McNamara was shot and killed in his flat on Glasgow avenue because he had turned "snitch." Morris, who had signified his intention of telling about the Jefferson City mail robbery when he was found shot and killed in a lonely spot near Newport, Ill.

ETHIOPIAN TOMBS LAY BARE THE HISTORY OF 910 YEARS

Excavations by Harvard University Professors Uncover Royal Cemeteries.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 26.—Discovery of the tombs of 26 generations of Ethiopian Kings and the recovery of material buried for more than 2000 years, which makes it possible for the first time to write the history of Ethiopia, were reported today by the joint Egyptian expedition of Harvard University and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. The expedition, in charge of Professor George A. Reisner, of Harvard, was in Egypt 10 years.

Its findings in part, have been reported from time to time.

The discovery of the lost civilization of Ethiopia was made at Napata, now called Gebel Barkal. The royal cemeteries were found outside the city, At Nuri, to the south, on a low knoll near the river Nile, the archeologists examined a group of pyramids which proved to be the tombs of 20 Kings and 25 Queens or Ethiopia, from 660 to 250 B. C., most of whose names had been lost to human knowledge.

Excavations uncovered the burial chamber of Tirhaqua, the King of Ethiopia mentioned in the Book of Isaiah, who was one of the five Ethiopian monarchs who ruled over Egypt, and then one by one uncovered tombs of all the other Kings, Queens, Princes and Princesses of Ethiopia, for a period of more than four centuries.

'ALL GOES WELL,' BEATTY SAYS

Something Already Done to Relieve Arms Burden, He Tells Canadians.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 26.—Admiral Earl Beatty told the Ottawa Canadian Club today that if "The Washington conference were to close its doors tomorrow, it would have accomplished something toward releasing the world from the great burden of armament and the taxation that it involves."

He said that his very presence in Ottawa today indicated that all goes well at the conference. The limits imposed upon various countries under the Hughes proposals, he said, "are not derogatory to the dignity of the great Empire to which we belong. There are many questions still to be worked out," he added. "The great achievements aimed at cannot be achieved in a day. But that they will be achieved, the spirit and harmony which rule at Washington today are a very signal proof."

Chancellor Birkenhead Explains Exceptions to Canadian Status Concern Tariff and Naval Facilities.

NOT CONFIDENT OF FINDING SOLUTION

Allegiance the Stumbling Block; Truce Extension, and Visit to U. S. by Premier, Discussed.

By the Associated Press.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS, England, Nov. 26.—Lord Chancellor Birkenhead, speaking at a mass meeting here today, said he could not confidently predict that the Irish question would be satisfactorily solved.

He said what the British Government had offered Sinn Fein was that, with one or two reservations, Ireland should be placed in exactly the same position as Canada.

"Whether the offer will be accepted, I cannot say," said the Lord Chancellor.

"It is very easy," he added, "to say 'Why don't you raise an army and coerce Ireland as the only means of obtaining peace?' If such a tragic necessity were to arise, no British Government would shrink from the responsibility. But when that had been done, how much nearer would we be to the attainment of a contented Ireland.

Referring to Ulster, Lord Birkenhead said there would be no question of taking any of her special privileges or powers from her, but he hoped that Ulster, having complete protection against any interruption of her powers, would in the near future realize that her interests in other matters concerning Ireland as a whole would be better served by contributing her experience to a central authority. "The differences raised on the other side are manifest," he said.

He said the Government had made it clear that it could not assent to any arrangement which would produce the secession of Ireland from the British Empire.

Later in his speech Lord Birkenhead explained that the one or two reservations with respect to dominion home rule for Ireland concerned the question of tariff and naval facilities. The latter, he said was a vital and indispensable matter. He declared the British crown was a symbol as necessary in Ireland as in Canada.

Craig Expected to Explain Cause of Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The first official pronouncement of the cause of the crisis which has arisen in the Irish peace negotiations probably will be made by Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, at the reopening of the Northern Ireland Parliament, next Tuesday.

He is expected to disclose that, when he saw Premier Lloyd George yesterday the latter was unable to assure him that the Sinn Fein had consented to declare allegiance to the King. Attorney-General Stewart, who, with Lord Birkenhead, the Lord Chancellor, discussed this matter with the representatives of the Daily Eireann last night, have hinted that this was the stumbling block.

Should the negotiators find themselves unable to overcome the determination of Sinn Fein on this question, it is believed Lloyd George will make a flying visit to Washington, meanwhile obtaining, by the promise of a general election for obtaining a new mandate for the people, an extension of the existing truce.

HANS TAUSCHER BACK IN U. S.

Husband of Mme. Gadski Went Away When Under Indictment.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Capt. Hans Tauscher, husband of Mme. Gadski, grand opera singer, who left for Germany in February, 1917, with former Ambassador von Bernstorff while under indictment in San Francisco for alleged violation of American neutrality, returned to this country today on the steamer America. The indictment was dismissed Nov. 1. Tauscher had been charged with connection in the so-called Hindu plot to ship arms and ammunition to India.

In 1917 Tauscher, then representative of the Krupp company in this country, was arrested here charged with having conspired to destroy the Welland Canal in September, 1915. He was acquitted by a jury and was given safe passage from the United States to Germany. He served in the German army during the war and recently was reported to be seeking United States citizenship.

Former Illinois Treasurer Says He Turned Over All Interest.

By the Associated Press.

CARBONDALE, Ill., Nov. 26—Edward E. Mitchell, one of the five former State treasurers made defendants in suits filed today by Attorney-General E. J. Brundage and alleging a shortage of $2,500,000 in the accounts of the former State officials, tonight denied any discrepancies during his term of office. Mitchell, in a formal statement dictated to an Associated Press correspondent, said:

"I turned over every cent of interest to the State and left a list of all interest money collected on file when I turned the office over to my successor. I turned over a larger rate, according to the daily balance than any of my predecessors. My record is clean and I have no fear."

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—A flood of sentiment has been unloosed by the announcement of Princess Mary's engagement to Viscount Lascelles. It fills the newspapers, breaks out in every public speech and draws hordes of women and many men to places where they may catch a glimpse of the Princess, whose lineaments have been familiarized by published photographs.

Hundreds of persons are sending to the Princess presents of money, many of the donors supplying the newspapers with their own photographs at the same time.

Charles Stratford, an elderly bricklayer from Bethnel Green, has come in an easy first in this competion by forcing into the hands of Lord Leschelles a half sovereign "for the good lady." Then Stratford, guileless royalist that he is, made a clean breast to the newspapers of the whole impulsive business, and he has been photographed with his entire family. His imitators have been legion, but, though some have given hundreds of pounds, his well-timed half sovereign got the biggest show of all.

Viscount Lascelles seems to be rather uncomfortable under the glare of publicity. He manfully tries to smile, but he is of a retiring nature. His cynical friends say he was far happier in the trenches. He is 39 years old and Princess Mary is 24.

RECEIVER FOR THE WILLYS AUTO ACCESSORY CORPORATION

Action Explained as One to Control Property Until Refinancing Plan Is Made.

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 26.—Frank P. Kennison, vice president of the Ohio Savings Bank, Toledo, and Clem C. Miniger, president of the Electric Heat and Light Corporation of Toledo, today were appointed receivers for the Willys Corporation, manufacturers of automobile accessories. The appointment was made in the Federal Court by Judge John E. Killits and confirmed by Federal Judges in New York and Newark, N. J.

The purpose of the suit is to stop litigation and to control the property until a refinancing plan which is now being arranged can be consummated, officials of the Ohio Savings Bank and Trust Co. announced.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—John N. Willys, president of the Willys Corporation, Federal receivers for which have been appointed, issued a statement here today emphasizing the fact that it was not the Willys-Overland Company which was affected. The latter company, he said, was a separate and distinct corporation and not interested in the Willys Corporation.

MYSTERY IN KILLING OF MAN AND WIFE ON THEIR PORCH

Gallup (N. M.) Couple Had Just Returned From Theater When Shot to Death.

By the Associated Press.

GALLUP, N. M., Nov. 26.—Mystery shrouds the slaying here last night of J. W. Blackwell Jr., a mine clerk, and his wife, who were shot to death on the front porch of their home, according to the Sheriff's office. The bodies were discovered this morning.

The body of Blackwell was in a crouching position on the knees, with his head resting in his folded arms against the two-foot wall around the porch. That of Mrs. Blackwell lay a few feet away. Each had been shot once through the breast.

The couple, the authorities say, had just returned from a theater when they were shot. Blackwell had removed his gloves and had a bunch of keys in his right hand. The door was unlocked and the house showed no evidence of having been disturbed.

A dentist and his wife who passed the Blackwell residence last night in their automobile told the authorities they saw a man and woman walking in the direction of the house. A few minutes later, they said, two shots were heard and they returned to the Blackwell home. They saw a woman, alone, they said, running down the street.

TUMULTY MAKES PUBLIC CABLEGRAMS EXCHANGED BETWEEN WILSON AND WHITE HOUSE WHILE THE PRESIDENT WAS IN PARIS

How Executive Kept in Touch With the Drift of Opinion Back Home

Hitherto Unrevealed Private Correspondence Given to the World in Refutation of Partisan Charges That Chief Magistrate Was Kept in Ignorance of Events Here and That He Was Letting Clemenceau and Lloyd George Run the Peace Conference.

Character of His Illness in French Capital Made Known in This Way for First Time—The True Story of His Ordering the George Washington to Brest When an Apparent Impasse Was Reached—Complaints of France's Dilatory Tactics.

FORMER Private Secretary Joseph P. Tumulty presents as today's installment of his book, "Woodrow Wilson as I Know Him," the following cablegrams that passed between Woodrow Wilson and his White House office during the President's absence in Paris with the American Peace Commission. This is the first publication of these highly interesting communications which greatly illuminate the historic struggle for a just peace and the League of Nations.

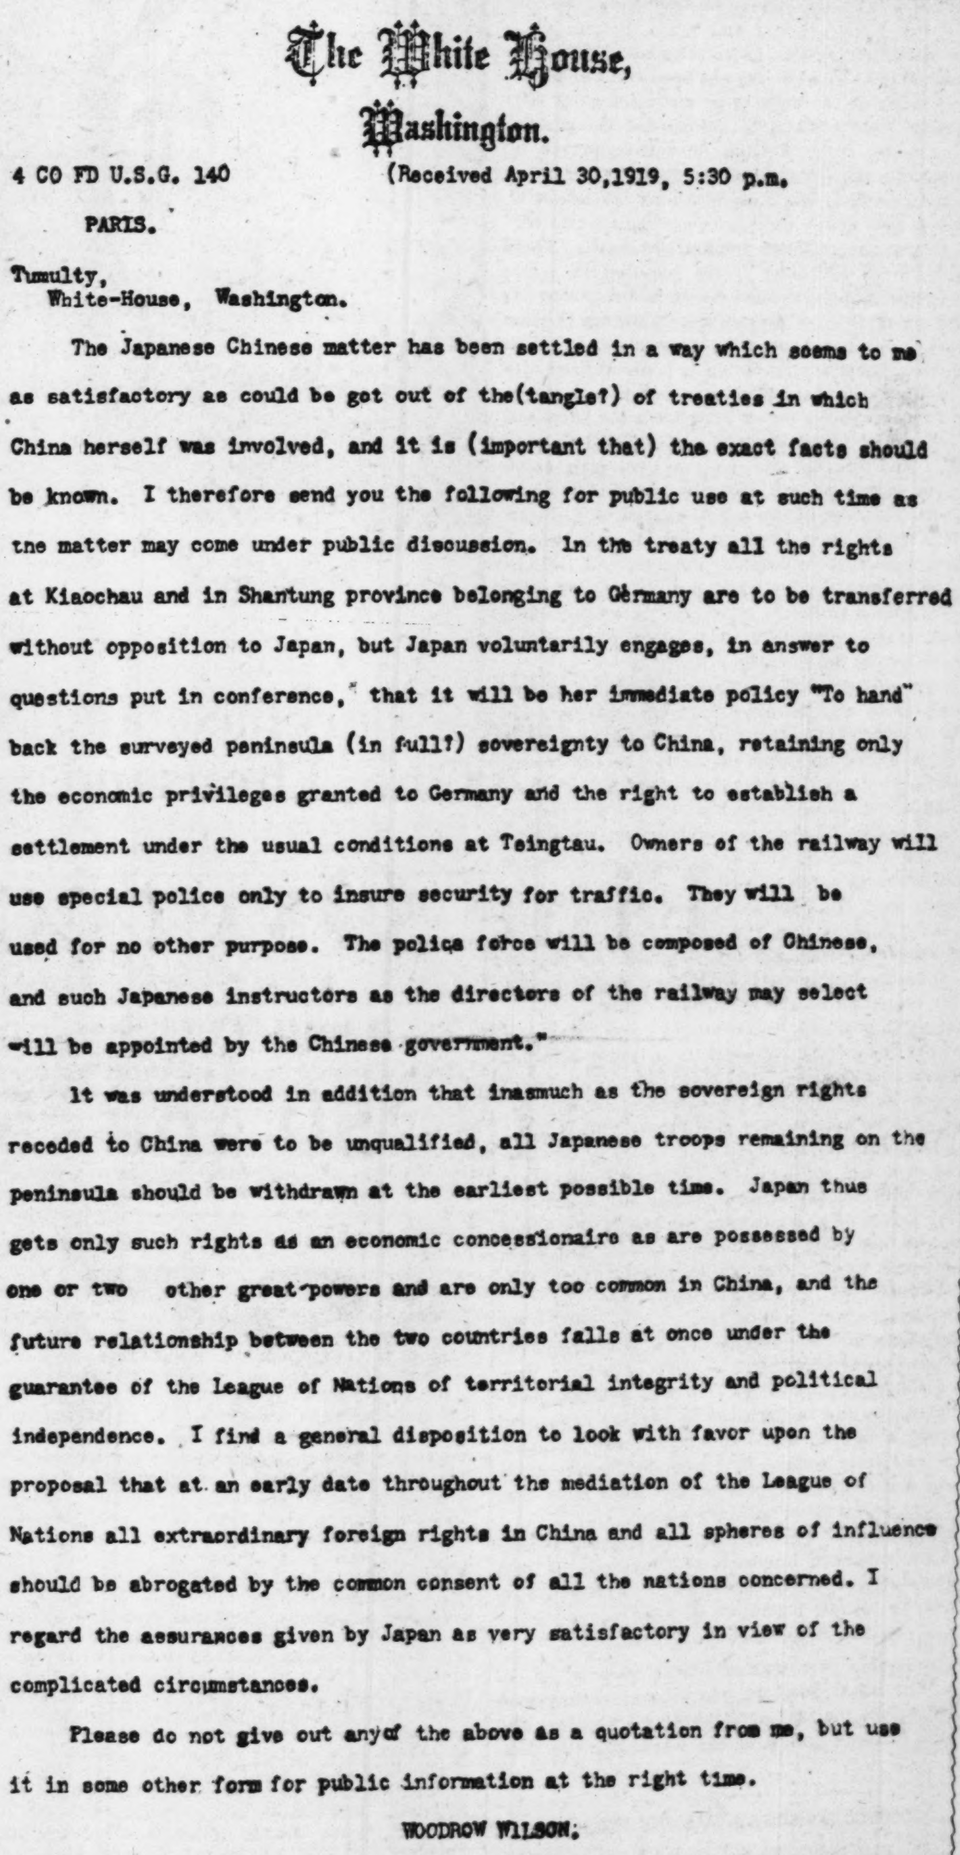
Facsimile of Wilson's Cablegram Explaining Japanese Settlement



The White House,

PARIS.

Tumulty,
White-House, Washington.

The Japanese Chinese matter has been settled in a way which seems to me as satisfactory as could be got out of the(tangle?) of treaties in which China herself was involved, and it is (important that) the exact facts should be known. I therefore send you the following for public use at such time as the matter may come under public discussion. In the treaty all the rights at Kiaochau and in Shantung province belonging to Germany are to be transferred without opposition to Japan, but Japan voluntarily engages, in answer to questions put in conference," that it will be her immediate policy "To hand" back the surveyed peninsula (in full?) sovereignty to China, retaining only the economic privileges granted to Germany and the right to establish a settlement under the usual conditions at Tsingtau. Owners of the railway will use special police only to insure security for traffic. They will be used for no other purpose. The police force will be composed of Chinese, and such Japanese instructors as the directors of the railway may select will be appointed by the Chinese government."

It was understood in addition that inasmuch as the sovereign rights receded to China were to be unqualified, all Japanese troops remaining on the peninsula should be withdrawn at the earliest possible time. Japan thus gets only such rights as an economic concessionaire as are possessed by one or two other great powers and are only too common in China, and the future relationship between the two countries falls at once under the guarantee of the League of Nations of territorial integrity and political independence. I find a general disposition to look with favor upon the proposal that at an early date throughout the mediation of the League of Nations all extraordinary foreign rights in China and all spheres of influence should be abrogated by the common consent of all the nations concerned. I regard the assurances given by Japan as very satisfactory in view of the complicated circumstances.

Please do not give out anyof the above as a quotation from me, but use it in some other form for public information at the right time.

If it is America's intention to back up the allies in sinking German ships, the idea is so vague in this country that there ought to be a great deal of elucidation if the President intends to take this stand. Hope the President will be more definite than he had been in speeches in reference to League of Nations and freedom of the seas. His enemies here and abroad hope that he will particularize so that they can attack him. People of the world are with him on general principles. They care little for details.

Clemenceau's speech, wherein he advocated a world settlement based upon the old balance-of-power ideas, demonstrates necessity for and wisdom of your trip, and has set stage for final issue between balance of power and League of Nations. If America fails now socialism rules the world, and if international fair play under democracy cannot curb nationalistic ambitions, there is nothing left but socialism, upon which Russia and Germany have already embarked. You can do nothing more serviceable than, without seeming to disagree with Clemenceau, drive home in your speeches differences between two ideals—one, the balance of power means continuance of war; other, concert of nations means universal peace. One has meant great standing armies with larger armaments and burdensome taxation, consequent unrest and bolshevism. If the statesmanship of Versailles cannot settle these things in a spirit of justice, bolshevism will settle them in a spirit of injustice. The world is ready for the issue. Clemenceau has given you great opportunity; this country and the whole world will sustain you. Country ready to back you up when you ask for its support. Everything fine here.

The President of the United States, Paris:

Hope you will consider the suggestion for your return trip. Your personal contact with peoples of Europe has done much to help your program. Our people will be with your program, but it (the program) must be "personally conducted." If you return here without reception or ovation, public opinion on other side liable to misunderstand. The time of your return (in my opinion) is the hour for you to strike in favor of League of Nations. Lodge and leading Republicans constantly attacking, excepting Taft, who is daily warning them of political dangers of their opposition to your program. Could you not consider stopping upon your return at Port of Boston instead of New York? The announcement of your stopping at Boston would make ovation inevitable throughout New England and would center attack on Lodge. You haven't been to New England in six years. It would be a gracious act and would help much. It would strengthen League of Nations movement in House and Senate and encourage our friends in Senate and House and throughout country. Our people just as emotional as people of Europe. If you return without reception, Lodge and others will construe it as weakness. If the people of our country could have seen you as people of Europe, our situation would be much improved; especially the result of last November would have been different. My suggestion would be a speech at Faneuil Hall, Boston; speech in Providence, New Haven, New York and reception upon return to Washington, to be participated in by returning soldiers. TUMULTY.

The President of the United States, Paris:

The attitude of the whole country toward trip has changed. Feeling universal that you have carried yourself magnificently through the critical situations, with prestige and influence greatly enhanced here and abroad. The criticisms of the cloakroom statesmen have lost their force. I realize difficulties still to be met, but have no doubt of result. Trip admitted here by everybody to be wonderful success. Last week with perils of visit to Vatican most critical. The whole psychology favors the success of your trip. The peoples of Europe and the United States with you for League of Nations and against settlements based upon balance of power. Opinion here is that cards are stacked against you. My own opinion your influence so great in Europe that European leaders cannot stand in your way. Now is the critical moment, and there must be no wasting away of your influence in unnecessary delay of conference. Hearts of the peoples of the world for League of Nations and they are indifferent to its actual terms. They are against militarism and for any reasonable plan to effectuate peace.

CABLEGRAM.

The White House,

The President, Paris:

In past two weeks the trend of newspaper dispatches from Paris have indicated a misunderstanding of your general attitude toward problems pending at Peace Conference. One newspaper cablegram says today that France, Italy and Great Britain have agreed to subordinate your League of Nations program to the need for counteracting bolshevism and collecting damages from Germany. Another a few days ago reported that Clemenceau had made headway with his insistence upon maintenance of balance of power. Still another outlined victory of Great Britain in her opposition to freedom of seas, stating that you had abandoned your position in response to arguments of France, supporting Great Britain. Similar stories would give impression that you were yielding, although we are aware that some of the suggestions for compromise are probably your own. Situation could easily be remedied if you would occasionally call in the three press association correspondents who crossed on George Washington with you, merely giving them an understanding of the developments as they occur and asking them not to use information as coming from you, but merely for their own guidance. It would show wisdom of various compromises as well as circumstances of such compromise. Proposal of Lloyd George that the Russian bolsheviki be invited to send peace delegates to Paris produced very unfavorable impression everywhere. It is denounced here as amazing. TUMULTY.

Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson,
Care of President Wilson, Paris:

American newspapers filled with stories this morning of critical character about rule of secrecy adopted for Peace Conference, claiming that the first of the Fourteen Points has been violated. In my opinion, if President has consented to this, it will be fatal. The matter is so important to the people of the world that he could have afforded to go any length even to leaving the conference than to submit to this ruling. His attitude in this matter will lose a great deal of the confidence and support of the people of the world which he has had up to this time.

Your cable about misunderstandings concerning my attitude toward problems created by the newspaper cablegrams concerns a matter which I admit I do not know how to handle. Every one of the things you mention is a fable. I have not only yielded nothing, but have been asked to yield nothing. These maneuvers which the cablegram speaks of are purely imaginary. I cannot check them from this end because the men who sent them insist on having something to talk about, whether they know what the facts are or not. I will do my best with the three press associations. WOODROW WILSON.

The issue of publicity is being obscured by the newspaper men and we have won for the press all that is possible or wise to win, namely, complete publicity for real conferences. Publicity for the conversations I am holding with the small group of the great Powers will invariably break up the whole thing, whereas the prospects for agreement are now, I should say, very good indeed. Delighted that you are up and beg that you will not expose yourself or exert yourself too soon. Affectionate messages from us all.

Notice in morning papers discussion with reference to disposition of German colonies. Call your attention to speech of British Premier delivered in January as follows: "With regard to German colonies, I have repeatedly declared that they are held at the disposal of a conference whose decision must have primary regard to the wishes of the native inhabitants. The general principle of national self-determination therefore is applicable in their cases as in those of the occupied European territories." I believe that Balfour made a similar statement. President Wilson, Paris:

Believe your most critical time in setting forward America's position at conference has come. Opposition to League growing more intense from day to day. Its bitterness and pettiness producing reaction. New polls throughout country indicate strong drift toward League. League of Nations and just peace inseparable. Neither half can stand alone. Know you will not be drawn away from announced program to incorporate League covenant in treaty. You can afford to go any length in insisting upon this. There is no doubt of your success here and abroad. The real friends of a constructive peace have not begun to fight. Everything fine here. TUMULTY.

Can responsibility for delay be fixed by you in some way? TUMULTY.

(CABLE FROM ASSOCIATED PRESS AT PARIS.)

Paris, March 27, 1919.

President Wilson today issued the following statement:

"In view of the very surprising impression which seems to exist in some quarters, that it is the discussions of the commission on the League of Nations that are delaying the final formulation of peace, I am very glad to take the opportunity of reporting that the conclusions of this commission were the first to be laid before the plenary conference.

"They were reported on Feb. 14, and the world has had a full month in which to discuss every feature of the draft covenant then submitted.

"During the last few days the commission has been engaged in an effort to take advantage of the criticisms which the publication of the covenant has fortunately drawn out. A committee of the commission has also had the advantage of a conference with representatives of the neutral States, who are evidencing a very deep interest and a practically unanimous desire to align themselves with the League.

"The revised covenant is now practically finished. It is in the hands of a committee for the final process of drafting, and will almost immediately be presented a second time to the public.

"The conferences of the commission have invariably been held at times when they could not interfere with the consultation of those who have undertaken to formulate the general conclusions of the conference with regard to the many other complicated problems of peace, so that the members of the commissions congratulate themselves on the fact that no part of their conferences has ever interposed any form of delay."

In an editorial entitled "Treat or Fight," Springfield Republican says: "It is plain that the allies dare not commit themselves to an avowed war on the soviets and that it is not possible for the allies with the world in its present temper to take the position that the existence of the soviet form of government in any country constitutes a casus belli; that the world would recoil from the proposal to begin a new series of war with so dubious an object; that Russia should be left to manage her own affairs." Editorial disagrees with policy of French Government towards Russia and soviets. Calls attention to disastrous results of foreign intervention during French revolution. Editorial further says: "Impossible to fight revolution in one place and be at peace elsewhere. If allies mean to fight Hungary because it has set up a soviet form of government and allied itself with Russia, them will have to fight Russia. If they fight Russia they will have to fight the Ukraine. Such a war would mean the end of the League of Nations. It is plain that the allies dare not commit themselves to an avowed war on the soviets."

Dispatches from Simonds and others prove stories of weeks ago were most optimistic; now touched with deep pessimism. Simonds in article of Saturday says: "No common objective in council; no dominating influence; drifting," etc. I fear your real position in council not understood here and that lack of publicity strengthening many false impressions. The responsibility attaching to those associated with you, including France and England, when they accepted Fourteen Points, evidently lost sight of by them. Do not know what your real situation is, but it appears to me that Germany is not prepared to accept the kind of peace which is about to be offered, or if she does accept, with its burdensome conditions, it means the spread of bolshevism throughout Germany and Central Europe. It seems to me that you ought in some way to reassert your leadership publicly. I know the danger, but you cannot escape responsibility unless you do so. Now is the moment in my opinion to strike for a settlement permanent and lasting.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

$50 for Selah.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I READ this morning a brilliant editorial from the Los Angeles Times, in which a masterly pen sought to depict the glory attending two fallen soldiers, at the recent Armistice day pageant through the streets of Washington—"the one a broken figure, huddled in the cushions of a carriage, and the other a heap of coffined bones!" * * and having read and pondered, I took up your editorial section for this date, and read "Selah's" diatribe on "Wilsonism."

Of course, everyone has a right to his opinions. It is not for you or me to say what another's thoughts shall be—it is even possible that another, himself, doesn't know, at all times, just what his thoughts are; but it is not only our duty, but ought to be our pleasure, to point the truth—not alone to "Selah," but to you as well.

"Selah" complains of your adulation—obsession, he calls it. I complain of your thoughtlessnes in offering your readers an epistle couched in such terms.

To make the question one worth while, I will give to "Selah" a $50 Liberty Bond if he, publicly, can define intelligently the failures of Mr. Wilson. His reasoning must be clear and based on fact. If a normal 14-year-old schoolboy cannot prove the falsity of his logic, I shall send on the bond, in your care.

It appears to me that we Americans are too prone to give ear to the whimper of ignorance, and if I can cause any measure of earnest consideration of the facts surrounding Mr. Wilson and his administration, I shall feel more than well rewarded. If I can but induce "Selah" to investigate, to read up on his contemporaneous history, to forget his inborn political spleen against our one great man of a hundred years, I know that I shall have opened the eyes of at least one sleeper, and that my bond will remain with me.

No Pussyfooting.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WITH all your faults, I love you because you do not pussyfoot, whether you talk about Wilson or prohibition.

Your splendid editorial in Saturday's issue, entitled "More Theoretical Prohibition," predicting that the drys are riding their hobby for further intolerant triumphs, is a clear forecast of the future.

But I am glad to see the speed these fanatics are showing in their legislative program.

With a law prohibiting the use of beer and light wines, for medicinal purposes, red liquor must soon follow the same [illegible]

Fanatics were never known to use judgment or discretion, for the good reason that they have not sense enough.

Liberty looks cheap, so long as one can enjoy it undisturbed, and it takes a long time for the slow-thinking common people to realize that there are thieves that would steal their liberty, as there are thieves that would steal their money.

The liberty thief gets so brazen after the first theft, like the money thief, he goes the limit. So let the intolerant prohibitionist ride to his own death. The reaction has set in already. Watch it grow.

The people had to protect themselves, in years past, from the intolerant religious fanatic and it is only a question of time when they will strangle the prohibition fanatic, as it is a much easier job.

Christmas Bonus.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN Post-Dispatch, Nov. 20, I read about the test case on soldier bonus, and the delay it will cause. This looks like a deliberate move on the part of those who will handle the disbursing of the bonds to delay their issuance as long as possible.

I wonder if the men or the parties delaying this measure would care to wait until next March to receive their salaries, if many of them were badly in need of shoes and warm clothing for the winter?

This is going to be a hard winter. Many of the ex-service men were looking ahead to receive this bonus as a means to tide them over the winter, many of them will be thoroughly disgusted, many discouraged, a few, perhaps, made desperate.

Get busy and put this across before Christmas, give the heroes a Christmas present; this will be the largest Christmas present many of them ever had, or maybe ever will get.

ONE OF THE NEAR-HEROES.

No Part of Failure.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HAVE been a daily and Sunday reader of the Post-Dispatch for past 11 years, and have faith that it will continue to be as good a patriotic American paper as ever, regardless of the fact of "Selah's" letter appearing on its editorial page. All the Selahs in the world cannot send Woodrow Wilson down the ages as any part of a failure.

AMERICAN WIFE AND MOTHER.

READY TO GO.

The Post-Dispatch's report of the building situation in St. Louis has been confirmed by Director of Public Welfare Cunliff's survey which shows that a construction program amounting to $15,270,000 is ready to be launched in January and will be in full swing by June provided construction costs are reasonably reduced.

The three cost factors are money, material and labor. As regards money a local banker has agreed to reduce the usual commission of three per cent on building loans to 2 1-2 per cent—a reduction of 16 2-3 per cent in that detail—and that loans shall be made at 6 per cent interest.

As to material prices, an officer of one of the local companies declares that such prices in St. Louis are lower than in other large cities. His statement shows that certain materials are higher now than they were in 1918, owing to increased labor, operating and, particularly, transportation costs. Dealers agree not to increase prices because of the great demand which the mammoth building program will create. In some instances material prices will be lowered.

The one difficult obstacle in the situation is labor costs. President Lammert of the Building Trades Council believes that a 10 per cent concession in wages may be recommended, but this is considerably short of the reduction which investors regard as necessary. The proposed reduction would leave the basic wage cost at $1.12 1-2 cents-an-hour—it is now $1.25—while a figure of from 90c to $1.00 an hour has been proposed as the practical maximum in order to start the program.

There is, then, a big difference in the wage question to be composed, but thus far the conference discussions have been conducted in good spirit and there seems a fair prospect of effecting an agreement. A condition which labor has to face, and the other factors, too, is a comparison between the local wage scale and that in effect elsewhere. The material dealers, as has been noted, have invited that comparison. What about loans? Can building enterprises be financed as cheaply here as in other cities of our class? If not, our financial institutions will be required to explain why. Meantime, it is known that the St. Louis wage scale in the building industry continues at peak while in many cities it has receded far beyond the 10 per cent concession which has been tentatively offered.

It is obvious, of course, that sooner or later St. Louis labor must get on a par with labor in other cities. The building depression here cannot go on indefinitely while the industry booms generally throughout the country, as it is now doing. How the deadlock has been broken in other cities is known. The St. Louis plan of discussion and co-operation, however, has been expertly approved as the happiest procedure undertaken anywhere. The plan should not fail. Not one of the three major interests involved can afford to be responsible for such failure.

The conference is making progress. It should keep on at its task. But the fact cannot be blinked that a conclusion must be reached soon so that St. Louis can resume building for the needs that press and come back into prosperity all along the line.

THE STATE UNIVERSITY.

Dr. J. C. Jones, acting president of the Missouri State University, pointed out at a dinner address in Kansas City the disadvantage the university suffers in not coming in under the large endowments being raised for private institutions of learning. This declaration was made incidental to a statement of the university's need of more funds, whether from taxation or endowment or both.

Welcome as would be any contribution to Missouri "U" from whatever untainted source, it is interesting to recall in connection with Dr. Jones' plea the remarks while in St. Louis of one of the nation's foremost of the younger generation of educators and college presidents, Dr. Marion Leroy Burton of Michigan State University prophesied that the university of the future was the tax-supported institution, and he moralized that it should be so. It was necessary to the preservation of our democracy, he declared, that education should be without class distinctions either socially, economically or academically.

In making his statement President Burton anticipated any suspicion of special pleading by calling attention to the conditions of congestion and overflow at his university. It is a fact, we believe, that state universities everywhere are unable to accommodate all applicants for matriculation. This, said Dr. Jones, is the condition at Missouri. In considering the present and future of our State university it is important for Missourians to realize what is being said and thought of state universities by the leading educational thinkers. Our university is not to be looked on merely as a poor man's supplement to private education but as a possible future leader among universities of all classes.

At least one state university (Michigan) is already a competitor with Harvard, Yale and Princeton, while another (Wisconsin) has earned a reputation for usefulness. There is no reason why Missouri should not eventually become a competitor of the best.

CABINET ECONOMICS.

Having pored over the Bureau of Labor's statistics Mr. James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, discovers that the average American eats more than a ton of food a year—2664 pounds, to be precise. Whether such an appetite is to be commended or condemned Secretary Davis declines to say. He affects a strict neutrality on the subject, though his observation that the "medical authorities may make what they please of these figures" will strike sensitive ears as a note of displeasure.

Another remark in the Secretary's comment is not without significance, namely, that the average Japanese gets along comfortably on 905 pounds of food, or about a third of the American quota. True, Mr. Davis does not suggest that we adopt the Japanese diet, either as to character or quantity, though the implication is present that such adoption would materially reduce our cost of living.

The dietary miserere of the Secretary of Labor is something of an economic companion piece to Postmaster-General Hays' contribution to the revenue bill's symposium. Mr. Hays is in favor of taxing the spenders and exempting the savers, though how this is to be done by legislative enactment he does not say. However, his formula that "a citizen should be taxed in proportion to the amount of labor he consumes," is more or less consonant with the regret Secretary Davis experiences as he contemplates the statistics of our national gluttony.

Evidently two of President Harding's official family imagine that prosperity may be revived by cutting down consumption. Do the other Cabinet officers share that illusion? If they do, was not the buyers' strike the acme of wisdom, and should not the economists of recognized authority, who hold that consumption must keep pace with production, if a balance is to be maintained, be taken out at sunrise and shot?

Finally, what about the grand old party's ancient slogan, "the full dinner pail"?

CONSCRIPTION.

It is hardly conceivable that when the armament conference, now in session in Washington, reaches the question of land armaments it will not grapple at the outset with the institution of universal compulsory military service that has struck such deep root in the life of Continental Europe during the last half-century, and brought in its train immense increase in the tax burden.

Of the five principal Powers represented at the conference the United States and Great Britain alone have a voluntary system of recruitment. The regular army of the United States has been fixed at 150,000 men, while Great Britain's army contains about 250,000, rather widely scattered among her possessions. Japan, France, Italy, Belgium and Holland are all committed to the principle of compulsory service.

In Japan every youth, upon attaining the age of 17, becomes a part of the national army, going into barracks at the age of 20, to remain two years. There are then three additional years required in active service, with 15 more in the reserve forces calling for a minimum of 60 days' service a year during the last 10 years. The Japanese army now numbers about 600,000 men, though a reduction is contemplated to a peace footing of about half that number.

The French system varies little from the Japanese, both influenced largely by the old imperial German system. The French now have 800,000 men under arms, but contemplate a reduction to 450,000 active men, with reserves in the neighborhood of 2,000,000. Italy has under arms less than 400,000 men, with a proposed reduction to 250,000. Belgium and Holland have proportionally smaller active forces, but they are nevertheless sufficiently large to have their effect in reducing the available strength of the country that might aid in the developments of peace.

However advisable the policy of conscription may be in times of war in order fairly to distribute the burden of self-defense, few will today defend it as an institution suited to times of peace. In our recent necessities we heard the arguments in its behalf, many of which are at least partly sound; that it produces habits of order, cleanliness, punctuality, obedience, respect for authority; that it provides an education and mitigates to some extent the problem of unemployment, and, finally, that it strengthens the national fiber in those countries where wealth and other causes have enervated and effeminatized the population. German statesmen told us that there was not only no economic loss due to universal compulsory service, but a positive gain, since such service greatly augmented the productive capacity of those returned to peaceful pursuits.

The answer to all those arguments came in catastrophic form in August, 1914, and it was pressed home with a tragic reiteration until Nov. 11, 1918, that has silenced even the soldier class. The great explosive elements built up in Europe during half a century, with the issues of peace or war resting in the hands of three or four men, simply burst, devastating nearly the whole earth. Yet we were told these vast armies constituted insurance against war.

It is sometimes contended that the greatest virtue of compulsory military service is that it reclaims the dangerous classes and instils a spirit of loyalty, promoting solidarity and unity. It was evident, however, in Russia and in Germany in pre-war days—and the lesson is equally striking with respect to Japan, France and Italy today—that anarchy, communism, nihilism and the like, appear to find their most congenial soil in the great military states.

The abolition of huge armies is a positive accomplishment, releasing hundreds of thousands of men from the status of simple consumers of taxes and forcing them to become producers of wealth.

OBERAMMERGAU STANDS FIRM.

At least one shrine sacred to tradition is holding its own against the glamor of gold. It would be no sin in the ordinary sense, no breach of morals or ethics, should the Passion Play producers of Oberammergau enact their drama at the cinema camera's mouth, after which every peasant player would receive a competence that would make him a prosperous citizen.

But there is a different conception of the stuff of life at Oberammergau than steam-heated bungalows, phonographs and Fords. Simple villagers though they are, whose kind in other walks of life would be dazzled by the glint of gold and bourgeois comfort, they refuse steadfastly to succumb to the insistent solicitations of American motion picture concerns which have offered as high as 70,000,000 marks for the privilege of adding the Passion Play to the repertoire of the silent drama.

In their own view they decline "to play Judas to our tradition despite our poverty." That would be a plausible enough answer coming from a Socrates or a Tolstoy, but from simple provincials it denotes a singular immunity to the lure of the material.

What, indeed, would become of the distinction of the Passion Play or its peculiar influence upon a sophisticated world were it billed upon the display boards along with "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" and "Where Is Your Husband Tonight?" The Oberammergauans are right. May it never be said by some representative of the nouveaux riches haughtily passing the Bavarian village and foregoing to witness a production of the celebrated Passion Play: "What's the use? I seen it oncet in the movies."

THE NEXT CONFERENCE.

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
By Clark McAdams.

JUST A MINUTE IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

What a dreadful bugaboo is George Bernard Shaw, who laughs at the conference and says that to disarm is silly! Among the correspondents here is Arthur Grigg, London correspondent of the Post-Dispatch. He is a Texan, and hopes to visit his people in Galveston while he is in this country. It was to him Mr. Shaw said that he is afraid to come to this country for fear we will put him in jail. Several of the foreign correspondents have asked about the arrest of Margaret Sanger in New York a few days ago.

"Do they actually arrest you in this country for that sort of thing?" one of them asked.

What a strange country is ours to these Europeans—how contradictory—how impossible really to understand! The truth is that we do not understand it ourselves. As to Margaret, our assertion of some time back that the Orient needs her more than anything else in the world has been repeated several times here by people who never heard of Just a Minute. They thought it an original idea, as we did. Maybe we are all fooling ourselves.

Mr. Wells is the only writer here who has the true diplomatic gift. He is a novelist and a historian. These attributes give him a big advantage when there is nothing to write. Mr. Wells can always sit down and write voluminously. That he has nothing to say is no more a disadvantage to him than it is to a diplomat, who rattles on blithely as if giving out a flood of news while actually telling nothing. Mr. Wells is a cordial and chummy little man, but among so many who must have something to write about when they write he cannot be popular. Our minds are rooted to this spot, but Mr. Wells' fertile mind is all over the universe and into all the corridors of time.

Vox Populi is in much better repute than ordinarily is the case. The world wants an agreement upon some such scheme as we have proposed, and most people here believe it will compel this agreement before very long. In the opinion of these people no obstacle counts. There is not in anyone's mind any thought that agreement will not be reached. Speculation pertains to the sort of agreement the powers will reach. This is comforting, and if the conference turns out that way the triumph of Vox Populi will be the first real triumph he has had in a long time. There are flies in the ointment, but public opinion is out with its swatter.

From my window at the hotel I look across to the windows of the Italian headquarters. They are lighted all night. Typewriters click, laughter resounds, telephones ring, and one would think it were day. When the Italian case is submitted in writing, a dog will not be able to jump over it.

We started something.

Washington is the American boast of all city planners. It is not, however, a very safe place in which to drive an automobile. There are more circles and mazes into which one can get into collision with someone else and more acute angles where cars can run together than there are in any other community in the United States. Multiply the whirligig at the Lindell entrance to Forest Park by 500 and the spider's web at the Locust street cut-off by 1000, and then decide whether you would like to drive a car in Washington or not. Motorists here are not fussy in collision as motorists are in St. Louis. Instead of rushing upon one another and brandishing their fists, they advance politely begging pardon. They are so accustomed to collisions that they have assimilated them into Washington manners.

Washington has very fine manners.

INTO THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS BY BACK DOOR

A Letter in the New York World From Senator Carter Glass to John Stewart Bryan.

ANSWERING your inquiry as to how I feel about disarmament, I am always for an honorable peace whether it be by disarmament or otherwise. I am never for a dishonorable peace through any conceivable medium. Had the United States gone into the League of Nations, the world would have disarmed long ago and we would have security against war for many years to come, if not forever. I hope the disarmament conference, which was forced on this reluctant administration by a combination of Democratic and progressive Republican Senators, will accomplish something in the matter of a reduction of military burdens, albeit its personnel embraces not a single zealot for the cause. It would have been far better to have gone into the League of Nations by the front door rather than to be waiting in the woodshed in the back yard.

Had the Christian churches of this country exhibited the same degree of interest in the League of Nations that they now are manifesting in disarmament, the nation would have held its place in the high esteem of the world; but the church, in large part, failed Christianity in the supremest test to which it has been put since the angels of heaven sang of Christ's advent and mission on earth. As I wrote a preacher friend of mine in Virginia the other day, the church is getting religion too late. Its awakening should have come when the greatest Christian statesman of all time summoned the nations of the earth to enter a covenant which contained the very essence of the Sermon on the Mount and was the consummation, as far as Christian nations could contrive, of the sacrifice on Calvary. Many churches were cold; they even ignored the startling defiance of the anti-leaguist who from his place in the Senate said: "If the Savior of mankind should revisit the earth and declare for a League of Nations I would oppose it." The churches passed vague resolutions, and when election day came around divided on the issue and shattered the hopes of mankind. Not long ago a minister of the gospel in Virginia was reported to have said the League of Nations failed "because it did not recognize God in its text." As it seems to me, any man who cannot discover in the covenant a glorious response to the pleadings of a crucified Christ must have as little appreciation of the intent and as poor an understanding of the practical effort of this great Magna Charta of Christian faith as certain politicians had of the honor and good name of this nation. The letter kills, the spirit saves.

How alarming it is to contemplate such a frightful reaction from exalted idealism to selfish materialism! The other day I sat in the Senate listening to the discussion of the Berlin treaty, the unclean thing which, to adopt, Senator Lodge once prophetically said "would brand us with everlasting dishonor and bring ruin to us also." I heard not a single word uttered by proponents or apologists that had reference to the duty or honor of this nation—not a syllable. In entering the war Mr. Wilson had said: "We ask nothing for ourselves." These American Senators were asking everything. They were for the last pound of flesh exacted for us from the enemy by the nations with which we were allied in the war; in the same breath and by their votes they were repudiating every moral obligation which this country had contracted. The sole import of their speech was: How much can we get? How soon can we get it? How may we obtain it without assuming any part of the expense, which our former associates alone must endure? Could sordidness surpass that?

My country home in Virginia is but seven miles removed from the site of the improvised courtroom in which Patrick Henry held up to scorn the acquisitive Tory who disturbed the Continental camp with the cry of "Beef! Beef!" when the life of the country was imperiled. You and I read of the episode in our youth. How little did I ever dream that I should live to see history repeat itself and to witness with my own eyes, here in Washington, the saddening spectacle of American Senators bleating the cry of Johnny H[illegible] the very integrity of the republic was [illegible]

I have never examined the weird and [illegible] ous dogma of the transmigration of the [illegible] one listening to the discussion of the [illegible] treaty with Germany might readily [illegible] doctrine. Shakspeare in Iago, even [illegible] lock, personified his conception of [illegible] thrift, and it seemed that the spirit of this [illegible] tian knave had come down through the [illegible] and found furtive lodgment in the [illegible] torial disputants. "Put money in thy [illegible] money in thy purse!" was the high [illegible] song. Take no account of the [illegible] pause not to consider the nation's [illegible] of the distrust which must ensue from [illegible] incurred. "Put money in thy purse!" And by the specious and fallacious plea for a [illegible] trade relations with two prostrate, [illegible] and impoverished Central European Powers, [illegible] tlemen of the adversary party were led up to [illegible] Lodge's trough in the Republican camp [illegible] provender which they had previously [illegible] vote for a treaty they once detested; a [illegible] "made in Germany," which greedily [illegible] advantages while repelling the obligations of the treaty made in France by our comrades [illegible]

I do not discover the name of God in this [illegible] treaty which confirms our shame. Rather [illegible] the devil's own work, which thus [illegible] degradation of a proud nation by [illegible] an immortal document, every sentence [illegible] to the teachings of Christ, a pact literally [illegible] in avarice and textually rejecting the [illegible] common honesty? In it both the letter and the spirit are absent.

The American soldier caught the torch [illegible] the dead of Flanders fields and carried it [illegible] valor against the barbarians; now American [illegible] ticians use the oriflamme only to [illegible] high purpose which this nation avowed, to [illegible] every ideal for which our boys endured and [illegible] Our sons of the American Legion who [illegible] trained to fight in France may execrate [illegible] Harvey for saying we entered the war to [illegible] skins; but it may not by any man be said [illegible] sentiment of this accursed Ambassador is [illegible] cepted and reflected in the separate treaty [illegible] with Wirth in Berlin by an agent of this [illegible] tration and recently confirmed at Wash[illegible] the Senate. It literally sickens to think of it. [illegible] it not that God's mercy is without [illegible] would have cause of despair.

THE COST OF WAR.

From the Ohio State Journal.

THE World Peace Foundation gives [illegible] figures, compiled from reports of the [illegible] tary of the Treasury, which ought to have [illegible] fluence on public sentiment, to make [illegible] emphatically at the armament limitation [illegible] ence. In the 131 years of this nation's [illegible] 1789 to 1920, 78.5 of the country's total [illegible] disbursements have been on war account. [illegible] tal disbursements were $66,728,290,400; [illegible] expenses $52,607,489,927. The cost of the [illegible] including pensions to the end of the [illegible] 1920, was $12,322,186,601, more than the [illegible] ment had spent for everything in all its [illegible] existence. The cost to the United States of the World War thus far has exceeded [illegible] 000, with heavy bond interest to pay [illegible] years to come and the virtual certainty [illegible] time Congress will grant a generous bonus to every former soldier.

The figures are impressive enough, and [illegible] represent the cost of war in dollars [illegible] not touch upon the far more serious [illegible] disease, anguish and shattered morals. [illegible] has been reached in the world's history [illegible] nations are almost persuaded to insure [illegible] against great, devastating wars by [illegible] selves the means to wage them. There [illegible] tion where the peoples stand and what [illegible] enforce if they are thoroughly aroused [illegible] their smashing power against [illegible] diplomacy and the timidity which [illegible] not expect too much.

Costume Ball at St. Louis Club Tomorrow Will Be One of Large Number of Brilliant Affairs That Have Filled Season Since First Debutante Made Bow a Month Ago—Occasion Will Mark Presentation of Miss Gloria Geisinger to Society.

JUST one month ago today the first debutante of the season made her bow to society—Miss Carolyn Bailey was introduced at a reception given by her mother, Mrs. Warren Bailey. Every week since that time has witnessed several large and brilliant affairs, ball and receptions, most of them coming-out parties. A novelty in this round of formal entertaining will be the costume ball tomorrow evening at which Miss Gloria Geisinger will make her debut. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Geisinger of 15 Kingsbury place, will entertain at the St. Louis Club. They will be assisted in receiving by their guest, Miss Lucy Dillard of Memphis, Tenn.

Oriental costumes will predominate although there is no particular theme for the ball. Masks will be worn by the dancers until supper is served at 1 o'clock. The ballroom will be canopied to give the effect of a tent and decorations will reflect the carnival spirit. Hundreds of vari-colored balloons, masses of paper streamers and carnival posters will be used in the ballroom, the brilliance of which will be offset by the softly lighted diningrooms. There will be about 300 guests and the affair will be preceded by numerous dinner parties.

Miss Jane Shapleigh will become the bride of Roy D. Kercheval Tuesday evening at 6:30 o'clock, the ceremony taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Shapleigh, 6 Portland place. The Rev. Dr. MacIvor will perform the ceremony, which will be followed by a reception. The bridal party will include Mrs. Elzey Roberts, Mrs. Tom K. Smith, Mrs. A. Wessel Shapleigh, Misses Elizabeth Kennard, Marjorie Douglas, Georgette Madill and A. Wessel Shapleigh, Tom K. Smith, Elzey Roberts, Harold Jolley, Robert Stumpe, W. Glenn Rule, Joseph Rand, J. D. Magee and J. L. Mitchell.

The marriage of Miss Katherine Lee Orr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Orr, and Norman Nulsen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Nulsen, was solemnized at 8 o'clock last evening at the home of the bride's parents, 3231 Lafayette avenue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. McLeod and was followed by a reception for the immediate relatives. Miss Mary Orr was the bride's only attendant and Joe Nulsen served his brother as best man. The couple will spend their honeymoon at White Sulphur Springs and will reside in New York.

Joseph Werner and Wallace Smith are sending out invitations for a large tea dance to be given at the St. Louis Country Club on Thursday afternoon, Dec. 22, in honor of the members of the Princeton Triangle Club who will arrive in this city that morning. The Triangle Club is coming to St. Louis on its annual Christmas tour and will give one performance of its new musical comedy at the Odeon on the evening of Dec. 22. A number of large and small affairs are being planned to honor the young students and many friends of the members of the Triangle Club, as well as former Princeton students will entertain in their honor. Wallace Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Herndon Smith, is a member of the cast of this year's performance. Mr. Werner is chairman of the committee in charge of the entertainment of the Triangle Club of St. Louis this year.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Elsie Woerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Woerman of 5108 Cabanne avenue, to Dr. Wycliffe E. Kling. The wedding will take place next month. with his courage, wisdom and force he will lead the way. Have you any suggestion as to publicity or otherwise? GRAYSON

CABLEGRAM—PARIS.
Received at White House, Washington.

April 4, 1919.

Tumulty, White House, Washington,

The President took very severe cold last night; confined to bed. Do not worry; will keep you advised. GRAYSON.

CABLEGRAM—PARIS.
Received at White House, Washington.

April 5, 1919.

Tumulty, White House, Washington,

We are naturally disappointed at progress being made, but not discouraged. Hopeful everything will turn out all right. Will advise you if anything definite develops. The President is better this morning but confined to bed. No cause for worry. GRAYSON.

CABLEGRAM. PARIS.
Washington, April 5, 1919.
Grayson, care President Wilson, Paris:

In my opinion the President must in some dramatic way clear the air of doubts and misunderstandings and despair which now pervade the whole world situation. He must take hold of the situation with both hands and shake it out of its present indecision, or political sabotage and scheming will triumph. Only a bold stroke by the President will save Europe and perhaps the world. That stroke must be made regardless of the cries and admonitions of his friendly advisers. He has tried to settle the issue in secret; only publicity of a dramatic kind now can save the situation. This occasion calls for that audacity which has helped him win in every fight.

The President says the situation here is extremely complex and intricate, but seems to be improving and he expects to have it in hand this week, but if necessary will act according to your suggestions. The President is confined to bed, but steadily improving. Thanks for your telegram. GRAYSON.

CABLEGRAM. PARIS.
Received at White House.

CABLEGRAMS FROM AND TO WILSON ON HIS PARIS TRIP

CABLEGRAM.

The White House,
Washington, April 30, 1919.
The President of the United States,
Paris:

Beg to call your attention to following editorial from Springfield Republican: "The critical period in the peacemaking has been reached when progress can win over reaction the very least of victories only by a resolute stand of the most commanding figure in Paris. France and England cannot desert the President without branding themselves as hypocrites and ingrates. Worse things could happen than for the President to come home without a peace treaty, leaving Europe to wallow in the mire of national rivalries and hates to which reaction would sentence it for all time. There is no compelling reason why America should sign a treaty that would merely perpetuate ancient feuds and make new wars a certainty. Our chief interest in the conference at Paris, as the President declared at Manchester, is the peace of the world. Unless that can be made reasonably sure, with Europe's sincere co-operation, the time is near when 'pack up and come home' will be America's only policy."

TUMULTY.

CABLEGRAM.

The White House,
Washington, May 8, 1919.
The President of the United States,
Paris:

In your cable you spoke of forwarding message to Congress. Have you made up your mind as to what you will discuss? Would like to suggest certain things I believe vital.

TUMULTY.

CABLEGRAM.

Received at White House, Washington, May 9, 1919.
Tumulty, White House,
Washington:

Happily there is no mystery or privacy about what I have promised the Government here. I have promised to propose to the Senate a supplement in which we shall agree, subject to the approval of the Council of the League of Nations, to come immediately to the assistance of France in case of unprovoked attack by Germany, thus merely hastening the action to which we should be bound by the covenant of the League of Nations.

WOODROW WILSON.

CABLEGRAM.

The White House,
Washington, May 22, 1919.
The President of the United States,
Paris:

Great demonstration New York last night, addressed by Hughes, to protest killings in Poland, Galicia, Rumania and elsewhere. Feeling in this matter growing more intense throughout the country. Cannot something be done? It is evident that Germany is doing everything to separate the allies. A great many newspapers in this country are worried lest you be carried away by the pleadings of Germany for a "softer peace." I know you will not be led astray. There is an intense feeling in the Senate in favor of the publication of the terms of the treaty. Can anything be done to straighten this out?

TUMULTY.

CABLEGRAM.

The White House,
Washington, May 23, 1919.
The President of the United States,
Paris:

Mr. Taft in signed article this morning says: "Find it hard to believe that President Wilson sent sympathetic note to women who plead for Huns." I think this matter of sufficient importance to be cleared up from this side. There is great deal of unrest here owing to talk in newspapers of return of German ships to Great Britain.

TUMULTY.

CABLEGRAM—PARIS.

Received at White House, Washington, May 24, 1919.
Tumulty,
Washington:

I think our friends in the Senate ought to be furnished very frankly with the following reason, which seems to me quite convincing, for not at present publishing the complete treaty: namely, that if our discussion of the treaty with the Germans to be more than a sham and a form it is necessary to consider at least some of the details of the treaty as subject to reconsideration and that, therefore, it would be a tactical blunder to publish the details as first drafted, notwithstanding the fact that there is no likelihood that they will be departed from in any substantial way.

WOODROW WILSON.

CABLEGRAM—PARIS.

Received at White House, Washington, May 25, 1919.
Tumulty, White House,
Washington:

No one need have any concern about the return of the German ships in our possession. Full understanding has been reached about them. As for Mr. Taft's criticism, I am quite willing to be responsible for any sympathetic reply I make to appeals on behalf of starving women and children. Please give following message to Glass: You may take it for granted that I will sign the urgent deficiency bill and go forward with the plans you mention in your cable.

LEGRAMS FROM AND TO WILSON ON HIS PARIS TRIP

ry Republican member of new ign Relations Committee openly ed to treaty, a majority in fa- of its amendment. Every Demo- member of committee, includ- Thomas, for treaty and against ation. There is a decided reac- evident against the league, ed, in my opinion, by dissatisfaction of Irish, Jews, Poles, Italians and Germans. Republicans taking full advantage and liable, in order to garner disaffected vote, to make absolute issue against league. Reaction intensified by your absence and lack of publicity from your end and confusion caused by contradictory statements and explanations of "so called compromises." Simonds' article appearing in certain American newspapers Sunday, admirable, explaining reasons for Saar Valley and French pact and other controversial matters.

There is a tremendous drive against league, resembling German propaganda, backed by Irish and Jews. Irish openly opposing; Jews attacking along collateral lines. Could not Lansing or perhaps White, because he is a Republican, or yourself inspire publicity or give interview explaining—officially or unofficially—the following matters:

1. America's attitude toward publication of terms of treaty, along lines of your last cable to me.

2. That the 14 points have not been disregarded.

3. The underlying reason for French pact, emphasizing the point, as Simonds says, "That French pact is merely an underwriting of the League of Nations during the period necessary for that organization not merely to get to work, but to become established and recognized by all nations."

I am not at all disturbed by this reaction—it was inevitable. The consummation of your work in the signing of the treaty will clear the air of all these distempers. Your arrival in America, your address to the Congress and some speeches to the country will make those who oppose the league today feel ashamed of themselves. The New York World had a very good editorial favoring the mandatory of Turkey.

CABLEGRAM.

Received at the White House, Washington, June 16, 1919.

Tumulty,

White House, Washington:

If Germans sign the treaty we hope to get off the first of next week, about the 24th or 25th. It is my present judgment that it would be a mistake to take any notice of the Knox amendment. The whole matter will have to be argued from top to bottom when I get home and everything will depend upon the reaction of public opinion at that time. I think that our friends can take care of it in the meantime and believe that one of the objects of Knox and his associates is to stir me up, which they have not yet done. I may nevertheless take the opportunity to speak of the League of Nations in Belgium.

WOODROW WILSON.

CABLEGRAM.

The White House,
Washington, June 21, 1919.
The President of the United States,
Paris:

The fight against the league in Knox resolution faces utter collapse. Root and Hays here advising Republican leaders. I learned that Root is advising Republicans to vote for the league with reservations. He is advising Republicans to concentrate their forces upon a resolution of ratification, which would contain specific reservations on the Monroe Doctrine, immigration, tariff and other purely American questions. I believe that this is the course the Republicans will finally adopt. A confidant of Mr. Taft's yesterday wanted to know from me what your attitude was in this matter, saying that Mr. Taft might favor this reservation plan. I told him I had no knowledge on the subject. It is a thing that you might consider. To me it looks like cowardice. The American Federation of Labor adopted a resolution favoring the League of Nations by a vote of 29,750 against 420. Andrew Furuseth led the fight against it. The resolution supporting the league contained a reservation in favor of home rule for Ireland.

POLICEMEN RESCUE MAN FROM A TIMBER WOLF

Policemen drawn to Third street and Clark avenue at 8 a. m. yesterday by a cry of "wolf" found an animal that looked like a gray timber wolf trying to eat Patrick Brown, a negro, of 2633 Papin street, who had rashly undertaken to capture it, under the illusion, suggested by its collar and chain, that it had been raised a pet and was tame.

It fled and the police and numerous volunteer wild game hunters pursued it to Eighth and Chestnut streets, where Police Sergeant Flanagan cornered it in a hallway and seized the chain and by skillful manipulation kept it from biting him.

It was given a ride in a patrol wagon to the Central District Station. It was snappy there and was turned over to George Minch, property clerk, who locked it in one of the property rooms. Police Department hunters said it was a timber wolf, but when Victor Bocherdt of the Forest Park Zoo looked at it he said it was a coyote. It will be added to the Zoo unless the owner appears, and unless Minch decides to keep it.

Minch thinks of starting a little zoo of his own. He has the coyote and a little pig as a nucleus. The pig appeared the other day at the back door of James L. Stuart, 4348 Maryland avenue, and squealed for a meal. The family fed it a couple of days, expecting the owner to appear, and the turned it over to the police, who gave it to Minch, who is raising it on a bottle.

New Coats in a Sale

A week ago we broke all previous sales records in a similar sale!! Immediately we made preparations for another such event—ONLY, this time on a much larger scale—MORE COATS—Coats of such magnificent quality, such lavish fur trimmings, such marvelous tailoring that will amaze even the most skeptical.

A certain large local wholesale concern offered to buy the entire stock for spot cash at $15.00 per garment. WE REFUSED HIS OFFER—we figured if the values were so great that a wholesaler could resell them at a profit—WHY NOT LET OUR THOUSANDS OF PATRONS SHARE OUR GOOD FORTUNE—we bought twenty hundred Coats from New York manufacturers at less than cost of raw materials—in many cases $15 would not even pay for the fur trimmings, and we are going to sell the whole stock tomorrow to YOU at

ONE PLACE ON ROADS BODY FOR ST. LOUIS

Gov. Hyde Expected to Give It to Democrat; West End of State May Get Two Members.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 26.—Gov. Hyde today said that he intended to charge the appointment of Theodore N. Gary, Kansas City telephone man and wealthy Republican, named as a member of the new Highway Commission, to Macon, Gary's former home, which is in Northeast Missouri. Gary has lived in Kansas City for several years. This is taken to indicate that Hyde intends to give another place on the Highway Commission to the west end of the State, possibly to Kansas City.

The Governor declined to discuss the chances of appointment of any other candidates for the remaining three places, though stating that he wanted to go to St. Joseph within the next few days to go over the situation with regard to George E. McIninch, Republican, and chairman of the old commission, to whom Hyde is said to have promised reappointment, but whose stock recently has depreciated considerably in political conjecture.

Hyde's friends have said that the Governor grew restive under frequent reminders of his supposed pledge to the St. Joseph man, whose situation was regarded as improved somewhat by the action of Roy F. Britton of St. Louis, Republican member of the old commission, and strongly backed for a place on the new, in withdrawing his name from consideration and asking Hyde to credit all of his support to McIninch.

Hyde stated today that he intended to give one place on the commission to St. Louis, but refused to say whether it would be for a Democrat or a Republican. It is regarded as well established, however, that the Governor's present plans contemplate the appointment of a Democrat from St. Louis. He said today that the remaining commissioner would be announced as soon as chosen so that, as soon as three were elected, they could start the commission functioning.

EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN FOR CHISTMAS SEAL SALE

Committee of Women to Be in Charge—Teachers to Instruct Children on Tuberculosis.

An intensive educational campaign will be conducted in the schools of St. Louis the week of Dec. 12, in connection with the sale of Christmas seals in the schools by the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis.

Seal school day will be Dec. 13. A committee of 500 women, headed by Mrs. Arthur Lieber, will be in charge. All the teachers of the schools will co-operate. The teachers will give instructions to the children on tuberculosis, what it is, its cause and prevention, and on general health. Literature will be distributed to the children to take home to their parents. The women will be divided into sections, each to be in charge of one school, and these women will see that literature is delivered to the schools and will sell Christmas seals and holiday buttons in the schools to the children.

The Tuberculosis Society always conducts a school day sale of Christmas seals and an educational campaign with this sale. This year, however, the educational side will be strongly emphasized, and will to a large extent oversahdow the selling side. All the money raised from the sale in the schools will be used in paying for meals of children in the open air schools who cannot afford to buy their own meals. More than 70 per cent of the children now in the open air schools are entirely free or part pay and their meals are being provided either wholly or in part by the Tuberculosis Society.

The committee for the annual Christmas seal sale has been formed and the sale is under way. Charles P. Pettus, treasurer of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis, is general chairman and treasurer of the campaign.

Beginning Dec. 1 the seals are to go on general sale throughout the city. Money from the sale in St. Louis and St. Louis County will finance the work of the Tuberculosis Society during the coming year and will be used for fighting tuberculosis in the community. The annual sale of Christmas seals is the principal means of support of the Tuberculosis Society's work. A special effort will be made to make this year's sale larger than ever before, because of the great need of intensifying tuberculosis work here. The society's treasury is exhausted, according to Pettus, due to the constant drain on it caused by extra work placed upon the society, and the officers of the organization are working hard to make the sale a pecuniary as well as a health educational success.

GILBERT H. LANE APPOINTED POSTMASTER AT ALTON AT 69

Age Made it Necessary for President to Issue Order Waiving Limitation of 65.

The appointment of Gilbert H. Lane as Postmaster at Alton was announced yesterday at Washington. He is 69 years old and has been chairman of the Republican Committee at Alton. The age limit for Postmasters is 65, and it was necessary for President Harding to issue an executive order waiving the age limitation in Lane's case.

The incumbent, Joseph L. Lampert, Democrat, had two more years to serve, but was removed by Assistant Postmaster-General Work on charges of inefficiency and favoritism.

Lane was recommended by Congressman Rodenberg of East St. Louis and his appointment indicates who will control the patronage for Southern Illinois. Senators McKinley and McCormick, who had opposed Lane, withdrew their objections.

At the dinner a captain of the university football team for 1922 will be elected, and all of the athletic letters which have been won in any branch of sport in the last year will be awarded.

MAN LOSES CITIZENSHIP ON DAUGHTER'S STORY

J. J. Kichin Declared by Girl to Have Deserted Family in London.

The naturalization papers of Jacob John Kichin, formerly known as Kutchinski, a real estate dealer, were revoked yesterday by Judge Faris on the ground that Kichin had falsified the affidavit of his original application, resulting in the granting of the papers in 1912.

The suit to set aside the naturalization was instituted by the Federal authorities on information furnished by Miss Esther Kutchinski, daughter of Kichin, who set forth in an affidavit that he deserted her mother and their five children in London, eloping to South Africa with another woman and subsequently coming to the United States.

Miss Kutchinski, who is a local telephone operator, came from London in April, 1919, and was met at Union Station by her father. In her affidavit she said her father wanted her to go to a boarding house, but she insisted upon being taken to his home, and there found him living with a woman who had been the family's servant in London.

A quarrel ensued, she said, and her father offered her $200 if she would swear she was not his daughter. This she refused to do and a short time later he put her out on the street at midnight, refusing thereafter to contribute to her support.

In her affidavit she said her mother was in a London charity hospital from overwork in supporting the deserted children, and she set forth that her father falsified his naturalization affidavit in that he was living in bigamy when he made it; said he was born in Austria, when the fact was he was born in Russia, and said he had a son Louis, who, in reality, Miss Kutchinski averred, was a son of the woman by another marriage that Kichin was living with.

Kichin's defense was that he had been living an exemplary life since being naturalized.

PART THREE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 27, 1921. PAGES 1—16B.

U. S. TO PAY $50,000 A YEAR FOR INFIRMARY

New Lease for Hospital to Date Back to July 1 Last.

An increase from $12,000 to $50,000 a year in the rental paid by the Government to the city for the use of the Infirmary building and one wing of the Isolation Hospital for caring for wounded soldiers, was announced yesterday by City Counselor Caulfield.

A lease containing the larger figure has been received by Caulfield from the Treasury Department in Washington. It must be approved by ordinance by the Board of Aldermen and then again approved by the Comptroller of the Treasury in Washington.

The original lease, executed by the Mayor and Comptroller Nolte Nov. 4, 1918, was made in an emergency and without consideration being given to obtaining adequate rental. Caulfield has visited Washington several times negotiating for the increase, and recently Government inspectors, after valuing the property at $1,000,000, announced that $50,000 a year was a reasonable rental.

The new lease is for one year, with privilege of renewal until June 30, 1925. It dates back to July 1, 1921.

RELATIVES OF CITY OFFICIALS NOT AFFECTED BY LAYOFFS

Mayor Kiel's Son Paid $5.25 a Day for 229 Days, Including Sundays and Holidays, as "Sewer Repair Man."

Some city employes who are closely related to high officials have escaped the unemployment which, since April 1, has fallen upon hundreds of other municipal employes. This fact was ascertained yesterday by a Post-Dispatch reporter who examined the payroll.

Due to the city's financial condition it has been necessary to lay off many employes during the last few months. Some have been given "vacations" without pay, while others have been instructed to take an indefinite leave. Many of these were men with families. It is estimated that a total of about 1000 have been laid off at various times.

Clarence Keil, the Mayor's son, is carried on the books as a "sewer repair man,' at a salary of $5.25 a day, and the payroll shows he has not missed a day in seven and a half months, including Sundays and holidays.

Paid for Sundays and Holidays.

The fiscal year began April 1. The latest city pay day was Nov. 15. The records show that Clarence Kiel was paid for 229 days' work during that period, which is precisely the total number of days, including all Sundays, the Fourth of July, Labor day, Decoration day, Armistice day and Columbus day.

Director of Streets and Sewers Fisk, when questioned, said: "Yes, he's always on the job." He said he thought young Kiel might be laid off later.

Another employe who is working is Miss Maude McKelvey, daughter of James H. McKelvey, Director of Public Safety. She gets $150 a month as a stenographer in her father's office. When Director McKelvey was asked if he intended laying her off along with the others, he retorted that he would use his own judgment in the matter and that he neither sought the advice nor minded the criticism of those who objected to his course.

Other Relatives on Jobs.

Charles Cunliff, an engineer in the Park Department at $215 a month, is a brother of Nelson Cunliff, Director of Public Welfare. He has had steady employment. Many others in the department have been laid off—none, however, engaged in his kind of work.

Mrs. Clara Kinsey, a daughter-in-law of President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, was selected Aug. 1 from a list of applicants for the position of draftsman in the Park Department, and given "temporary" employment at $130 a month. She is still working.

Department heads from time to time have emphasized that it is lack of money, not lack of work, that is responsible for the enforced vacations. The departments of Streets and Sewers, Public Safety and Public Welfare have suffered most heavily.

Special Tax Department Objects to Enforced Vacations.

Leo Osthaus, manager of the Special Tax Department under the Board of Public Service, yesterday issued a statement contending that the order of President Kinsey of the board that all employes shall take a six weeks' vacation without pay between this time and April will work a hardship on the public if applied to his department, and that there is danger of errors which may cause losses to contractors who depend upon the department for accuracy in the special tax bills which they accept for payment of work.

Osthaus said there was a possibility that street work under special tax bills would be delayed, as he doubted that the contractors would be willing to accept the bills unless the records of the department were kept "up to the minute," which he said would be impossible with a decreased force of clerks.

There are now 20 employes in the department. Osthaus said they were working 10 hours a day, and that there should be 27 employes. All special tax bills for the improvement of streets and sewers are prepared in the department. These are a first lien on the real estate, and to be accepted by contractors must be correct, not only as to the amount of the tax, but also as to the description of the property. Last year the expense of the department was $430,144. This year the appropriation is only $291,000. Osthaus said he had explained the situation to Comptroller Nolte and that Nolte had told him insufficient funds made retrenchment necessary, and that it was Kinsey's duty to determine where the retrenchment should be in the departments under him.

DEATH OF TAXI CHAUFFEUR IN AUTO CRASH ACCIDENTAL

His Two Companions, Injured in Collision With Street Car, Are in Serious Condition.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in the death of Joseph W. Framber, 31 years old, of 4168 Ashland avenue, a Yellow taxicab chauffeur, who was fatally injured when his machine crashed into the side of a Wellston car at Twenty-third and Morgan streets Thursday afternoon.

The street car was going east. Framber, with two friends, was going south. Witnesses said he was driving very fast. He swerved to the west, in an attempt to pass behind the car, but struck it at about the second seat from the rear. His companions, Jesse Allison, 24, of 4182 Ashland, and Fred Howard, 30, of 4168 Ashland, are in a serious condition at the city hospital.

It developed that when the three left Twenty-third and Howard streets in the taxi, they were followed in another automobile by Clarence Allison, Jesse's brother, who intended to bring Jesse and Howard back from the Hotel Statler. A few seconds after the taxicab hit the street car, Clarence Allison's machine collided with another automobile at Twenty-third and Franklin, a block north, but nobody was hurt.

$4,718,469 PAID OUT FOR ROADS IN MISSOURI IN TEN MONTHS

Expenditure Was for 174.67 Miles of Road, Including 124 Miles of Gravel Highway.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 26.—The State Highway Department has paid out for road construction in Missouri during the first 10 months of this year a total of $4,718,469.97, according to figures compiled by Edwin Austin, secretary of the department. This includes State, Federal and local funds.

That expenditure obtained the construction of 174.67 miles of hard-surfaced highway and 118 miles of graded earth road. The hard surface was principally gravel, as shown by the following: Gravel, 124.58 miles; concrete, 47.4 miles; brick, 2.19 miles, and asphaltic penetration, .15 of a mile.

With two months in which to add to this record for the year, the total expenditures are expected to reach $5,500,000 and the mileage a larger total also.

JAPANESE GROAN UNDER TAXES, BUT LOVE THEIR FLEET

People Demand That Burdens Be Reduced, but Consider Opposition to Eight-Eight Navy Plan Traitorous.

EDUCATED TO UPHOLD PROGRAM

Execution of Hughes Reduction Plan Would Mean Much to Workers in Japanese Shipyards.

By ADACHI KINNOSUKE,
A Staff Correspondent of the Jiji Shimpo, Tokio.
(Copyright, 1921.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The Japanese statesmen with our delegation here, especially the leaders of the Seiyu party now in power, do not seem to know whether to laugh or weep.

Suppose, for example, the conference would come to a successful end with everything settled along the principal lines of the American proposal which made this cynical old world catch its breath at the opening session. And the conference is steadily gravitating in that general direction. Just what would happen?

What would await the Japanese delegation back from Washington at Yokohama? A reception such as greeted Togo back from the battle of the Sea of Japan, or the funeral which threatened the homecoming of Baron Komura from Portsmouth?

The captains of Japanese industry and some of our leading financiers are in Washington as members of the Japanese Business Men's Mission to America. They were discussing the effect of the sudden cession of naval expansion on Japan. Her shipbuilding interests would feel the effects sooner and more seriously than any other. In Japan shipbuilding is an infinitely more important industry than it is in the United States in its relations to other industries.

Effect on Workmen.

Something like 250,000 workmen would be affected by the sudden cancellation of the warship construction one way or another. Then there will be thousands of navy men who would find themselves jobless also. But these are not the reasons which are darkening the furrowed brows of our statesmen.

"Just how the mass of our people take the settlement of the Washington conference—that is the all-important matter," said Sennosuke Yokota, a prominent leader of the Government party, who came to the Washington conference as the personal representative of the late Premier Hara.

"There is nothing peculiar in the way our people look at the armament questions—academically. They listen to arguments and they discuss the thing much like the American or any other people. When our people get together and talk of the unbearable taxes, they demand that the naval-building program of new warships be cut to the bone without loss of time. Put them now before the junk pile and tell them to help to scrap our ships. Would they shout for joy?

"People Would Denounce Scrapping"

"As a matter of fact, they would do nothing of the sort. They would, on the contrary, cry their souls out denouncing the people—more especially the Government—which would commit such an unforgivable sin as to dare to scrap the superb ships which represent more than 300,000,000 yen, every copper of which stands for bitter toil."

Three hundred millions, one must admit, are quite a little sum to the people who toil 12 hours a day for less than 50 cents in American money, as most of them do.

"The financial aspect of it is by no means the only thing involved. The story of translating the dreams of the famous eight-eight program of the Japanese sailors into a fact has been both tortuous and dramatic in the extreme.

"For years, you must remember, the imperative need of the eight-eight fleet for the defense of the empire has been preachd to the taxpayers of Japan. The men of the Seiyu party preached it to them, and the men of the opposition party preached the same gospel.

The Campaign for Navy.

"Build up the eight-eight fleet, we all told the people, or be prepared to die as a self-respecting nation. What is the result? The people of Japan everywhere have come to believe that anyone who dared to breathe a word against the heroic sacrifices which every man and woman was making for the consummation of this one national aspiration was branded not merely as a traitor but as a monster.

"These are the things which I am afraid our American friends would find it very difficult to see. One and all of the American criticisms and comments are based on pure logic. They ignore the historical and sentimental background which is highly essential for practical statesmanship to take into consideration. Otherwise the wisest measure often ends in failure."

LEBANON, ILL., TO BE CANVASSED IN M'KENDREE COLLEGE DRIVE

Everybody in Lebanon, Ill., the home of McKendree College, is to be asked in the next three or four days to contribute to the $1,500,000 endowment fund of the college, for which a campaign is being made. Lebanon will lead off in the intensive campaign throughout Southern Illinois, which is to end at midnight of Dec. 21.

Preliminary to the town drive the faculty members and students are making their pledges. Three members of the faculty yesterday subscribed a total of $5000.

Organization for the town and township was effected at a public meeting Friday night at the Lebanon City Hall. O. S. Meinecke was elected president and Ben Peach secretary. An executive committee of 15 will meet this afternoon to plan solicitation and fix the goal. An indicator is to be placed to show the progress of the local drive.

While the Lebanon campaign is in progress plans will be perfected for the St. Clair County drive, which will lead off in the State-wide campaign because the college is a St. Clair County institution. A meeting will be held at the First Methodist Church in East St. Louis tomorrow night and one at the Belleville Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night. Mass meetings are planned to be held next Sunday afternoon in Belleville and East St. Louis and Lebanon, to be addressed by former Gov. Deneen.

STATE ASKS FOR NEW WILLMANN TRIAL

Motion Based on Fourteen Technical Points and Does Not Give Details.

The State yesterday filed a motion in the Circuit Court at Clayton for a new trial in the civil action to oust Sheriff Willmann of St. Louis County from office. A jury last Wednesday decided the case in Willmann's favor, returning a verdict that he was not guilty of neglect of duty, as charged, in failing to enforce prohibition laws.

As no criminal charge was involved the State has right of appeal. The motion for a new trial is based on 14 technical points such as are usually included in a motion of the kind and does not go into detail as to specific reasons for asking that the case be retried.

Sheriff Willmann, prior to the filing of the motion announced that he would submit to the County Court the need of appointing three or four additional salaried deputies with a provision for automobile expenses, to have no duties except to patrol the county at night and to make special investigations. He pointed out that he had only six deputies who could be called upon for active service, three of whom were occupied with clerical and service work. The other three work night and day, he said.

W. U. FELLOWSHIP AWARDED

F. W. Schramm to Do Electrical Engineering Research.

A two-year fellowship in the school of electrical engineering at Washington University given by an electric company, has been awarded by Dr. W. L. Upson, professor of electrical engineering, to F. W. Schramm, a graduate in the 1921 class. Under the terms of the fellowship he is to devote half his time to classroom and laboratory instruction and the other half to research.

This fellowship marks the introduction of a branch of work in the school that Prof. Upson began last year to establish—that of a special department for research upon problems brought by electrical concerns to the school for solution.

Attention, Furnace Users

If you do not know you should know that when the smokepipe taps the heating radiator your heat goes up the flue with the smoke. A diving flue prevents this, as heat will not go down. The open dome Radiator is self cleaning because the flames reach all parts and permit no carbon to form, while the closed dome must be constantly cleaned of the quick-forming carbon cobwebs or there will be no heat.

The Anderson Furnace

has the diving flue, which saves coal; has the open dome, which saves coal; sells for less than any other make, which saves your pocketbook. Call us for estimates.

MY FAVORITE STORIES
By IRVIN S. COBB

One of a series of short funny stories by the celebrated American humorist which will appear daily in the Post-Dispatch

THE UNTRAVELED STRANGER.

BACK in those sinful days which ended in January, 1919—that is, officially they ended then—a group of congenial spirits were gathered one Saturday night in a local life-saving station on the principal corner of a small Kentucky town, engaged in the quaint old pastime of pickling themselves.

In the midst of these pleasant proceedings the swinging doors suddenly were thrust asunder and there entered one of those self-sufficient, self-important persons who crave to tell their private affairs to others, and who, in those times, preferably would choose as a proper recipient for their confidences, a bar-keeper—as I believe the functionary was called.

The newcomer wedged his way in among the congenial group of patrons, and apropos of nothing which up until then had been said or done, he introduced himself to the notice of the company by stating in a loud clear voice:

"The doctor wants me to take a trip. I haven't been feelin' the best in the world and my wife got worried—you know how women are—and tonight she sent for the doctor. And he came over, a little while ago, and he asked me a lot of foolish questions and took my temperature and five dollars and then he says to me that I should rest up for a spell and travel 'round. He says I ought to go out to California and see the sights. Ain't I been to California? I have—more'n half a dozen times. Ain't I seen every sight there is in the whole State of California? I have. As a matter of fact, I don't mind tellin' you fellers that I've been everywhere and I've seen practically everything there is."

At this a gentleman who was far overtaken in stimulant, slid the entire length of the bar, using his left elbow for a rudder, and anchoring himself alongside the stranger he hooked a practiced and accomplished instep on the brass rail to hold him upright and he focussed a watery, wavering, bloodshot eye upon the countenance of the other and to him in husky tones he said:

"Excus'h me, but could I ash you a ques'shun?"

"Sure, you could ask me a question," said the stranger. "Go ahead."

"The ques'shun," said the alcoholic one, "'s as follows: Have you ever had delirium tremens?"

"Certainly not," snorted the indignant stranger.

"Well, you big piker!" said the inebriate, "then you ain't never been nowhere—and you ain't never seen nothin'"

LOTTERY INDICTMENTS AGAINST TAILORS DISMISSED

Judge Hall Rules "Suit and Overcoat Club" Plan Did Not Constitute Such an Offense.

Indictments against Michael and Joseph Bena of 953 Catalpa street, William E. Satterfield of 1110 North Market street, and Daniel E. Madison of 5841 North Market street, charging the establishment of a lottery by means of a "suit and overcoat club," were dismissed Friday by Circuit Judge Hall, who held that the charge in the indictments did not constitute a lottery.

The four men were indicted following complaints of persons who said they had paid $1 a week to the City Tailoring Co., 203 Benoist building, under the assurance that whenever the number on the weekly coupons given them corresponded with the last three figures of the day's report of the Clearing House, they would receive a suit or overcoat. If the numbers did not match by the time they had made 50 weekly payments, they would receive the suit or overcoat.

The scheme ended with a number of customers unsatisfied when the Clearing House Association discontinued publishing daily reports.

Soldan Again to Get Yale Bowl.

The bowl was given as a football trophy in the High School League about eight years ago, Soldan winning it this year. Cleveland High won the bowl last year and Soldan the year before. Duncan Meier, vice president of the Yale Alumni Association, will preside at the exercises. A varied program by the students and Soldan's Glee Club has been arranged for the afternoon.

LACLEDE GAS LIGHT CO. TO LET GALLAHER GO

Veteran Employe Fired in Connection With Transactions With Former Union Electric Man.

William Gallaher of 4208 West Pine boulevard, head of the commercial department of the Laclede Gas Light Co., has been informed that his services with the company will not be needed after Jan. 1, because of certain transactions connecting him with William Fay, 5540 Pershing avenue, former employe of the Union Electric Light and Power Co.

Isaac H. Lionberger, counsel for the company, said yesterday that Gallaher was dismissed by resolution of the board of directors at a recent meeting for "indiscretions rather than for willful wrongdoing."

Gallaher has been in the service of the Laclede Company 28 years, and Lionberger said the directors regretted the drastic action, but felt it to be necessary to the welfare of the company.

A suit filed last month by five St. Louis concerns against the Union Electric and the North American Co., which controls it, brought disclosures from Fay in a public statement that while he was in the employ of the Union Electric he was given money by the North American Co. to bribe Laclede officials to prevent the Laclede company from taking customers from the Union Electric.

Gallaher at the time admitted that he had accepted money from Fay, explaining that it was for private engineering work in which he assisted Fay at odd times. He specifically denied he had conspired to prevent business being taken from the Union Electric.

FILIPINO, EX-SAILOR, ENDS LIFE

Note Says His Heart Was "Too Soft to Live."

Santiago Byasa, 28 years old, of 3818 Enright avenue, a Filipino, who had served in the United States Navy, shot himself in the heart at 11:30 a. m. yesterday in his room. He died a few minutes later.

Vincent Salaza, who resided at the same address, said Byasa had been despondent for several days. Byasa left a note in which he said that his heart was "too soft to live."

MAN ACCUSED OF KROGER ROBBERY ACQUITTED ON ALIBI

Jacob Streib Proves by Witnesses He Was in Police Court on Day of Holdup.

A jury in the Circuit Court Friday acquitted Jacob Streib, 24 years old, 1323 South Seventh street, of a charge of first degree robbery, after he had established an alibi. He had been identified as having held up a Kroger grocery at 3942 Iowa avenue at 12:35 p. m., July 1, when $46 was taken from the manager, John B. Phillippi.

Streib proved by witnesses that on the day of the robbery he left Police Court, where he had been a defendant, at 12:10 p. m. Witnesses testified that he boarded a street car and went to his home. A woman witness testified that she met him when he arrived home at 12:45 p. m. She was sure of the time, she said, because she had consulted her wrist watch.

The identification of Streib was not considered strong, because it was shown that it was based on his ownership of a green cap and a pinchback coat and not because he bore a facial resemblance to the robber.

$10,000 VERDICT FOR WOMAN AS RESULT OF M. A. C. FIRE IN 1914

Mrs. Bertha Magill, who conducts the Wayside Inn at Watson and Denny roads, St. Louis County, was given a verdict for $10,000 in the Circuit Court yesterday against the Boatmen's Bank as damages for the effects of her experience in the Missouri Athletic Club fire of March 9, 1914, her escape from which, she alleged, was hindered by inadequate fire escapes.

Mrs. Magill's husband, R. C. Magill, was manager of the club and they lived on the fifth floor. Mrs. Magill testified that she tried to reach two fire escapes, but was cut off by the flames, and finally made a descent through an inclosed stairway at the rear of the building. She testified that she suffered from the smoke and has since been subject to nervousness and nightmares.

At a former trial of the case Mrs. Magill was given a verdict for $15,000, the full amount sued for. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court and a new trial resulted. Meantime Mrs. Magill raised her demand to $40,000.

To Keep Hair Wavy, Lustrous, Beautiful

The use of the hot curling iron cannot be too strongly condemned. It means death to the hair eventually. Moreover, it is entirely unnecessary. The hair can be kept beautifully wavy and curly to any extent and in any form desired, by using the simple and harmless silmerine method. Liquid silmerine should be applied to the hair before doing it up, using a clean toothbrush. In about three hours you will find that a very pretty "natural" wave and curliness has resulted, and the effect will last quite a considerable time.

Liquid silmerine is really beneficial, and is not sticky nor greasy. Neither does it streak the hair nor stain the scalp. You need get only a few ounces from your druggist. The best way is to divide the front and back hair into from four to six strands and to moisten each strand separately from root to tip

An Ancient Secret of Health Revealed

Why is physical perfection, which was the rule ages ago, the exception today? Why did the ancients, knowing little or nothing of medical science, live longer than does modern man, who is surrounded by thousands of safeguards?

Scientific authorities now know that the answer to these questions has been revealed in part by the discovery of vitamines. These are minute, organic substances, found in certain raw foods. They are essential to life and health. Without them, weakness and disease soon appear and finally death results.

But these essential substances are easily destroyed or neutralized by milling, canning, pasteurization, cooking and other modern processes of preparing food. In other words, the people of today get a scant supply of the life-giving vitamines, while the diet of the ancients contained vitamines in abundance.

Famous physicians agree that many weaknesses and diseases, heretofore unexplainable, are due to "vitamine starvation," and can be cured by giving concentrated extracted vitamines. For best results, the extracted concentrates must contain all three of the vitamines known to science—fat-soluble A, water-soluble B and water-soluble C. These three vitamines in highly concentrated form, extracted by expensive processes from pure, raw foods and unmixed with drugs of any sort, now await you at your druggist. Ask for them by the full name—

Alexander Vitamines

(GUARANTEED PURE CONCENTRATES.)

Thin People Gain Weight Quickly.

By taking a few grains of Alexander Vitamines with each meal, thin folks quickly become plump, the weak gain strength, the ailing throw off their burden of illness. Puny children grow into robust youngsters when these essential concentrates are added to their diet. Alexander Vitamines help ward off contagious and infectious diseases and tend to prevent rickets, scrofulous conditions, early decay of the teeth and other troubles which may have serious results later in life.

Absolutely No Drugs.

Alexander Vitamines, although powerful for good, are absolutely harmless. They contain absolutely no drugs. They may be taken freely at any time by persons of any age and in any conditions. If you want to gain weight, clear your complexion and store up a reserve supply of "pep" and energy, begin taking Alexander Vitamines today.

Be sure to get the genuine, guaranteed, drugless product. Do not be deceived by preparations represented to contain vitamines in combination with drugs. Vitamines need no assistance from drugs, and nothing is gained by "compounding" them with strong drugs. To get the wonderful benefits of vitamines, you need nothing except Alexander Vitamines.

At All Druggists

The genuine Alexander Vitamines are sold by all good druggists. Ask for them by the full name—ALEXANDER VITAMINES.

LONDON DAILY MAIL SHIES AT WELLS' ANTI-FRENCH VIEW

Editor Says Writer's Bias Destroys Value of Articles in England and Asks for More 'Decorous' Language.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

The New York World this morning publishes the following:

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The Daily Mail this morning publishes the following correspondence.

"From the editor of the Daily Mail to its special correspondent at Washington: 'Nov. 23: Tell Wells that the anti-French bias of his recent articles is destroying their value in this country and in France and they are thereby falling very far below the magnificent promise of his first article, which, I think, was one of the best newspaper articles ever published. If he is unable to adopt a more reasonable tone toward France I shall be very reluctantly obliged to discontinue their publication. Urge him very strongly to consider the injuries which France has endured from Germany in the last 50 years and to remember that in best-informed quarters German militarism is considered by no means dead.'

"From special correspondent at Washington to the editor of the Daily Mail: Nov. 23. I have delivered your message to Wells, who says he cannot change his opinions, but is willing to consult with me regarding any omissions which may be desirable in future articles.'

"From editor of the Daily Mail to its special correspondent at Washington: 'Nov. 24. Tell Wells I am not asking him to change his opinions, but to express them more decorously with regard to France.' "

Commotion in Fleet Street.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Fleet street was all agog today over the publication by the Daily Mail of its request to H. G. Wells to modify his views about France to coincide with its editorial line. The writer of "A Londoner's Diary" in the Evening Standard says:

"It is the most extraordinary chapter in the history of editors and contributors I can recall.

"I have nothing to say regarding the actual dispatch of these telegrams: Mr. Wells is not in the position of an obscure contributor. The dispatches published under his name could not in fairness be subject to editorial correction, but the editor would have been fairly within his rights in refusing publication. It is the publication of these instructions, not their dispatch, which seems to me wholly inexcusable.

"What interest can the public conceivably have in the correspondence of editor and contributor? It is the very essence of such correspondence that it should be regarded as confidential. The whole value of Mr. Wells' opinions consisted in the fact that they were Mr. Wells'. Some people agree with Mr. Wells, others are violently at variance with him, but the great number of people who care very little for what the Daily Mail thinks on any subject care a great deal for what Mr. Wells thinks on every subject, and it would be quite fatal for Mr. Wells' standpoint if the idea gained currency that his views were colored by editorial suggestions at any time."

The caption under which the Daily Mail publishes the Wells articles shows that they are written for the New York World and published by the Daily Mail by arrangements with the New York World and the Chicago Tribune. Furthermore, the Daily Mail prefaces each article with the statement that it represents Mr. Wells' personal views, for which the Daily Mail takes no responsibility.

World's Position Shown.

The World's position in the matter is exemplified by this dispatch:

"H. G. Wells, Washington, D. C.—We are astounded by the discovery of the Daily Mail's effort to inspire or direct your articles. The World resents this. You are free from instructions or influence of any nature except the obligation to write what you believe to be the truth. The Mail is guilty of grave discourtesy in attempting to give you instructions. The only requirement the World has to make of you is to write what you regard as the truth, and that you have been doing. Disregard all attempts of anybody to tamper with you. Your responsibility runs to yourself and to us, and to no one else.

"Herewith we add copy of telegram sent today to the representative to the Daily Mail:

" 'In what circumstances did the Mail assume to attempt to give instructions to Wells, who is writing for the World, not the Mail? The Mail has been guilty of grave discourtesy and one that the World, and no doubt Mr. Wells, resents. Any communications with Mr. Wells are to be made through this paper. We must insist that you refrain from furthtr communication except through us.

" 'Mr. Wells is under the same instructions as every member of the World staff, which are that there are no instructions beyond the obligation to write the truth as he sees it, with no leaning one way or the other because of any implied position of the paper's editorial policy. The World's news columns have no policy except the publication of truth.'

"With regard,
"THE NEW YORK WORLD."

SCIENCE TEACHERS FOR MORE POPULAR COURSES IN GRADES

Several Express Opinion That Much Now Taught to the Young Should Be Transferred to the Colleges

MORE MUSIC AND READING SUGGESTED

General Insistence That Teaching of Musty Theories Should Give Way to Popular Examples.

Children are often "bored to pink tears" by the dryness of some public school courses, and thus fail to learn, it was intimated by more than one speaker during the meeting of the Central Association of Science and Mathematics Teachers, held Friday and yesterday at Soldan High School.

Boys and girls under 16 years old, as a rule, are interested in things that have color, motion and personality, it was pointed out—they do not care for general principles, systematized knowledge, large classifications. They want concrete examples, things that appeal to their imagination. The result of instilling general principles is to have them memorize a lot of words which mean nothing to them, one speaker declared.

For Practical Subjects.

Prof. William Wade Walters, whose experiments in original methods of instruction at the Ashland School, in this city, have attracted wide attention, said in a paper which he read, that a considerable part of the courses now taught in the grade and high schools should be transferred to the colleges. Most of the children to whom they are now taught are too young to assimilate such knowledge, he declared.

This was an example of a noticeably "modern" note which pervaded the sessions. There was a general insistence that the teaching of musty theories should give way to more popular and personal examples, and to more practical subjects.

The teaching of disease prevention is lamentably absent from the average public school, it was stated by Dr. Clarence W. East, a child hygiene expert on the staff of the Illinois Health Department. Two of his own children had been graduated from high schools, he said, and "so far as learning anything of disease prevention went, they came out, like the Hebrew children from the fiery furnace—without a smell of fire on their garments."

Examination of the average public school text book reveals nothing at all concerning the prevention of disease, he continued. "Household science is uniformly taught from the viewpoint of economy, not health. Engineering and electricity are generally before the mind of the pupil who takes physics. The majority who take chemistry are thinking of commercial chemistry. Athletics is in the hands of coaches who must produce winning teams, and not infrequently produces cardiac and neurasthenic patients. Physical culture is taught from the standpoint of aesthetics and athletics."

He added humorously that the civics class sometimes visits the municipal water plant, but with a view to studying the unit cost per householder and the revenue to the city, rather than the properties of the water.

Sidelights on Physics.

Prof. C. F. Hagenow of Washington University enlarg on the highly colorful and interesting sidelights which relate to the science of physics, and emphasized their value in attracting the interest of the students. Thus, he said, Huxley once pointed out that the discoveries of Pasteur saved France a sum which, in actual money, was equal to the total indemnity of the Franco-Prussian War.

Few things are more romantic than the history of great scientific achievements, he said. By giving students the opportunity to see the "human interest" aspect of such things, their interest will be greatly heightened. And this is true of research as well as of the practical application of its results, he added. The story of Oersted, Ampere and Faraday's labor is as interesting and dramatic as that of Edison and the others who have applied the results.

He wanted to see science "popularized," so that the "man in the street" would understand what was going on. Too much specializing is present in the schools and universities, he said. The general viewpoint is distorted.

Misinformation Illustrated.

Illustrating the misinformation current about such subjects, he told of the sophomore who, in his examination paper, described inventors as "men who use their brains to find out things," and scientists as those "who find them out by accident."

Prof. Walters, in his paper, quoted from a recent article in the Post-Dispatch by H. G. Wells, on the contrast between education in Japan and America and Europe. Japanese children, he recalled, were taught obedience, loyalty and submission. In Europe and America, freedom of thought and the critical faculty were encouraged. He predicted that time would force changes in the Japanese system.

Asked by a reporter to elaborate on his statement concerning the transference of certain courses from the schools to the colleges, Prof. Walters said that the geographies and histories now used in the grades are much better adapted to senior high schools and the freshman year of colleges.

He would substitute for them, in the grades, instruction which it is now claimed "there is no time for." He suggested, in point, far wider courses in music, color, reading, conversation, physical activity and play.

Must Teach What Child Can Learn.

"The child must be taught what it can learn," he said. "There is no use climbing on one's dignity and declaring that children must be taught this and that. It is impossible to teach them things that they are incapable of learning, and sensible people will see the truth of that statement. Teach them the things in which they are interested, and you won't go wrong.

"They can be taught about plants without touching the science of botany; they will learn about people and places when they would weary of standard geography. Good stories will give them useful information and good English when grammar would tire them."

The association comprises several hundred teachers, mainly from schools in Illinois and Missouri.

Thyrsus Matinee Wednesday.

Thyrsus Society of Washington University will make its initial appearance of the season next Wednesday and Thursday, with a matinee Wednesday, in the Artists' Guild Little Theater. Three one-act plays are to be presented, "The Proposal," by Czechov, coached by Robert Kissack; "Trifles," by Susan Glaspell, coached by Mr. Carson, and "The Florist's Shop," by Winifred Hawkridge, coached by Mignon Rosenthal. The performances are to be open to the public.

Thin or run-down folks who want to quickly get some good, firm, solid flesh on their bones, fill out the hollows and sunken cheeks with strong, healthy tissue and build up increased energy and vitality should try taking two of Mastin's tiny yeast VITAMON tablets with their meals.

Mastin's VITAMON Tablets contain a proper dose of highly concentrated yeast-vitamines, as well as the two other still more important vitamines (Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble C) all of which Science says you must have to be strong, well and fully developed. They seem to banish pimples, boils and skin eruptions as if by magic, strengthen the nerves, build up the body with firm flesh and tissue and often completely rejuvenate the whole system. By getting the precious yeast vitamines in this concentrated tablet form you run no risk of causing gas or upsetting the stomach and can be sure of quick, gratifying results. If you are thin, pale, haggard, drawn-looking or lack energy and endurance you will find it worth while to make this simple test: First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next take Mastin's VITAMON—two tablets with every meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking Mastin's VITAMON Tablets regularly until you are satisfied with your gain in weight and energy. It is not only a question of how much better you look and feel, or what your friends say and think—the scales and tape measure will tell their own story.

YOUR WEIGHT INDICATES YOUR HEALTH. ARE YOU GAINING OR LOSING?

If you want that firm-flesh "pep" and healthy glow of youthful beauty, eat whatever you like, but be sure to take two of Mastin's Yeast VITAMON Tablets with every meal to supply the precious vitamines your foods lack. Then watch the truly amazing results.

IMPORTANT! While the remarkable health-building value of Mastin's VITAMON tablets has been clearly and positively demonstrated in cases of lack of energy, nervous troubles, anemia, indigestion, constipation, skin eruptions, poor complexion and a generally weakened physical and mental condition, they should not be used by anyone who OBJECTS to having their weight increased to normal. So rapid and amazing are the results that success is absolutely guaranteed or the small price you pay will be promptly refunded and the trial will cost you nothing. Be sure to remember the name Mastin's VITAMON—the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet—there is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. You can get Mastin's VITAMON Tablets at all good druggists, such as all Enderle Drug Stores, Johnson Bros., Judge & Dolph, E. A. Medler, Pauley's, Wolff-Wilson, Huger's.

To Avoid Rough, Coarse, Chapped, Blotchy Skin

Most skins require constant grooming at this season to keep them from becoming unduly red, blotchy, coarse, rough or harsh, or if such condition has developed, to overcome it. In such cases it is particularly inadvisable to keep piling on cosmetics which clog the pores and make the complexion worse than ever.

It's a lot more sensible to use ordinary mercolized wax, which literally absorbs a spoiled complexion. Apply the wax, like cold cream, before retiring. Next morning, in washing it off, you'll wash away fine, flour-like particles of the unsightly cuticle. Repeat for a week or more and you'll have an entirely new skin—soft, white, spotless and beautiful as a child's. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any druggist's, is all you'll need.

Some skins wrinkle easily in winter. There's an excellent remedy in a harmless wash lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. This will quickly eradicate all lines and furrows.

LARGE SUPPLY OF MONEY AVAILABLE FOR INVESTMENT

Is Outstanding Feature of Present Situation—Bonds Continue in Active Demand at Increasing Prices—Similar Condition Abroad.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Eyes and hopes still center on Washington. The expected slowing down in the negotiations has appeared and rumors of hitches and disagreements have been plentiful. These circumstances have been most disturbing, however, to the newspaper correspondents. Their pessimism has been as marked as it has been surprising. The principal actors, on the other hand, have preserved that element of good feeling which is essential to putting through a bargain. This is, after all the main point. Conflicting desires are to be expected; the will to agree must be preserved.

Agricultural Products Rally.

"The markets react meanwhile with reference to their particular sets of influences. Just as the burst of optimism which surrounded the opening of the conference was unable to exert more than a slight and transitory influence on the course of prices, so has the slowing down of the negotiations been devoid of any adverse effect on the general trend. Cotton has rallied smartly because the Census Bureau's ginning report set at rest fears lest earlier underestimates of the crop might be even greater than the trade expected. Wheat was able to show a sizeable recovery because of drouth in the Southwest.

"These rallies in agricultural products are distinctly helpful if held. They will reinforce our economic structure at its weakest point. They will contribute to the restoration of the farmer's purchasing power. Combined with the better prices for crude oil and with the greater activity in building construction, they justify a more hopeful attitude towards the rate of business recovery. There are signs, too, that the expected winter letdown in the steel industry will be slighter than had been anticipated.

"A great supply of investment funds is, howver, the outstandiing feature of the present situation. Despite irregularity and uncertainty in stocks, bonds continue to be in active demand at increasing prices. New issues, furthermore, meet with conspicuous success. The latest example of the condition of this market is furnished by the $11,200,000 issue of State of Pennsylvania highway bonds. After active competition, the successful syndicate obtained the issue on a bid which represents a 4.35 per cent yield basis. When offered to the public the yield will be 4.20 per cent.

Situation Same Abroad.

"Such an exhibition of investment resources is not merely domestic. Strength in gilt edged securities has been a feature of the London market for some months past, despite heavy competition from new issues. The magnitude of the latter factor may be seen, in fact, from the circumstance that within less than six months £60,000,000 sterling worth of colonial and semigovernment securities have been floated at London. These and many other issues have been absorbed with ease, while old outstanding issues have continued their advance.

"American business men should ponder meanwhile the attitude of their British compeers with regard to the allied war debts. Entirely aside from the question of what this country does, and quite as a matter of good business, responsible British bankers and industrialists have asked their Government to consider reduction or remission of the continental war basis. They do not urge this in any impulsive spirit of idealism, but only after having thought through the implications of such an act. They do not, furthermore, favor unconditional remission.

"These British business men realize that important benefits may be gained by the course they advocate. They would make budgetary and currency reforms in the favored countries a primary condition. Such reforms would contribute to the stability of the exchanges and so act as an important aid to the restoration of normal business relationships. The whole financial and business structure would feel the effects of a strong stabilizing influence. The British realize that their own prosperity is bound up with that of the rest of the world. If our own attitude in the matter shows that we are lacking in such a realization, our trade will suffer. In addition, we are likely to find ourselves regarded as the ungenerous partner in many of the world's best markets."

Market Irregular Saturday.

"The complexion and trend of the stock market and the character of trading were unchanged during the first half of today's short session. The fact that the upturn of Friday had continued without interruption right up to the close was responsible for the large volume of buying orders on hand as the market opened today. Rails started forward with Union Pacific and Canadian Pacific as leaders and continued in that direction to the extent of a point or so until the movement was interrupted with profit-taking early in the second hour. The tendency to take profits was noted earlier among industrial shares, and this, coupled with the appearance of active buying in several issues not featured previously during the week, gave the market a highly irregular appearance.

"There was a generally firm tone in the foreign exchange market, sterling checks advancing a quarter cent to $3.98¾. French francs 3 points to 6.95 cents and Italian lire 4 points to 4.08 cents. One notable exception was found in Belgian bills which moved 10 points lower.

"A decrease of $15,082,560 in the surplus reserves of the Clearing House banks this week brings the total of this item down to $14,536,410. Time deposits increased $1,906,000, while net demand deposits were reduced by $4,407,000. There was a reduction of $24,760,000 in loans and discounts and of $15,141,000 in the reserves of member banks in the Federal Reserve Bank.

Linens were being sold freely at retail and were in better condition in primary channels than for a long time.

PPREHENSIVE OF NY FURTHER CUT IN MONEY RATES

itish Writer Fears Lowering of Rate in U. S. Would Only Be Justified by Con- inuance of Extraordinary Trade Inactivity and Un- employment.

ial Cable to the Post-Dispatch nd New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Arthur W. Kid- editor of the Bankers' Magazine financial editor of the London rning Post, in his financial re- w today, says:

"Like the famous King Charles' d in "David Copperfield" repara- demands and inter-allied debts fated to come up in connec- with the Washington confer- . Nevertheless, such discussions deprecated in responsible quar- s here, where it is considered that ey should be absolutely subordi- to primary disarmament and litical matters now under discus- . Still a recrudescence of discus- of these matters is natural ugh and easily explained.

"Traders at every turn are con- nted with the hampering effects chaotic exchanges and they despair a solution in view of the gigantic ernational debts. Hence we have federated industries, which as- bled here Wednesday, advocating t German reparations be paid in- asingly in labor, such as the struction of a channel tunnel, and er grandiose schemes. However, se most closely in touch with the blems confronting the conference w that the Washington plan of aling first with the essentials for ernational peace is correct, and cause British policy and American licy on this vital matter are iden- al, feeling is still hopeful, in spite the fact that mischief makers are road.

Cheap Money Discussion.

"It is not surprising that amidst ch chaotic conditions international de remains dull, and unemploy- nt naturally aggravates social oblems. The Government is being nfronted with the necessity of al- ost subsidizing employment and oc- sioning inflation in the process of ing so, or, as an alternative, of imulating semisocialistic Belshe- k agitations.

"In spite of your high Federal Re- rve Bank reserves and Gover- r Harding's reported talk of eaper money we are inclined to ubt whether money will become ch cheaper. If so, it will only be tified by the continuance of ex- ordinary trade inactivity and un- ployment, which in turn suggests ious social developments not, how- , confined to this country.

America and Britain should con- trate unitedly on the best means r restoring international trade and vided the outcome of the disar- ment side of the Washington con- ence should be satisfactory it is sidered that it should be followed a conference on financial and onomic conditions.

The Railway Situation.

"There is considerable anxiety over railway position, following Gov- ment control. Of the £60,000,- of final compensation the Gov- ment will pay one-half to the lways in January, the second in- llment being due a year later. January payment is sufficient maintain dividends at the previous rs' level providing the railways earning interest charges, but no traffic returns have been pub- hed since decontrol there is com- te ignorance as to the precise ition."

FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The Federal Reserve statement's combined ratio, published a day late this week on account of the Thanksgiving holiday, went to 72.30 per cent, the highest point in about four years. This compares with 71.8 per cent a week ago, and is the sixth consecutive advance since the middle of October. Further gains in gold holdings, accompanied by reductions both in deposits and note circulations, explains this week's improvement. The Federal reserve note circulation at $2,389,900,000 marks a new low for the year, and stands 28 per cent lower than a year ago. Greatest improvement was shown by the bank at Cleveland, which gained more than 5 points in its adjusted ratio. The bank at New York lost slightly, but still leads Boston, which last week strengthened its real position by 3½ points.

Foreign Exchange and Domestic Money

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange market review today says:

"There was a division in the movement in foreign exchange market during the week, the direct result of the attitude taken by the French representatives at the armament limitation conference at Washington, which apparently created a new problem for the representatives of the nine nations to solve and clouded the position on finances on the continent with a great degree of uncertainty. The first unsettlement in the market came at the beginning of the week, when there was a lack of buying orders in exchange on the leading centers, and in the first two days sterling was extremely heavy, falling nearly 3 cents for demand to $3.97½, contrasting with the strength in the preceding week, when it moved up to the new high record for the year of $4.00¼. A better tone prevailed in the market on Wednesday before the Thanksgiving holiday, but yesterday's trading, when early declines in London were followed by a crumbling away of rates on the continental countries included in the former group of war allies.

"Belgian exchange was the heaviest sufferer on this movement, showing a loss of nearly one-half cent to the franc, and French and Italian exchange both sustained material declines. On Wednesday sterling again showed a strong tone with demand moving up over 2 cents and cables once more crossing the $4 mark, but weakness prevailed yesterday when demand sold down to $3.98¼ and some other European exchanges sold at new low figures for the week.

"German exchange was heavy, reaching close to its former low record. The former neutral group was exceptionally strong, moving in much the same manner as in previous periods, prior to completing arrangements for reparations payments. Swiss exchange moved up again to above 19 cents to the franc and exchange on Holland also made a vigorous advance. It was commented on again that the wide movements in the European exchanges were not due to any large offerings, but that buyers simply receded as advices were received of transactions made in moderate amounts."

"There was a generally firm tone in the foreign exchange market Saturday, sterling checks advancing a quarter cent to $3.98¾, French francs 3 points to 6.95 cents and Italian lire 4 points to 4.08 cents. One notable exception was found in Belgian bills, which moved 10 points lower.

WHEAT FUTURES RALLY AT CHICAGO AFTER LOWER RANGE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—After a weak start wheat rallied sharply on the Chicago Board of Trade today, and finished ⅛ net higher for December and ½c higher for May. Corn lost ⅛c to ⅝c; oats were unchanged to ⅛c lower, and lard and ribs from 5c to 15c lower. January pork, the only live option in that commodity, showed a net gain of 40 points.

What's early decline was due mostly to easier closing prices at Liverpool, ascribed generally to receipts of Australian wheat. The usual Saturday evening-up trades contributed to the shrinkage in prices, but considerable bullish sentiment was in evidence on the breaks.

Towards the end reports came that partial failures of the rice crops in Japan and China would probably cause buying of wheat by those countries and about the same time a goodly portion of the local pit element found themselves short and started to cover. Sale of a cargo of No. 2 hard on ocean on a basis of $1.27½ was seized by the bulls as cheering news, and the upturn continued to the end.

Trade in corn and oats was light and those grains responded to conflicting influences by ready fluctuations. Some profit-taking and over-Sunday trades tended to keep prices down. There were some small sales of corn here for the seaboard, but the samples market was generally lower.

Provisions had no support from packers and scattered selling affected lard and ribs beyond the usual limits for such transactions. Hogs were strong at the yards, but prospects of big receipts in connection with next week's livestock show caused pit traders to disregard that factor.

UPWARD TREND MARKS WEEK'S TRADE IN WHEAT

Wheat prices tended higher in the trade during the past week.

Although some reduction in the visible supply of wheat had been looked for, the trade received the announcement of a decrease of 4,500,000 bushels in the weekly total. Comment, too, on the fact that exports for the season to Nov. 1 were 16,000,000 bushels more than for the corresponding period last year entered as factor in the market. Reports telling of activity in buying on the part of Japanese in Australia and of less favorable crop conditions in Argentina tended further to stimulate the upturn of prices, and another bullish factor was drouth damage reports from Kansas. Temporary setbacks which took place in values were ascribed almost altogether to profit-taking by holders.

Export demand for corn helped to strengthen corn and oats.

Provisions advanced with hogs.

Cash Grain Saturday.

In the cash grain market Saturday there was a better demand for wheat with fair milling inquiry. Red winter wheat was steady and hard, about 2 cents higher. Cash corn was steady to 2c lower. Oats were steady to ½c lower.

Sales were made at the following quotions:

No. 2 red winter wheat, $1.23@1.24; No. 3 red winter wheat, $1.18@1.20; No. 4 red winter wheat, $1.07@1.15. No. 3 white oats, 35c; No. 4 white oats, 34c.

Local wheat receipts Saturday, which were 39,600 bu, compared with 58,800 week ago and 110,400 last year, included 20 cars local and 13 through. Corn receipts were 81,900 bu, compared with 68,900 week ago and 41,600 last year, included 47 cars local and 16 through. CATTLE RECEIPTS ARE MODERATE, PRICES UP

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Wk.	Prev. Wk.	Yr. Ago.
Cattle and calves	18,692	26,928	18,787
Hogs	73,912	88,228	74,469
Sheep	5,755	8,827	6,795
Totals	98,359	123,983	100,051

Aided by sharply curtailed receipts, the cattle market, following a period of sharp depression, reacted favorably at the St. Louis National Sockyards last week and scored uneven advances in many departments. Hogs, on the other hand, were in large supply, and though butcher weights closed about steady for the period, lighter offerings show a lower average. Fat lambs advanced rather sharply during the week. The recent decline in cattle, together with the fact that demand is more or less limited during Thanksgiving week, prompted conservative shipments from the country. Quality of the offerings was about the poorest of the season, arrivals including virtually no strictly good corn-fed steers or yearlings. The bulk of native beef steers available cleared from $5 to $6.85, one car of matured steers topping for this class at $7.90. Yearling steers sold up to $8 and a consigument of steers and heifers mixed brought $8.50. The above classes average 25c to 50c and in spots 75c higher for the week. Western steers, of which there were about 40 cars received, failed to show improvement, but, on the contrary, finished about 15c to 25c lower. Practically all were from South Texas and shown in the quarantine department. Most sold from $4.60 to $5.40. The gains registered in butcher stock applied to yearling and heifer stock and cows. Bulls closed little better than steady. Yearlings were of poor quality and most cleared from $3 to $6.50, the market, quality considered, ranging about 25c to 50c higher. Butcher cows moved up 25c, 50c in spots, sales varying largely from $3.25 to $4.50, with tops at $5 and $5.25. Canner and cutter cows closed slightly higher, the range being largely from $2 to $3. Beef bulls continued mainly from $3.75 to $4.25, and bolognas from $3 to $3.75. Demand for stocker and feeder cattle was not especially urgent and the market as a result failed to show any material improvement. The low end for steers was $3, with best quotable at $6. The bulk of all again cleared from $4 to $5. Veal calves rebounded sharply for the week, top advancing from $8 Friday a week ago to $10, at the close this week. Improvement was influenced by light receipts and a slightly improved demand. Heavy calves and stockers failed to share in any improvement.

Hog Market Irregular.

Continued liberal receipts and a lull in the demand caused moderate declines on pigs and light classes of hogs the past week, but butcher and medium weight hogs, while at one time 15@25c lower, have fully recovered. A significant trade feature was the elimination of practically all distinction in a price way between pigs and hogs, this being even more marked at one time during the week than now. Pigs and lights are 25@50c lower than a week ago, selling at $7.15@7.25, largely, against $7.40@7.75 last Saturday. Dropping off in demand due to the arrival of Thanksgiving was the principal reason for the slump. Bulk of the butcher hogs sold late in the week at $7.10, with the top at $7.15. A week ago they sold from $7@7.15. Rough hogs are steady at $5.75@6 for sows and $4.50@5 for stags. Receipts, owing to the fact that there were only five market days, were lighter than a week previous, totaling 73,912, against 88,228, but the average run per market day was slightly larger, totaling 14,782, against 14,704.

Lambs Reach $10.

Lamb values the past week went to the highest level in over four months, $10 being paid on Friday for the first time since early in July. This price was awarded for choice local fed westerns, averaging 70 pounds. Native lambs sold on the same day at $9.50@9.75, also the high time in a like period for native lambs. These prices reflect an advance of $1 or more for the week, as at the close of the preceding week $8.75 was the top quotation. Cull lambs are 50c higher, bringing $6@6.50. Fat sheep have undergone no change and were slow sale at $3@3.50. Receipts for the period were approximately 6000, comparing with 8827 a week previous.

Horse Market Lower.

Under a rather indifferent call from buyers, the horse market suffered further declines in some departments during the week. The most marked loss occurred in chunks and work horses, these averaging in many cases $10 per head off. Chunks cleared from $40 to $60 mainly, with draft types available at $100 to $150 for tops. The Southern trade also average a shade lower. Plain southerners moved at $25 or under, with fair to medium at $50 and best at $75 or $80. Receipts of all horses on commission for the week totaled slightly more than 500 head and a like number of mules were received. The mule market suffered from narrow demand and values ruled barely steady. Most of the offerings were cleared at auctions and sales were barely steady.

COTTON CLOSES LOWER IN WEEK-END TRADE

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—There was further scattering liquidation in the cotton market at the opening today, and first prices were 2 to 12 points lower, with January selling off to 17.75c, or just 50 points below the recent high level. Offerings were comparatively light, however, and the market was steadied by covering at the decline, with prices showing rallies of several points from the lowest. Trading continued quiet and was considered chiefly in the way of evening up accounts for over the week-end. Reports from the domestic goods trade indicated no improvement in demand, sales of print cloths at Fall River being estimated at only 75,000 pieces, and the amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance was placed at only 148,000, against 230,000 last year.

Liquidation became more active during the middle of the morning owing to disappointment over the failure of week-end reviews to show an improvement in the demand for goods, expectations of a falling off in exports and complaints of a poor spot demand. January sold off to 17.57c and the market closed easy at a net decline of 25 to 37 points.

Short Stories—but Long Laughs

EACH DAY the Post-Dispatch will publish on the Comic Page a short funny story by Irvin S. Cobb, celebrated American humorist. Cobb's work and travels have brought him into touch with the best of American humor, and he has collected the most interesting of the stories which he has heard for readers of the daily Post-Dispatch.

Mr. Cobb's Personal Message to Daily Post-Dispatch Readers:

I always have loved short funny stories. I prefer them to be new, but an old one, properly told, is often better than a new one, badly presented. For the series in the POST-DISPATCH I have sought to choose those short stories which have made the greatest appeal to me. Some of them I heard years ago; others no longer ago than yesterday. I have tried to set them for publication in the form in which they were uttered in my presence.

I hope the reader may enjoy hearing them as much as I have enjoyed the work of compiling this collection.

SUITS AGAINST FIVE FORMER ILLINOIS STATE TREASURERS

Attorney-General Asks Accounting of Interest Collected by Russell, Mitchell, Ryan, Small and Sterling.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 26.—Suits for accounting against five former State Treasurers were entered today by Attorney-General Edward J. Brundage.

The suits cover the six terms preceding that of the present Treasurer, Edward E. Miller, and are directed againts all State Treasurers who held office between 1909 and 1921. State Auditor Andrew Russell, who was Treasurer twice during the period, is defendant in two suits.

The other former Treasurers involved are: Gov. Len Small, Lieutenant-Governor Fred E. Sterling, William Ryan Jr. and Edward E. Mitchell.

Disclosures made through the investigation of the State Treasury which resulted in the indictment of Gov. Small, Lieutenant-Governor Sterling and Vernon S. Curtis, banking associate of Gov. Small, last July, furnished the evidence on which the civil suits were based, the Attorney-General's office announced.

$10,000,000 Loan Included.

Lieutenant-Governor Sterling is defendant in a suit which alleges that $10,000,000 of State money was used by Treasurer Len Small and the late Senator Edward C. Curtis for their own personal profit, a loan which was continued under the control of Curtis after Sterling, Small's successor, became Treasurer.

The bill alleges that shortly after Small became Treasurer in 1917 he entered into a scheme with Curtis to use large sums of State money for their private gain. Small, at the expiration of his term, the bill continues, removed from the Treasurer's office books and records relating to deposits, loans and interest earnings.

Immediately upon the commencement of his term as Treasurer, the bill further alleges he became a party to a plan through which the money was to continue under the control of Curtis ,that additional sums were to be turned over to him, and that the scheme was carried out, to the personal profit of all in the alleged plot.

Money thus handled was carried on the books in an account charasterized as the "safe fund," in order, the bill states, to conceal the real facts.

Curtis, according to the bill, issued pretended certificates of deposit in the "Grant Park Bank," an institution which the prosecution declared did not exist.

Invested in Notes.

A large part of the money handled through the arrangement was invested in notes of Armour & Co. and Swift & Co., Chicago packers, and the bill charges that Curtis collected approximately $2,000,000 interest from the packers.

Intreest turned over ta the State by the former treasurers sued, according to figures given by Attorney-General Brundage's office, follow:

Mitchell (1911-1915), $166,221.93.
Ryan (1913-1915), $180,953.92.
Russell (1915-1917), $142,883.39.
Small (1917-1919), $450,010.12.
Sterling (1919-1921), $990,121.85.

The bill adds that interest unaccounted for during Sterling's term exceeds $1,000,000.

The Sterling suit also contains the charge that during his entire term there were at all times several million dollars on deposit with Dunlap, Russell & Co. of Jacksonville, a bank in which Auditor Russell is interested, and that the treasury office holds no records showing payment of any interest to the State by the Russell bank.

Masonic Temple Dedicated.

The new Masonic Temple on Harrison avenue, near Adams street, Kirkwood, was dedicated yesterday by Kirkwood Lodge, No. 484. The building cost $35,000. Frank R. Jesse, past grand master of the Missouri Grand Lodge, presided and introduced the principal speaker, Dr. C. H. Briggs of Springfield, also a past grand master. Other speakers were Charles A. Fitzgerald and Roy H. Simms.

Vaudeville Invades Jefferson; Musical Show at American

A Study of the Causes of Present Theatrical Slump — "Famous Mrs. Fair" Next Week, With Blanche Bates and Henry Miller.

THE theatrical business is in the throes of the worst season of its history, and the repercussion of the disaster which has sent show after show to the warehouse in New York, and tumbled play after play into the discard on the road, today for the first time strikes St. Louis. The Shubert-Jefferson this afternoon turns to vaudeville and announced that it will play two-a-day features whenever the theater, because of the collapse of scheduled plays, would otherwise be dark. By a coincidence, the American this week is occupied by a musical show of the $1.50 sort.

In New York, the great theatrical factory of the country, with its 60 playhouses, shows have been crashing down at the rate of several a week; on one single night four plays, all in the first weeks of careers on which they had been confidently launched, went to quick oblivion in the dismal niches of the histrionic charnel houses. Outside of New York, conditions have been even more discouraging.

The managers have attempted various consoling explanations. The weather has been against them; or the authors have failed; or the swollen costs of production have become prohibitive. Worst of all, they insist, economy has seized the public; it will no longer spend money for entertainment with the reckless prodigality of other years.

"Seemingly," stated the New York World in a recent study of the situation, "it is only the managers themselves who are not at fault. Circumstances in a difficult year in every branch of commercial activity are hostile to them, and over all these adverse circumstances they profess to have no control."

Managers Are at Fault.

HOWEVER, continues the article, the slump in the theaters cannot be accounted for by explanations so transparently false as these, "and the real reason for the heavy losses of the last 10 weeks and the public's apathy towards its favorite form of entertainment lies directly at the door of the managers themselves.

"There may be left a few among them who persist in the old-fashioned view that theater management is an artistic calling. But to the many it has become an enterprise in real estate speculation. The new houses—a dozen or more—that, in the last three years, have been added to New York's already ridiculously over-extended list, have not been built, with perhaps two or three exceptions, for the legitimate production of plays, but for rental at high prices to the adventurers and speculators who now infest what was once an esthetic profession.

"The owners of these mushroom temples of art, who call themselves producers, never produced anything but a real estate lease. They are indifferent to the quality of whatever is offered on their stages or to the public's attitude towards it, so long as the rent check is paid on Saturday night. And they take care that this is the preferred item which comes out of the box office receipts. Between their method of theater management and the running of a garage there is no appreciable difference."

An extreme overproduction of plays, the article proceeds, has been the logical outcome of putting theater ownership upon a speculative real estate basis. "The temptation of empty stages has been too great to resist. Managers, with a few conspicuous exceptions, who were once content to remain retailers, have, during the flush times immediately succeeding the war, become wholesalers in the Punch and Judy trade. They have overstocked the market and cheapened the quality of their product. Suddenly they have discovered that their customers are no longer willing to pay for shoddy goods. * * *

Fit for the Waste Basket.

"IF the theater were still on a legitimate basis, all but a few of the 22 recent failures would never have reached the stage. They would not have progressed beyond the waste basket of a producer who took pride and artistic satisfaction in the quality of the dramas which his theaters offer to the public.

"The theater-goers themselves have remained cheerful under exasperating conditions. They have been as numerous as the works put before them have warranted. The discernment they have exercised in their patronage of plays is a hopeful sign of improved taste. Their refusal to be duped by the illiterate effusions that have joined the silent procession to the storehouse is the surest augury of a better future time."

That, thus far, no show booked for the American this winter has come to grief, is the assertion of Manager Edward D. Smith. It was clear, he says, to leading showmen at the beginning of the current season that war-time prosperity was over, and that the business would narrow itself down to a case of the survival of the fittest.

"The producers who supply the American," he continued, "sent on tour only those attractions they felt sure would survive. Theatrical failures of the season have, in the main, been those of producers who entered the business under war-time conditions. Now, when expert showmanship is required, they throw up the sponge.

"Personally, I believe that the roughest part of the going has been encountered. The people of St. Louis have proved that they will support good shows."

Vaudeville at $2.

IT is $2 vaudeville—this being the top price for the evening entertainments—which comes to the Jefferson this afternoon; it will also be the city's first savor of the brand of variety amusement which the Shuberts have entered only this year, and in which they are said to have invested a fortune. The entire bill of 10 acts is sent down from the Apollo Theater in Chicago, which will continue to supply the local playhouse whenever it would otherwise be idle.

Marie Dressler is the headliner, and she appears in a travesty of the Barrymore family, "Lionel, Ethel

Odd Facts About Picture Players and Films

A REPORT has been wafted through filmdom that D. W. Griffith will film "Faust" in upper Bohemia amid the wild forests and old ruins and castles along the Danube. It is rumored that this tremendous production will be so acclaimed in Europe and have such a prestige that when it is brought to this country it will preclude all censorship.

Harry Carey is the exemplification of the theory that environment is the most powerful influence in life, for although he was born in New York and became a member of the New York bar, he has become so identified with his adopted West that he is now a typical Westerner from his walk to his mental attitude.

Priscilla Dean and her husband, Wheeler Oakman, have built a colonial house in Beverly Hills, Cal., near the home of Charles Ray.

Rudolph Valentino is 32 years old. He was born in Taranto, Italy.

Jack Pickford has been directing, not acting, and is about to start making his own productions. He directed his sister, Mary, in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and his next picture will be a screen version of "A Tailor Made Man."

Tom Mix has a saddle valued at $300.

Tom Moore broke into stage life as a member of a Broadway stock company.

Miss Cornelia Skinner appeared with her father in Kismet. She is now with him in Blasco Ibanez' stage play, "Blood and Sand."

Driving half-wild Alaskan sled dogs with a strong strain of wolf in them is no simple task, even for the skilled "musher" of Alaska, let alone for motion picture actors, no matter how well drilled they may be in many difficult activities. John Gilbert and William V. Mong who appeared in "Shame" were obliged to learn the difficult art of dog driving. There were several upsets of the sleds before the actors gained proficiency.

Victor Halperin, former co-editor with Elbert Hubbard of the East Aurora magazines, is the latest addition to the ranks of scenario writers.

Alma Rubins' hobby is collecting match boxes from all parts of the world. She got the idea from one of Anatole France's books, and assures her friends that she finds it a perfectly fascinating pursuit. She says it is remarkable how many varieties of boxes are to be found.

There are 128,000 sprocket holes in 1000 feet of film. Each foot of film contains 16 frames, that is, individual pictures, and each side of the frame has four sprocket holes. The distance between sprocket holes is just .114 of an inch. A sprocket hole is .078 of an inch wide.

What They're Doing in the Movie Studios

A Kinograms News Weekly cameraman cranked away as movie fans arrived at the opening of a new Chicago Theater, and then later in the evening those in the audience saw motion pictures of themselves passing the box office. The negative was developed and dried, the positive film print exposed, developed and dried, all within the unusual time of one hour and nine minutes.

American manufacturers are awakening to the possibilities of using movies to capture Uncle Sam's share of the foreign trade. A picture organization in Chicago is working on three pictures for use exclusively in showing American products to foreign buyers. English, Japanese and German manufacturers are making a very extensive use of motion pictures in placing their products upon the world's counter.

William Gillette Back in Erie Crook Play

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.

THE feature of the week was the return of William Gillette to the stage after many years. In his familiar role of author-actor, he appeared Monday night at the Empire Theater before a house packed to the doors with affection and good will. His new vehicle is "The Dream-Maker," an entertaining and unabashed melodrama, based on a story by Howard E. Morton.

The plot deals with a gang of blackmailers who trap an innocent woman. An old physician—played by Gillette—rescues her from their toils and makes her believe that the torturing ordeal through which she has passed was nothing but a feverish dream.

The aged doctor comes riding into the play out of space as if on a broomstick, his quality is so uncanny. There is something so fantastic about him that you are almost prepared for the great scene in which he routs the villains through the simple and medical expedient of making them sick at their respective tummies. This nausea motif seems to be something new in crook melodramas.

It is really a Sherlock Holmes grown old who whimsically and effectively thwarts the crooks who roam through the new piece. It is the same William Gillette, though grown older, who plays the part in the same ringing whispers. Time has changed the look of him, but he foils time by making this new character look as gray and bent as possible. However, time has diminished in no degree the actor's charm, skill and distinction of former days.

Marion Green in New Play.

OTHER new offerings of the week were "Suzette," a work of French origin, with which the Princess Theater returned Thursday night to intimate musical comedy; and "The Wildcat," a musical play transplanted from Spain, where it was played 2700 times, and produced tonight at the Park Theater. "Suzette" has been acclimated to America by Roy Dixon and Arthur Cutman, and in the cast are Frank Lalor, Marie Astrova and Victor Morley. "The Wildcat" was elaborately staged with a company of 100, headed by Marion Green, Sam Ash and Dorothy South.

Annual Revue With Special Music Is the Week's Added Feature at New Grand Central.

Missouri—Rudolph Valentino and Agnes Ayres in "The Sheik."
Liberty—Betty Blythe in "The Queen of Sheba."
New Grand Central—Charles Ray in "Two Minutes to Go."
West End Lyric — Douglas MacLean in "Passing Thru"

RUDOLPH VALENTINO and Agnes Ayres have the leading roles in "The Sheik," which is the week's picture feature at the Missouri Theater. This is based on a much-talked-about novel by Ethel M. Hull, and is said to follow the story in every essential detail.

Diana Mayo, an English girl, decides to make a journey into the Sahara Desert against the wishes of her brother and her friends. At Biskra she disguises herself as a slave girl and enters a gambling house, where Sheik Ahmed meets her. The Sheik abducts here, and the story thereafter has to do with her efforts to escape from him, her terrifying experiences with a desert bandit, her rescue by the Sheik and her discovering at the climax that he is in reality an English nobleman.

The book on which the picture is based was condemned by many critics as cheaply sensational, but the beauty, if not the dramatic content of the film version has been said by some critics to compensate for the shortcomings of the plot.

After waiting a long time, St. Louis at last has a view of "The Queen of Sheba." It is the big attraction this week at the Liberty. The sumptuous Betty Blythe has the role of the Queen, and it is by this time generally known that her raiment in many of the scenes is extremely scant. Fritz Lieber is the Solomon of the cast.

There are many big moments in the Queen of Sheba. One of the first thrillers is when Sheba finds the crown to Kingdom washed up by the sea. Then along come the horsemen of King Ahmud and kidnap Nomis, Sheba's sister. She is carried off to the palace of the usurper, but drowns herself in a pool after her betrayal by the King. Ahmud, to save his crown, married Sheba, only to be slain on his wedding night. Sheba sets out to visit King Solomon and when they meet a great love comes to them. Sheba next comes into prominence when she drives the horses of the King against those of the Princess Vashti in one of the most thrilling chariot races ever staged.

The latest edition of the annual New Grand Central Revue is one of the added entertainment features at the New Grand Central Theater this week. This will include specialties, a beauty chorus and incidental jazz music by Gene Rodemich's orchestra. The picture feature is Charles Ray in "Two Minutes to Go." Here he has the role of a college boy who realizes his life's ambition to get on the college football team. There are several football scenes with the versatile Ray as the gridiron hero.

"Passing Through," a Thomas H. Ince production, with Douglas MacLean in the star role, is the attraction at the West End Lyric. The hero takes the blame for a bank shortage to shield another. The train which is taking him to prison is wrecked and he escapes and goes to work on a farm where he falls in love with the farmer's daughter. He "makes good" and in the end he is vindicated and wins the girl. This is all handled in farce comedy style.

The closing thrill of Larry Semon's latest comedy, "The Sawmill," is exciting enough to make most of the so-called stunts of the average serial look tame. The comedian and his girl escape from the clutches of a murderous gang of ruffians by climbing a gigantic redwood tree. The pursuers chop down the tree and Larry lassoes a nearby tower. As the tree crashes to earth he and the girl swing out like a human pendulum. Then comes the big surprise when one of their enemies cuts the rope. Larry has decided that the next trip he makes through the air will be in an airplane or something really safe.

Bad weather has held up the final shots of "The Prodigal Judge." For an entire week the large cast reported each morning at the steamboat wharf to make a location trip up the Hudson River, only to be dismissed because the sky was so blackly overcast. The eighth day was clear, so the trip was made and some beautiful exterior scenes were taken.

James Lippincott, former football star, world war veteran and actor, writes from Panama that Torchy comedies make a great hit in that country. Lippincott, who was a star center on the Swarthmore team and later served with the First Engineers all through their campaign, plays the part of a gum-shoe detective in "Torchy's Frame-Up," the latest of the comedies.

"Let's Go—to the South Seas" is the latest of a series of "World Wanderings" being released by Educational. It shows one way of beating the landlords and the high cost of food, clothing and other things.

at the Casino Theater, when the star of "Tangerine" reported she would be unable to go on. She is said to have made a phenomenal recovery.

Out in Chicago they insisted that Margaret Anglin hold in her hand the sword carried by George Washington during the Revolution while she recited a poem for the Historical Society on Armistice day. * * * May Irwin, generally understood to have retired permanently from the footlights, will take part in the Actors' Fidelity League entertainment tomorrow night at the Henry Miller. Her skit will be "The Obstinate Family," an old favorite, in which she used to play with Augustin Daly, now rewritten and retitled "A Woman's Won't."

Maclyn Arbuckle is writing his autobiography, which may be entitled "From Judge to Jester." * * * A novel method of selling plays has been introduced by a play broker here. Instead of delivering the manuscript to a producer for a reading, he put on a matinee rehearsal of a new comedy at the Selwyn Theater. Many managers attended, but not one of them bit. * * * A special Thanksgiving day matinee celebrated the 500th performance of "The First Year" at the Little Theater.

At the Theater Guild.

THE Theater Guild's second production this season will be "La Souriante Madame Beudet," a Parisian play by Denys Amiel and Andre Obey, which for American purposes has been christened "The Wife With the Smile." * * * James Crane, Charles Francis, Paul Everton, Wright Kramer and Blythe Daly have been engaged to support Elsie Ferguson in Zoe Akins' new play, "Varying Shores," which is now in rehearsal. * * * Langdon McCormick's melodrama, "The Storm," is running Tennyson's brook a close second. It will be revived again this season, and may attempt a New York run before setting forth once more to thrill the hinterland.

The School of the Theater, recently incorporated at Albany, will open operations soon at the Lexington Theater with a course of lectures on the drama and a class in scenic design. Among the sponsors are Walter Hampden, George Arliss, Elsie Ferguson, Frank Craven, Arthur Hopkins, Robert Edmund Jones, Jose Ruben, Ernest Truex, Rachel Crothers, Kenneth MacGowan, Brock Pemberton and Stuart Walker.

Some 12 plays, besides Drinkwater's have been written about Abraham Lincoln, research has just shown. One of the most peculiar was by a Frenchman named Reuter. In the third act John Wilkes Booth appears as a suitor for the hand of Lincoln's niece, and is spurned by the President. Jefferson Davis, in the next act, spurs the rejected suitor to revenge. In the sixth act Lincoln is witnessing not "Our American Cousin," but "King Lear," when Booth assassinates him in a fury of disappointed love.

Dark theaters are becoming familiar to many cities. Last week, in Baltimore, both the Auditorium and Lyceum were idle, leaving the entire spotlight to Lenore Ulric in "Kiki," at Ford's. * * * Gilda Gray, of the "Snapshots of 1921" troupe, who was one of the founders of the shimmy, has introduced a new wriggle called the "Arearea." The "Arearea" is said to be the rage on the South Sea Islands.

and John," which was seen here last year in one of the Winter Garden shows. She is aided by John T. Murray and Arthur Geary, also Winter Garden performers.

Llora Hoffman, a coloratura soprano, also familiar here in Shubert shows of other seasons, has a song act. Ryan and Lee have a comedy skit called "Shoes;" Walter Brower has a monologue, and "The Slave of Fashion" is presented by Francis Renault, female impersonator. Others on the program are Ethel Davis, singer; Libby and Sparrow, in a dancing spectacle; Selma Braatz, juggler; Roy Harrah and Irene Rubini, in "A Little Bit of Everything," and the Kremka brothers, strong men.

The American's offering, beginning tonight, is another of a series of musical shows based upon the cartoons of George McManus. It is entitled "Bringing Up Father in Wall Street," and in it appear Jiggs, the shrewish Maggie, their daughter, "Dinty" Moore and other familiar characters.

The American announces two plays of high class for the near future. Next week Blanche Bates and Henry Miller will appear here in their long-lived success, "The Famous Mrs. Fair," and during the following week Mrs. Fiske is to play in her brilliant comedy, "Wake Up, Jonathan." The Jefferson's promise for next week is Eddie Cantor in "Midnight Rounders," a Century Theater production.

College Club Night.

THE College Club of St. Louis has bought the house for opening night of "The Famous Mrs. Fair," and will resell it for the benefit of scholarships in the form of gifts and loans to young women who cannot find means to go to college. The College Club is the local branch of the American Association of University Women, and its scholarship benefit performance is an annual event. Last year enough money was realized to give 11 scholarships and to make several loans.

Gus Edwards, popular song writer, is the Orpheum's headliner this week in his "Song Revue of 1921," his fifteenth annual production. His company of juvenile support includes Alice and Hazel Furness and Chester Fredericks. Others on the bill are Frank Van Hoven, hilarious magician; Jean Adair, in a one-act comedy, "Any Home;" Joe Rome and Bou Gant, eccentric dancers; Ford and Cunningham in a song and dance skit, "Even as You and I;" Van Cleve, with his trick mule, and "Sandy," described as a wee Sir Harry Lauder.

Features at other houses are as follows: Columbia, Princess Kalami and William Kao in "A Hawaiian Night's Entertainment;" Grand, Harry Larkins and four others in a musical and dancing skit; Rialto, the four Mar brothers in a musical act, "On the Balcony;" Empress, "Good-Night Nurse," a satire on eugenics, with Martha Golden and Ursula March, and Garrick, Charlie Robinson in a musical show, "Big Parisian Flirts."

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

"Wah-Wah," four inches tall and about eight inches long. A wag at the studio, spying Miss Lee with the diminutive dog, shouted: "Oh, see little Eva and the bloodhound."

Jack Holt and company are working at Summit, Cal., on special scenes for "The Parson of Panamint."

Gloria Swanson, in her latest picture, "The Husband's Trade Mark," helps fight off a band of Mexican bandits and jumps into the Rio Grande. When the company was on location in Mexico recently she also jumped into the Rio Grande to help rescue five Mexicans from drowning, an incident not in the picture.

"I see you're doing a picture with a lot of chickens in it," said a studio wag to Tom Forman, who is directing Thomas Meighan's new picture, "If You Believe It, It's So," at the Paramount studio. Forman looked over a case of white leghorns located in a set representing a freight office. "You're wrong," said Tom, "it's a bathing picture," indicating a trunk full of soap which had broken open, scattering its contents on the floor.

Corinne Griffith has long been known as one of the most graceful stars on the screen, but it is not realized that this is in large part due to her long and arduous training as a dancer. Ever since she became a star for the Vitagraph, she has been taking lessons from distinguished European and American teachers of the terpsichorean art. The results of this long course of training are made manifest in her latest pictures, "The Single Track" and "Received Payment," both of which have been completed and are soon to be released by Vitagraph. In "The Single Track" one attractive feature is the pageant scene in which Miss Griffith impersonates Salome and does a mystic, Oriental dance before Herod, and "Received Payment" provides an opportunity to show her skill in the more modern toe dance. Attired in a fluffy ballet costume, she gives an exhibition of this difficult type of dancing.

One of the "extras" in the new William Duncan production, "No Defense," is a man of really distinguished American descent. This is John Buffaloheart, a full-blooded Indian, who plays the role of the redskin who shields the hero when he is escaping from the law. His striking face with its high cheek bones and straight, black hair, gives a vivid touch of realism to the production.

Two prominent California middleweights, Joe Coffey and Ted Frenchie, fight a real round in a new Christie comedy being made for Educational with Dorothy Devore. The picture is to be called "One Stormy Knight," and shows Dorothy at a prize fight and as a knight in armor. In addition to the real bout, a "motion picture scrap" is also staged between two Christie comedians, Henry Murdock and George Burton.

New Lutheran Congregation.

A new congregation of the United Lutheran Church in America is being organized in South St. Louis by the Rev. Eldon C. Dolbeer, field missionary of the Illinois Synod. The first meeting was held in the Rubicam Business College, Grand avenue and Arsenal street, last Sunday, where services will be continued each Sunday until a permanent location is selected. Services will be in English.

Summer is Coming in South America

WINTER has gone from South America. The days are warm and beautiful. Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, Buenos Aires, set like jewels in the sun warmed coast, await you. Great new ships take you there in 11 days.

A vacation or a business trip to South America need not take more time than you can conveniently spare. The soft warm days of a South American Summer are now only 11 days away.

American Ships Are Fastest

The S. S. American Legion and the S. S. Southern Cross, are the fastest ships to South America. They are your ships—owned by the U. S. Government and operated for the U. S. Shipping Board by the Munson Steamship Lines. They offer comforts hitherto unknown in South American travel.

Staterooms are spacious, equipped with beds instead of berths, electric fans, running water, toilets, bed reading lamps. Nearly all have private baths. Social rooms are luxuriously appointed. All furniture is of the finest woods in the Adam style. A positive system of forced ventilation keeps the entire ship cool.

American food, prepared by chefs who know how to cook for Americans, gives these ships a cuisine which is unexcelled on the seas. The installation of this service is a great achievement which marks a new era in South American travel.

YOU CAN'T BRUSH OR WASH OUT DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring, use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really Better Than Ready-Made Cough Syrups, and Saves About $2. Easily and Quickly Prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple homemade cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

DYED HER WRAP, SKIRT, SWEATER, AND FADED DRESS

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can dye or tint faded, shabby skirts, dresses, waists, coats, sweaters, stockings, hangings, draperies, everything like new. Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—then perfect home dyeing is guaranteed, even if you have never dyed before. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods. Diamond Dyes never streak, spot, fade, or run.

HOARSENESS
RELIEVED AT ONCE

Menthol, derived from the peppermint plant is universally used by nose and throat specialists as a natural healing agent. It soothes and cools irritated membranes and relieves hoarseness. Its action is powerfully antiseptic.

Dean's Mentholated Cough Drops are compounded with just the proper amount of menthol and pure cane sugar to make them doubly effective. Pleasant to taste —always beneficial. Now 5c plus war tax. Dean Medicine Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

CAUSE OF POWER PLANT ACCIDENT UNEXPLAINED

L. H. Egan Says Such Electrical Disasters Usually Destroy Their Own History.

Louis H. Egan, president of the Union Electric Light and Power Co., was asked by the Post-Dispatch to describe the events and their causes which on Monday caused widespread interruption of street car and electrical service. Street cars on seven lines were stopped for more than 30 minutes and moved at slowed speed later in the day.

Egan replied that electrical accidents, particularly those of magnitude, commonly destroy their own history and for that reason a positive assignment of causes of Monday's accident was difficult.

"However," he said, "so far as we can learn, the failuer was preceded by some disturbance at the Midland station of the United Railways. What that disturbance was can only be conjectured. The only man in the station unfortunately lost his life, so his testimony is absent.

Influence of the Disturbance.

"The influence of that disturbance, whatever it was, manifested itself immediately on a cable of the Union company connecting the Midland station with the Page boulevard station of the Union company, a distance of about six blocks. It short-circuited the cable.

"Now the consequences of a short-circuit follow no law. Electricity, docile enough when confined to the channels science has found for it, becomes as eccentric and erratic as a bolt of lightning when short-circuited. The phenomena displayed cannot be foreseen or explained. When the cable short-circuited is of the size of that affected Monday the consequences are apt to be—and were—terrific.

"A cable is three copper wires, each heavily insulated against the other with impregnated paper compressed as tightly as the paper in car wheels, and the three together similarly insulated against outside influences and confined in a lead outer covering, the whole forming a cable about three inches in diameter.

Cause of Short-Circuit.

"The three copper wires, by nature, seek to join forces, but are frustrated by the heavy insulation. The breaking down of that insulation from any cause permitting two or three of the copper wires to merge their energy constitutes a short-circut.

"The effect is instantaneous and calamitous. Imagine some giant hand dropping a mountainous rock in mid-Atlantic. The succeeding waves roll out and, if unchallenged, spend themselves in the vast reaches of the ocean. But let them meet some obstruction and they break with the force of a tidal upheaval.

"So it is when a short circuit occurs. A tremendous electrical power, many times the energy normally carried by the cables, is loosed in a great surge than runs throughout the network of cables forming the system. Like the waves, this surge expends itself in some directions, but its pressure bursts from wherever there happens to be a weak spot, manifesting itself in blown switches, in other short-circuits or groundings or in some way destroying machinery.

"The magnitude of a short-circuit surge is incalculable. As an experiment, it was arranged some years ago at Chicago to deliberately short-circuit a large generator, arrangements having been made to measure the power it developed. The great machine rocked and trembled and discharged as high as 25 times its rated capacity to produce.

How Keokuk Power Is Received.

"All the power that Keokuk sends to St. Louis is received on two large copper 'bus' bars (omnibus—carry all) at the Page boulevard station. One set of these bus bars sends forth Keokuk power to the United Railways. The other sends forth Keokuk power to the Union system. These bus bars are connected so that, to all intents and purposes, the railway's cable system and the Union cable systems form, in such an emergency, one large network, reaching miles in all directions.

"The cable that was short-circuited Monday is close to this seat of enormous power and attached to one of the bus bars. So when it short-circuited, the effect was to send the total volume of Keokuk power, multiplied many times—or millions of horsepower—in a great surge that pulsated through both the Railways and Union systems, and burst its channels at whatever spots that great circulatory system happened to be weak.

"It destroyed the switches at a swiching station on Big Bend road in St. Louis County, thus shutting off service in the territory for which that station distributes.

"It destroyed the potential or measuring transformers at the plants of several North Broadway industries and service in that district was interrupted.

Freak Results Noted.

"It caused a 'flashover' on the switches in the South Broadway station, suspending service for a time over an area about two miles square.

"Oftentimes this great surge, or shock, not only destroys some cable or machinery part, but often removes the last vestige of the cable, melting it to a liquid and then, so great is its power, gasifying the liquid. The gases often explode. Apparently this occurred on Horton avenue, between Hodiamont and Hamilton avenues, where there was an explosion of sufficient force to blow off the manhole covers and cause a bulge in the street paving.

"On the railways system, the surge caused five separate cables supplying power for street car operation to either short-circuit or ground.

"Thus, the disturbance, because of its proximity of the short-circuited cable to a seat of great power, was the worst experienced by the Union company since my connection with it."

PAGEANT CHORUS SINGS 'SAMSON AND DELILAH'

Charles Hackett With Symphony, Josef and Rosina Lhevinne in Duo Recital.

The principal musical happenings of the week, in order of succession, will be as follows:

This afternoon, Symphony Orchestra's popular concert, at the Odeon, presenting as soloist André de Ribeaupierre, Swiss violinist.

Tuesday night, The Pageant Choral Society's presentation, at the Odeon, of a concert version of Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah," with Mme. Nevada Van der Veer, noted contralto, as Delilah.

Friday afternoon and Saturday night, at the Odeon, the Symphony Orchestra's third pair of regular concerts.

Friday night, a two-piano recital by Josef Lhevinne, famous Russian pianist, and his wife, Mme. Rosina Lhevinne.

The program for today's popular concert is announced as follows:

1. Overture to "Phedre"....Massenet
2. Concerto for Violin in B Minor, No. 3, Op. 61..........Saint-Saens
   I. Allegro non troppo.
   II. Andantino quasi allegretto.
   III. Molto moderato e maestoso; Allegro non troppo.
3. (a) "Funeral March of a Marionette" ....Gounod
   (b) "Le Dernier Sommeil de la Vierge" ....Massenet
   (c) "Chinoiserie" ....Godard
   (d) "Shepherd's Hey" ...Grainger
4. Waltz, "Les Patineurs".Waldteufel
5. "Marche Slave" .....Tschaikowsky

The Pageant Choral Society, a mixed chorus of nearly 200 voices, under the direction of Frederick Fischer, has once before presented "Samson and Delilah," which proved one of the most successful and attractive of its undertakings. Judson House, a distinguished tenor, will appear as Samson, and two solo roles have been assigned to St. Louisans, Raymund Koch and Dr. J. J. Kessler.

Sang Here in "Editha."

Mme. Van der Veer was last heard in this city in the Pageant Choral Society's presentation of Hoffman's cantata, "Editha." The story of the work is, of course, biblical, and many of Saint-Saens' fine melodies have become popular.

Charles Hackett, tenor, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be the soloist at this week's regular symphony concerts, and will offer Puccini's famous aria, "E lucevan le stelle," from "La Tosca," and the even more celebrated air, "Il mio tesoro intanto," from Mozart's "Don Giovanni." This, it is said, will be Hackett's last appearance in America for some time, as he sails immediately to sing at La Scala, in Milan, at the special request of Arturo Toscanini.

Two numbers on the orchestral program are labeled "First time," and the second also "From manuscript." They are Ferruccio Busoni's "Comedy" overture and Francesco Malipiero's "Grottesco," the latter a startling bit of modernism. The complete program follows:

"Lustspiel" overture ....Busoni
(First time)
Aria, "Il mio tesoro intanto," from "Don Giovanni" ....Mozart
Symphony in E-flat (Koechel 543) ....Mozart
I. Adagio; Allegro.
II. Andante con moto.
III. Menuetto: Allegretto.
IV. Finale: Allegro.
"Grottesco" ....Malipiero
(First time; from manuscript)
Aria, "E lucevan le stelle," from "La Tosca" ....Puccini
Scherzo, "L'Apprenti Sorcier"..Dukas

Rachmaninoff's Work.

Josef Lhevinne was heard as a soloist with the symphony orchestra in the spring of 1920, and at once established himself as a transcendant technician. He was in the virtuoso class at the Moscow Conservatory with Rachmaninoff and Scriabine. Mme. Rosina Lhevinne, when she was 9 years old, became a pupil of her husband-to-be, who was then only 14. They were married eight years later, and have toured Europe in their unique duo recitals. Their principal number here will be Rachmaninoff's Second Suite, Op. 17, for two pianos. The program follows:

1. Sonata, Op. 111 ....Beethoven
   Maestoso; Allegro con brio appassionata; Arietta; Adagio molto semplice e cantabile.
2. "Ecossaises" ....Beethoven
3. Second Suite, Op. 17, for two pianos.
   I. Introduction alla marcia.
   II. Valse presto.
   III. Romance andantino.
   IV. Taraltelle, presto.
4. (a) Nocturne in D-flat.....Chopin
   (b) Mazurka in A-flat .....Chopin
   (c) Prelude in B-flat.......Chopin
   (d) Scherzo in C-sharp minor...... Chopin
5. (a) "The Lark"..........Balakirew
   (b) Etude Caprice, F Minor...... Dohnyanyi
   (c) "Blue Danube" ...Schulz-Evler

Among the musical events forecast for next week are the recital of Mme. Hulda Lashanska, at the Odeon, on the evening of Dec. 6, and the Symphony Orchestra concerts, without soloist, on Dec. 9 and 19.

How About Your Stomach ?

If Acid, Sour, Gassy, and You Bloat or Feel Stuffed Up After Eating Try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

You Radiate Happiness When a Good Meal Sits Well in the Stomach

The stomach may be rather sluggish in digesting the fried eggs you eat for breakfast and the delicious croquette and salad for lunch. On top of this a soda confection is apt to add to the indigestion. It is a good rule to follow each meal with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet to avoid dyspeptic results due to eating and drinking. Should the stomach sour with water-brash, biliousness, and the peculiar gassiness due to indigestion these tablets bring relief because they supply the alkaline effect to the stomach and thus offset the acidity of such dyspeptic conditions.

It is well to know this and not deny yourself the pleasures of the good things to eat and drink through fear of indigestion. You will find Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on sale in all drug stores at 60 cents a box.

With all the treatments that were prescribed to me by several doctors I received little benefit, and they kept spreading and gave me much distress and caused me to quit my work.

I was induced by a brother brakeman to try Peterson's Ointment, and after I had used two boxes I saw wonderful results. You can tell suffering ones troubled with ugly, painful and horrid ulcers that your Ointment is a cure for them when everything else fails, as I have tried about everything. BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

BELEVES WHITE RACE ORIGINATED IN EUROPE

Prof. Bender of Princeton Thinks Habitat May Have Been in Lithuania.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 26.—Where would your home be if you had lived 5000 years ago? The search by ethnologists and other scientists to find just where the first white peoples lived, before splitting up into what are modern nations, is described by Prof. Harold H. Bender of Princeton University, who declares that our ancestors of the cave man period lived in what is modern Lithuania.

As a student of languages and professor of Indo-Germanic philology at Princeton Prof. Bender's investigations have led him back to the origin of all white races, before the dawn of history. His conclusions, together with a description of the methods by which he came to them, are embodied in "The Aryan Question, Did the Languages of Europe Come From Asia?" a lecture published by Princeton and sent to all alumni, in line with the policy of education after graduation adopted by the university last year. This is the eighth of the series, and so great has become the demand for them, outside the body of alumni, that more than a thousand requests were received last year for copies. This has led to the imposing of a nominal fee for those not entitled to regular copies as graduates.

The Indo-European race, which flourished almost 5000 years ago, is the founder of all the present peoples of Europe, save the Hungarians, Greeks, Romans, Anglo-Saxons and other Germans, Celts, all these people are descendants of the one-time race, which Prof. Bender believes lived in that section of Europe between the Baltic and Black seas, or modern Poland and Lithuania.

Similarity in Languages.

Philologists have discovered that the languages of a quarter of a billion people in Asia and most of the inhabitants of Europe, North and South America and other regions of the earth colonized by Europeans are fundamentally alike. That is, Latin, German, Russian and Greek are at the bottom of same, having all descended from the same parent language. Prof. Bender says: "Language is the best evidence of community life and culture, and we can at least assume that at some time and in some more or less definite territory there dwelt a people, or group of peoples, racially pure or racially mixed, who lived to a large extent a common life, and who spoke a tongue which was the common ancestor of the languages now spoken by the majority of the civilized peoples of the earth."

"With the beginnings of the science of comparative philology early in the nineteenth century came the knowledge that Sanscrit was the oldest of the Indo-European languages—if not the mother of them all, at least their elder sister. Philologists concluded that the home of the Hindus must also have been the home of the Indo-Europeans, and this common home they visualized on the banks of India's most sacred stream, the Ganges. The study of the Veda soon showed, however, that the Vedic people did not know the Ganges, but lived in northwest India; so the primitive home of the Indo-Europeans was moved once more, this time into the Iranian region east of the Caspian Sea."

On account of the fact that almost every Indo-European language shares with its cognates a common word for honey or for an intoxicating drink made from honey it is made clear that the primitive home of the Indo-Europeans must have been a land where the honey bee abounded. But not one of the Asiatic sites that have been seriously considered by modern philologists as the possible home of these peoples falls within the bee belt. In Europe, on the other hand, the bee is indigenous almost everywhere.

Elimination Is Followed Up.

By continuing this process of comparative phillogy and by the processes of elimination, the conclusion above mentioned is reached. "We have left, finally," says Prof. Bender, "the great plain of central and southeastern Europe, which embraces roughly the present Poland, Lithuania, Ukraine and Russia south and west of the Volga. Almost every condition is satisfied by the conception of the Indo-Europeans as inhabiting some part of this plain as late as 3000 or 2500 B. C. Geographically this central European plain lies in the very heart of Indo-European territory as we now know it."

In support of his theory Prof. Bender states in the closing paragraph of his lecture: "Nor can we ignore the notable fact that right here we find the Lithuanian, which has preserved into modern living speech more of the Indo-European past than any other language on earth. Not a scintilla of evidence, historic or linguistic, has been produced to indicate that the Lithuanians have ever stirred from their present dwelling place since they separated from the other Indo-European speaking peoples.

"Indeed, it has been made very probable on the grounds of linguistics, natural science and history that the Lithuanian stock has dwelt in its present location for at least 5000 years, which would approximate the duration of the Indo-European period, so far as it is known. There is probably no other part of Indo-European territory for which there is so much evidence against non-Indo-European predecessors."

THREE OF INDIA'S MOST ACTIVE AGITATORS SENTENCED TO PRISON

One of Them Said to Have Prompted Migration Which Caused Suffering to 18,000 Persons.

By the Associated Press.

LONDO, Nov. 26.—Three of the most active of the followers of Ghandi, the Independence leader in India, have been removed from activity by the sentence of two years' imprisonment imposed at Karachi, India, of Mahomed Ali, Shaukat Ali and Dr. Kitchlew, on charges of sedition and causing disaffection among the troops.

According to information received here, the Ali brothers have been a source of trouble to the British Government in India for some years. They were interned in 1915 on charges of having promoted sympathy for the King's enemies in the war. Four years later, in 1919, they were imprisoned on charge of disloyalty in the Afghan war, but were released after about six months' imprisonment under a royal proclamation of clemency toward political prisoners at the time of the passing of the India reform act.

It is claimed that they at once renewed their activity against the Government. Mahomed Ali was selected leader of the Caliphate delegation which came to London last year and was granted interviews with the Prime Minister.

On returning to India, it is charged that he prompted the migration of pious Mussulmans from India to Afghanistan, which migration was part of the Caliphate agitation. Some 18,000 persons left their homes in the frontier provinces of India, but soon returned after suffering severe hardships in Aghanistan.

The Government charged that the Ali brothers were in close association with Ghandi and moved up and down the country conducting a campaign of non-co-operation and made constant appeal to the militant fervor of their co-religionists.

World's Record in Gunnery.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov 26.—world's record in gunnery was established by the gun crew of Turret No. 4 of the U. S. S. New Mexico, in practice off the harbor here, according to officers of the flagship. In short range director practice five shots were fired from three 14-inch guns of the Turret No. 4 in one minute and 38 seconds, all director hits at 6000 yards. The previous record was one minute and 42 seconds. Another shining example of marksmanship wos 17 direct hits out of 20 shots at 6000 yards.

In Hard Lines

"I could not work at all and had to take to my bed with a high fever due to intestinal indigestion, gases in my stomach and pain in my right side. I had spent my last cent for doctors and medicine, which gave me no relief. I was in despair. A lodge brother gave me a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, and the first dose relieved me. Thanks to this medicine, I am now in the best of health." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph (3 stores), Enderle Drug Co. (5 drug stores), Brown-Cloughly, Johnson Bros. Drug Co., and druggists everywhere.

INGROWN TOE NAILS

Nail Turns Out Itself if you Toughen Skin Underneath

A few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless, antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containg directions.

PAINTINGS FROM BIXBY COLLECTION EXHIBITED

Group of 23 Canvases, Loaned to Museum, Comprises Works of Dutch and French Schools.

A group of 23 paintings from the collection of William K. Bixby which are now on temporary exhibit at the City Art Museum, is striking evidence of the wealth of art in the private homes of St. Louisans. These paintings are a small portion of the collection Bixby has lent the museum. Other works, including European and Chinese paintings, prints and drawings, are being reserved for future exhibition. The group now on view is made up principally of imported canvases by well-known masters of the modern Dutch and French schools, with a few examples by American artists. There are seven paintings of the Dutch school, by Josef Israels, Jakob Maris, Willem Maris, J. H. Weissenbruch, Albert Neuhuys and Bernardus J. Blommers, all of whom belong to a significant period in the art of Holland. It was this little coterie of men, who, with a few contemporaries, freed Dutch art from the conventions and trammels of the historic and romantic style and began painting the homely scenes of Dutch life and the vaporous atmospheric landscape of Holland.

Two Canvases by Israels.

There are two typical canvases by Josef Israels (1824-1911), called the father of the modern Dutch school of painting and likened to Rembrandt in his effects of light and to Millet in the drawing of the simple peasants whom he delighted to paint. One of these canvases is a low toned interior called "The Frugal Meal." It shows a Dutch peasant family at mealtime, painted in rich, low-colors with a remarkable depth of tone and feeling. In this homely little interior with its lowly country folk, Israels is not looking for pretty things so much as he is trying to express the inner spirit and life of the people. The other picture from his brush, called "Mending the Nets," is a landscape with a number of Dutch women engaged in repairing fishing nets. Though the setting is an exterior one with a skyline of typical Dutch houses, the figures are the most important part of the composition. It has Israels' characteristic richness of color, though one feels that he has in a measure carried his interior treatment of the figure into an outdoor environment.

The brothers, Jakob and Willem Maris, following the example of Israels, found in their native Holland with its picturesque canals and windmills, its low-lying farmlands and vaporous cloudy skies, the subject matter for their paintings. Bixby's collection contains characteristic examples by each of them, that by Jakob Maris (1837-1899), the elder of the pair, being a view of the "Harbor of Dordrecht." The scene is a busy one, with lighters and sailboats crowding the foreground, while on the further shore lies the city, subdued in haze and smoke. The sky is clouded but luminous, its light imparting a shimmering quality of brilliance to the misty atmosphere typical of the country.

The painting by William Maris (1844-1910), called "Cattle—Summer," deals with the subject in which he excelled. In an age when minutely detailed painting was highly esteemed, Willem Maris had the courage to subordinate and subdue the outlines and color of his cattle until they formed an integral part of the landscape. In the present example the cattle are enveloped in the delicate, luminous atmosphere which pervades the composition; and through the artist's adherence to the higher truths of broad effects of light and color are far more vital and real than if minutely painted.

"A Scene From Holland."

J. H. Weissenbruch (1824-1903), another interpreter of the soft, mistladen atmosphere of Holland, is represented in the Bixby collection by "A Scene in Holland." It has a foreground of water, with a thin line of shore in the distance, along which the ever-present Dutch windmills lift their arms. Above is a broad expanse of sparkling sky filled with moisture-laden clouds, the fine rendition of which was Weissenbruch's special delight. The painting by Albert Neuhuys (1844-1914), called "A Dutch Interior," shows in both technical treatment and choice of subject the deep influence which Israels exercised upon the course of Dutch art. It has the same richness of tone and the same soft diffusion of light, but a greater brilliance of color than ordinarily found in the work of the older man. Bernardus J. Blommer's landscape, "The Shell Fisherman," derives its inspiration from the same source and reveals the same tendency toward a higher and more impressionistic color scheme. This color, however, has a veiled, atmospheric quality which one feels is highly suggestive of the damp, misty climate of Holland.

In addition to the Bixby paintings, the museum has the following other special exhibits on view today: Early American Portraits, photographs of European and American cathedrals and five decorative panels by J. William Fosdick illustrating the life of Jeanne d'Arc. This is the last day that the cathedral photographs will be on exhibition.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
The Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—No uncanny powers are needed to perceive the chief desideratum of Great Britain in the Washington conference is a tripartite understanding among Great Britain, the United States and Japan that would render the Anglo-Japanese alliance obsolete. This fact, of course, is not set forth in the official communiques from the secret sessions of the conference, but it nevertheless sticks out all over the map.

In the last few days there has been a curious recrudescence of the talk about the Anglo-Japanese alliance, curious, that is to say, unless one is aware of the currents that trouble the waters under the smooth surface of diplomatic interchanges. After a period in which the alliance was mentioned in news dispatches in a casual, past-tense way, as if its abrogation would automatically be brought about by the result of the Washington gathering, responsible spokesmen of the British group began suddenly to lay stress on the thought that the alliance still existed and that Great Britain had no intention of "throwing over" an ally.

Moving Too Openly.

There is only one possible explanation of this shifting of emphasis. Japan was beginning to get offended at the constant iteration of the idea that her pact with Great Britain had served its usefulness and was to give way before a newer understanding between Great Britain and the United States. Great Britain, to put the case bluntly, must have seemed to the Japanese to be doing her wooing too openly. Japan has no objection to an agreement between Great Britain and the United States, with respect to the Pacific and Far Eastern problems, but that agreement must include Japan as a third party. The island empire is not to be isolated.

In deference to the justifiable sensitiveness of Japan on that point, the British let it be known that nothing in the proceedings of the conference to date warranted any assumption that the alliance was about to be terminated.

British statecraft is directed toward the goal of a three-cornered alliance. The empire is sincerely desirous of a close-knit relationship with this country. Her statesmen realize that a large section of American opinion, to say nothing of the majority opinion of the British dominions and the highly articulate opinion of English liberalism, sees in the Anglo-Japanese alliance a shield for continued Japanese aggression in China, though the Jingoistic theory that the alliance would compel Britain to fight by the side of Japan in a war against this country has been pretty well exploded. Opponents of the alliance nevertheless, feel that it menaces the good relationship that should exist between the two great English-speaking countries.

Great Britain wants the friendship of this country. For obvious reasons, one of them being the trouble that Japan could make in India, she wants also the continued good will of Japan. The only solution of her difficulty is an agreement or treaty embracing both America and Japan.

It was a shrewd move that the British press service made the other day when it got the Australian viewpoint before the newspapermen reporting the conference. Everybody knows that Australia, the far outpost of the British Empire, is even more rigid in its exclusion of Japan than the west coast of America. Consequently, if Australia came into the limelight with a pronouncement against an abrupt severence of the alliance, Japan would be reassured. Americans, moreover, would learn how eagerly the dominions would welcome a new arrangement including both Japan and America.

On behalf of Australia, it was emphasized, therefore, that that Democratic commonwealth, whose proudest boast is its "white Australia" policy, regarded the Japanese as honorable allies in the war entitled to a square deal. It was explained that the exclusion of Japanese from Australia was based solely upon economic and not on racial grounds, and that this exclusion was affected by a literacy test general in its application and not invidiously singling out the yellow race.

But, and this is a very important but, the Australian spokesman made it plain that Australia desired the completest and most harmonious understanding with the United States, and that Australia would infinitely prefer to the present arrangement an understanding that would take in both Japan and the United States.

This candid exposition of the attitude of the island commonwealth is an accurate reflection of the policy guiding the British delegates in the conference discussion in the Far East.

Was It the Turning Point?

Never before has the real inside life of the motion-picture world been revealed as it is in the story of Remember Steddon, a mid-West country girl, beautiful but inexperienced, whom circumstances flung into that life as the martyrs of old were flung to the devouring beasts in Roman arenas. Told as her story is by Rupert Hughes, than whom no one knows better what is likely to befall a girl in such circumstances, "Souls for Sale," appearing in THE RED BOOK MAGAZINE, is the outstanding novel of the season. It is being discussed wherever men and women read the English language. Begin it today.

RHEUMATISM

LEAVES YOU FOREVER

Deep Seated Uric Acid Deposits Are Dissolved and the Rheumatic Poison Starts to Leave the System Within Twenty-Four Hours.

A— and every druggist in this county is authorized to say to every rheumatic sufferer in this vicinity that if two bottles of Allenrhu, the sure conqueror of rheumatism, does not stop all agony, reduce swollen joints and do away with even the slightest twinge of rheumatic pain, he will gladly return your money without comment.

Allenrhu has been tried and tested for years, and really marvelous results have been accomplished even in the most severe cases, where the suffering and agony was intense and piteous, and where the patient was helpless.

Allenrhu relieves at once. Immediately after you start to take it the good work begins. It searches out the uric acid deposits, dissolves the secretions and drives rheumatic poison out of the body through the kidneys and bowels.

It's marvelous how quickly it acts. Blessed relief often comes in two days, and even in cases where the suffering is most painful all traces disappear in a few days.

Mr. James H. Allen, the discoverer of Allenrhu, who for many years suffered the torments of acute rheumatism, desires all sufferers to know that he does not want a cent of anyone's money unless Allenrhu decisively conquers this worst of all diseases, and he has instructed Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 4—Judge & Dolph Drug Co.—4, Johnson Bros. Drug Co., 5—Enderle Drug Co.—5, Keiffer Drug Co., Welpert Drug Co., City Hall Drug Store; East St. Louis agent: Chas. F. My Nerves Were Completely Shattered—I Was Weak

Wornout and "All In"; My Business Was Ruined; I Was a Failure in Life; All as a Result of Exhausted Nerve Force

How you may quickly help put new nerve force into wornout exhausted nerve cells, and remarkably increase your strength, power and endurance, often in two weeks time.

For sometime I had noticed that I was quite nervous and often annoyed very much by trifles. When I was in an irritable mood at home, my wife would occassionally say that this was a sign of age, and this would irritate me still more. I knew I was under constant nervous strain, but I never thought that a strong, vigorous man like I was, could go all to pieces and become a physical and mental wreck. But one day this is just what happened to me, and very suddenly at that. Nature had given me such warning symptoms as a dull aching pain in the lower back part of my head, and sometimes a sense of fullness in the front of my head. Often I was restless and could not sleep well at night, and I noticed that I would get tired very quickly, but my principal warning symptom was nervous irritability and if I had given attention to it at the right time, I might have saved myself untold misery and thousands of dollars because after my nervous breakdown came about, I still tried to go on with my business and thereby lost nearly everything I had. I found out that exhausted nerve force not only ruins a man physically but mentally as well.

The above is a hypothetical case, which a physician says may well illustrate thousands which exist today. Homes are wrecked, children ruined; all through exhausted nerve force or neurasthenic conditions.

Very few people realize the awful suffering and terrible physical and mental tortures which may be caused by a depletion of the nerve-vital fluid.

In such cases it is often worse than foolish to take mere stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital [illegible] of your life later on. What you need is to put more nerve force into your nerves and more iron into your blood to help make new nerve force with which to feed your starving nerve cells. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most nearly resembles that in the nerve and brain cells of a man.

It also contains organic iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. This form of iron will not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It is an entirely different thing from metallic iron which people usually take. Nuxated Iron may therefore be termed both a blood and a nerve food, as it feeds strength-giving iron to your blood and the principal chemical ingredient of active, living nerve force to your brain and nerve cells.

Over four million people are using Nuxated Iron annually, and from the remarkably beneficial results which it has produced, the manufacturers feel so certain of its efficacy that they guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. Beware of substitutes, look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. After using Nuxated Iron we shall be pleased to have you write us what it does for you for publication. Your name will be withheld. Nuxated Iron for the blood and nerves is sold by all druggists.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids so they no longer irritate, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

PETROGRAD'S THEATERS HAVE ESCAPED RUIN

Head of Dramatic Organization Has Kept Singers and Actors Out of Politics.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 2.—Petrograd's Government theaters and opera have been spared the general demoralization which has swept Russia, through the good judgment and organizing power of Ivan Vassilievich Ekskuzovich. Since 1917 he has been director of the Academic Theater and head of the theatrical organization of Petrograd. He is a professional actor, but also an architect and mechanical engineer and has no interest in party politics.

When the theatrical organization elected Ekskuzovich to be its head, Lunacharsky, the Minister of Education, recognized him as an ideal man to conserve and continue the theaters and opera. Actors, dancers and singers pledged themselves to keep out of politics and under Ekskuzovich the old organizations have been held intact.

The Academic Theater, on the Nevski Prospekt, together with the dramatic school, the ballet school and the theatrical museum and library which adjoin it, stands forth as an untouched island of old Russia. Classes run on as usual in spite of limited food supplies and the lack of fuel.

Davidoff, the veteran comedian, who has been the idol of Russian audiences for over half a century, lectures every day to the student actors on the traditions of the Russian stage. Barbara Ivanova Likhosherstova, the directoress of the ballet school, has held the position since 1884.

The American Relief Administration is establishing a kitchen in the dramatic school and will provide dinners for the young people who are in training to be future directors, composers, singers, actors, dancers and dramatists. Gregory G. Issienko, who has been in charge for 33 terms, is director of the boys' school.

Many efforts were made by political leaders to commandeer the 10,000 costumes owned by the dramatic academy organization, but Ekskuzovich has been able to keep the supplies intact, with the assistance of Lunacharsky and the dramatic profession has won such confidence by its abstention from politics that both Government and public will doubtless continue to protect the organization which has continued its work with great loyalty to art under most trying conditions.

Points of Construction

The new Symphony Console Phonograph comes in two designs, the Queen Anne (pictured above) and Italian Renaissance. The Queen Anne is 36 inches in height, 34 inches in length and 21 inches in depth. The Italian Renaissance is 36 inches in height, 33½ inches in length and 21 inches in depth.

Both models are constructed of very thick Prima Vari mahogany with mahogany finish, double doors, silk lined grille behind tone door; records compartment with four shelves. Cabinets are fitted with full length piano hinge and specially designed lid support, four needle cups, speed regulator and very highest grade "throw back" tone arm, that will play all disc records.

The motor used in both models is one found only in this and other high-priced instruments, specially enclosed and self lubricating. The gears, governors and springs are completely enclosed in a rigid cast iron box, which eliminates the possibility of mis-adjustment of mechanism, and protects the motor from dust and other foreign matter. It is silent winding, silent running and will play three and one-half ten-inch records at one winding.

The amplifier or tone chamber is made entirely of fine quality violin wood, specially seasoned, and curved in the shape of a horn, starting from the tone arm and ending with the grille, insuring a tone quality found only in the best grade machines.

Come in and let us show the features in detail of this machine.

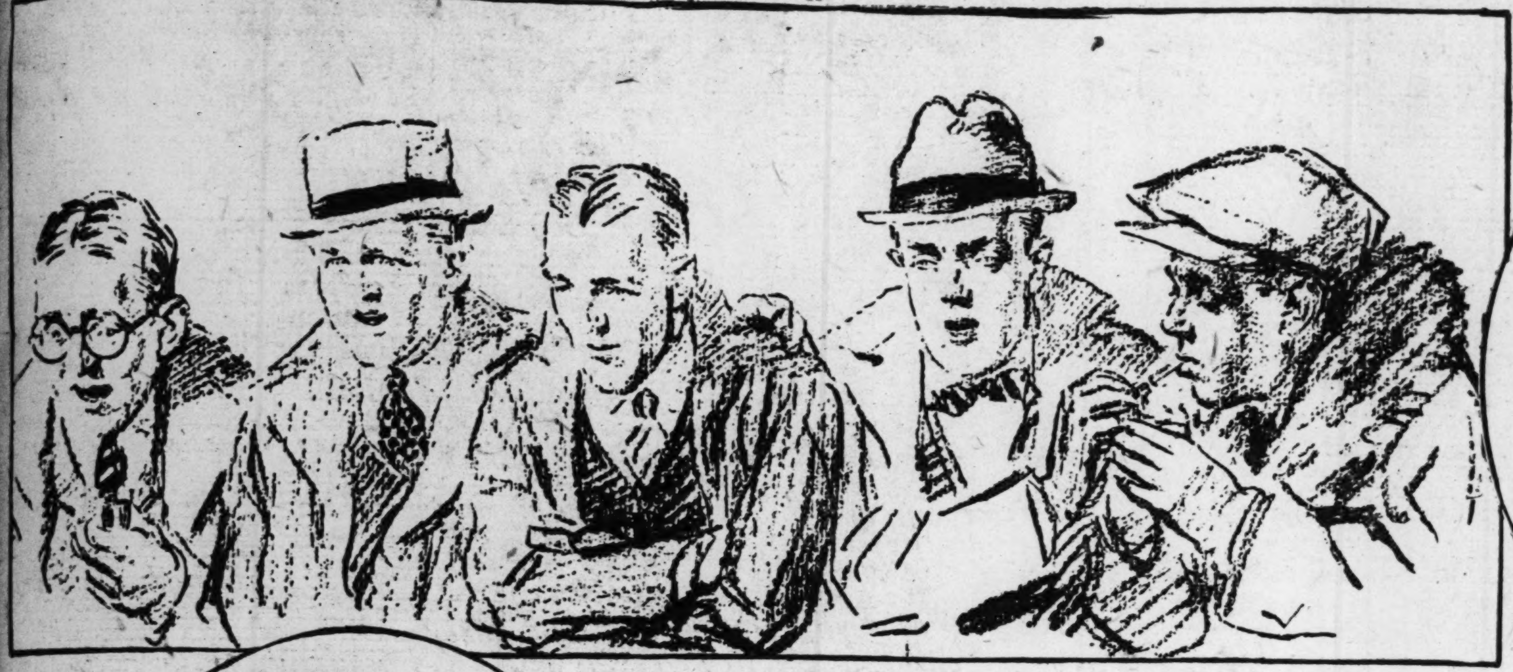
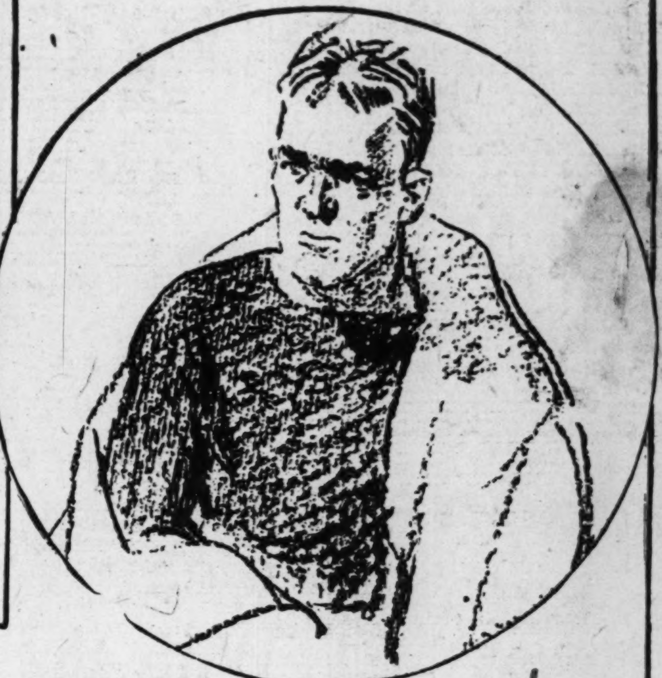
THE DAY OF THE GAME

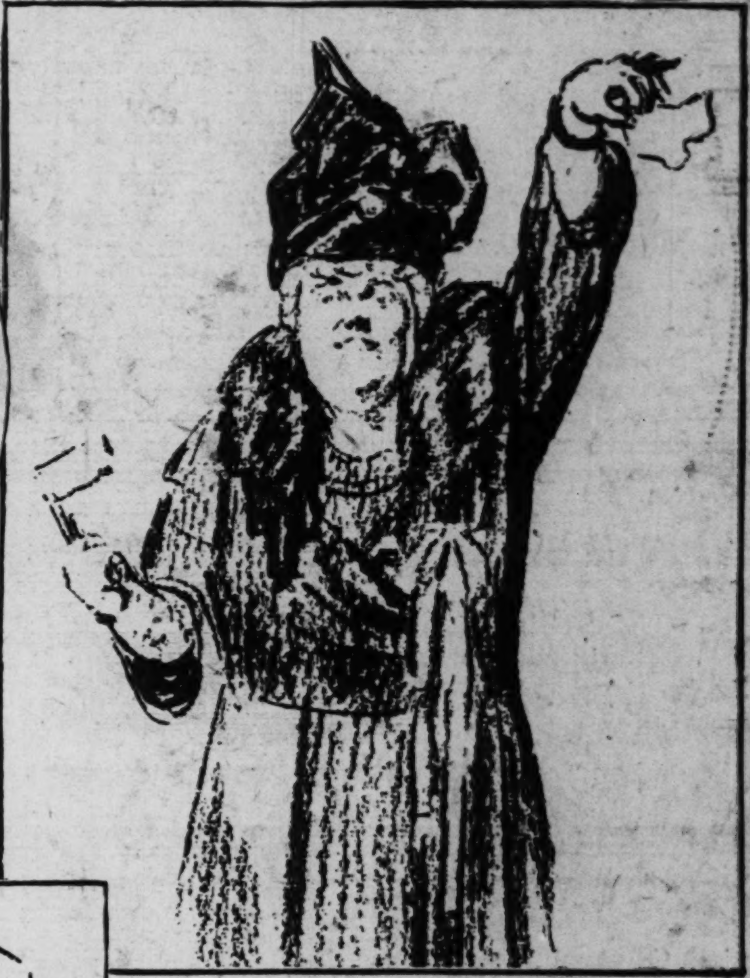
BY W. E. HILL



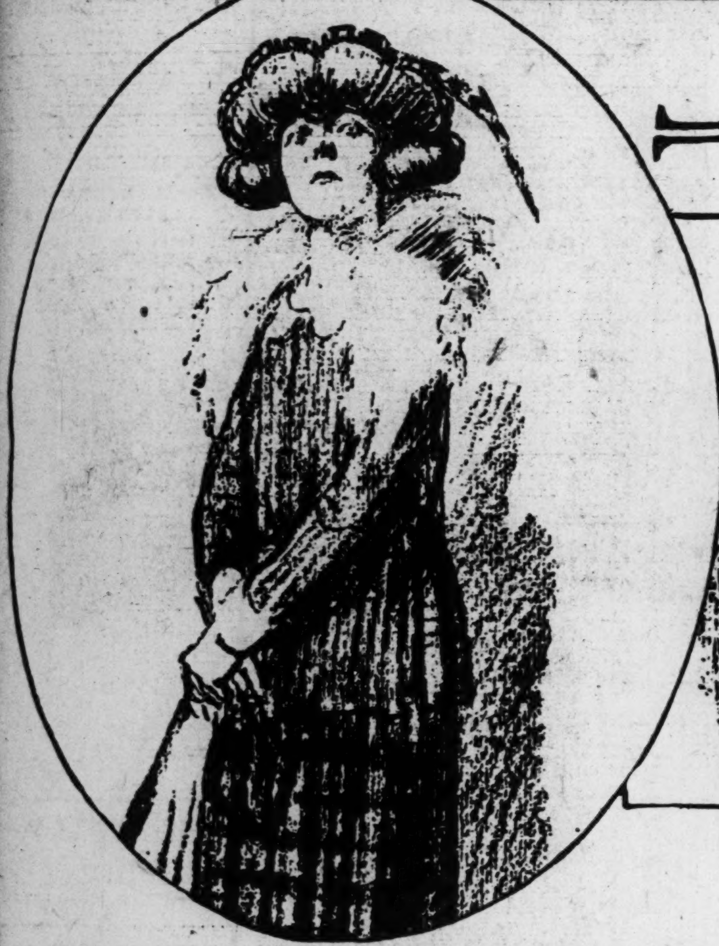
"Block-that-kick-block-that-kick!"



Outraged left guard who has been sent to the side lines, all because of a wrenched knee.



"Push them back, team! Push them back!" The lady who, in the late nineties, was the toast of three consecutive proms and was made honorary member of the Zoota Geeta Tau Society on the strength of her sparkle and verve. Today she's busy putting over the same girlish sparkle.



The town girl. "Oh, them students; they are the worst! You'd think they owned the earth. Look at 'em taking up the whole sidewalk! I spose the street is good enough for us."

Reading from left to right—a total stranger from the student body—Gifford's best girl's mamma, the best little girl, who has come all the way from school at Farmington, and hopes to land a bid to the prom before the day is over, and Gifford, who may graduate next year or the year after, if all goes well. Mamma, the perfect chaperon, is showing great tact and is much engrossed in the game. There's just been an offside play and mamma is about to ask the total stranger (who has felt it coming all along) "whether it's best, in a case like that, for the player to fall down on the ball before they catch him, or to run out of bounds with it."

"Come on, fellas: show the team you're right behind em! Everbody up and give a long yell for the team!"

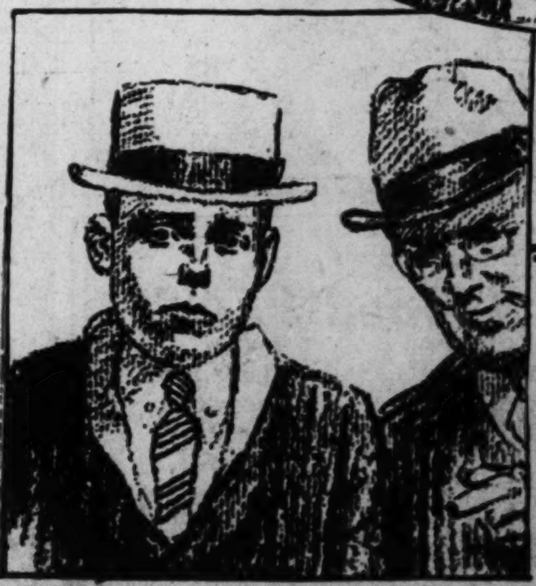
Mrs. Stew, the chemistry professor's wife, bowing to a senior who doesn't want her to see him. Mrs. Stew takes such an interest in the student body. The senior has a very flashy girl in tow, and Mrs. Stew is particularly anxious to catch his eye—wants to let him know that she isn't fooled.

Two loyal alumni being very young and exuding college spirit all over the cheering section. Yes, they may have a little something on the hip.

Entertaining the brother alumnus. All the dirty work of the fraternity seems to fall on Brother Sherwood the sophomore. Someone is always saying, "Hey, Woodie, meet Brother Stubbs," whereupon the party of the first part makes a getaway, leaving Brother Sherwood to do the honors at lunch. Brother Sherwood is hearing all about how Brother Stubbs and a comrade once put the cow in the Greek professor's attic.



Eddie is being shown the college by an enthusiastic alumnus who thereby hopes to swerve Eddie from an unspeakable leaning toward a rival institution. All Eddie's particular friends at school are going to the R. I., you see, and that makes a difference. However, Eddie's mind is still open and if the team makes a good showing.

To Celebrate Golden Wedding Tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reinheimer of 522 South Grand avenue, both 71 years old, will have been married 50 years tomorrow. They have 10 children and 10 grandchildren.

BONES OF GIANT RACE FOUND

Rains Uncover Burial Ground Near Douglas, Ariz.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Nov. 26.—Recent heavy rains in the vicinity of Reddington, near here, have uncovered the burial grounds of a race of giant people who are thought to have lived thousands of years ago, according to August Ealey, a miner, who has been employed in the Reddington district.

Ealey described parts of skeletons recovered from the cemetery and declared that the stature of the race must have been twice that of the average man of today. One skull showed a thickness of about an inch, Ealey said, and was in a state of perfect preservation. Pieces of pottery, earrings, remains of charcoal fires and other evidence uncovered by the rains has led Ealey to report the discovery to the State University, w... the hope that a more intimate investigation would be made of the burial ground.

Hear Your Own Child Play With the Expression of an Artist!

Now, for the first time, this is possible. A new invention makes it simple and easy. We can show him how in a short time! We will gladly do it. Bring him to the store tomorrow.

What a satisfaction to hear him play artistically! With full, resonant power or delicate shades of tone. Bringing out the real charm of the piano.

Impossible Until Now

Never before could children do this. For the secret of piano charm lies in the pedals. There, say the greatest musicians, is "the soul of the piano." Yet children cannot use the ordinary one-level pedals. They cannot reach them!

They have had to learn to play wrongly, without pedaling, without expression. Then later to try to learn over—when perhaps it was too late!

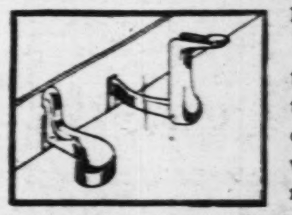
The time to learn to pedal is when one learns to play. And now children can learn correctly from the very start. It is possible with the famous Lyon & Healy Piano, equipped with the Junior Unfolding Two-Level Pedal.

RUDOLPH GANZ
"I wish I could be a small boy again to be able to make use of the Junior Pedal."

The Only Piano

This is the only complete piano—for musicians of every age. The only piano a child can play properly.

It "sings beneath the fingers." Its tonal beauty and charm have won world-wide recognition. But, not content until the full glory of this tone should be available to every player—child as well as adult—its makers have developed the Junior Pedal.



The Junior Unfolding Two-Level Pedal, closed, is like any good pedal. Opened to the higher level, a child can reach it in comfort.

This is the greatest improvement in the piano in fifty years! Endorsed enthusiastically by the foremost pianists. And it is now built into every Lyon & Healy Piano—at no extra cost.

See for Yourself

Let us demonstrate it to you. Have your own child test it. See for yourself how much it improves his playing. Come in tomorrow. No obligation. Or, if not convenient to come now, phone or write for free illustrated folder.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out of date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

DEMIAN BEDNI POET LAUREATE OF THE REDS

Russian Writer Popular With Bolshevist Chieftains and the Army.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Nov. 1.—Demian Bedni, the poet laureate of the Kremlin, is far more of a popular favorite than Robert Bridges, the British poet laureate. Demain is his family name and Bedni means "the poor." But he is far from being poor in the generally accepted sense. He has a good apartment at the Kremlin, travels on special cars and enjoys great distinction.

He was well known as a poet before the revolution, but rides Pegasus so skillfully under orders and is so successful as a writer of propaganda verse and so good an orator that he has been very useful to Trotzky and other leaders. He frequently travels about with prominent Bolshevist chieftains and has found much favor with the red army, to which he reads his political verses.

Robust, Typical Russian.

Demian is a robust, typical Russian of 40, who has great physical strength and personality and is not compelled to rely on eccentricities of dress or manner to attract attention.

The revolution brought out a large crop of new poets and near-poets, who cast aside all the traditions of old Russian verse makers and announced that art would throw off its shackles. They immediately scrapped Pushkin and the other old favorites of the Russian public. They went in for vers libre. But the public failed to follow. It clung to Pushkin.

The imaginist poets have their own cafe. They call it "The Stall of Pegasus." Long-haired bards with low-necked shirts and soulful eyes read their poetry there. But foreigners who don't understand Russian make up a majority of the audiences. Cherchenivitch and Yesenyin are probably the best known of this group. There is also a group of proletarian poets headed by Alexandreffsky.

Rhymeless Poetry Not a Success.

But on the whole rhymeless, rhythmless poetry hasn't been a great success and the average man insists upon having jingles. He may be a communist or a Bolshevist in politics but in literature he clings to old writers and in art to old painters.

Vereschagin and Repin still hold their own in the art galleries in spite of struggling artists who have tried to convince the public that it must abandon everything old in order to live up fully to the new freedom.

Gorky and Chekoff have not been driven from the theater by the flood of propaganda plays which have been offered. The failure of the new regime to produce any especially notable novels, poems, operas or plays, is attributed by the Bolshevist leaders to sabotage on the part of workers in various artistic lines.

POST-DISPATCH MILK FUND REACHES $8943

Records for 17 Years Broken—Contributions Will Be Received for Winter Work.

CONTRIBUTIONS.

Previously acknowledged	$8401.01
Incomplete returns, entertainment and dance at Elks' Club	516.00
Carnival, 1412 Bremen av.	24.00
Bernard Citron and Simon Weinshenker	1.25
Mrs. H. M.	1.00
Total	$8943.26

The Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund yesterday passed the $8900 mark, breaking all records for 17 years for the amount of money raised in a single season. The fund's largest previous total was $7200, last year.

The new record was established when $516 was received from Jules Bertero, secretary of the Elks' Club, the amount being the proceeds to date of the entertainment and dance given at the club Nov. 4. Bertero reports that approximately 150 tickets are as yet unpaid for and that final reports will put the Milk Fund past the $9000 mark.

Increasing costs in all directions during the summer created a need for more money in the work for the babies than ever before, so that the fund raised this year was about equivalent in purchasing power to the amount raised last year. Added to this there have been appeals for aid from a larger number of families having babies or small children than in any previous year.

As is generally known, the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund undertakes to finance the distribution of ice and pure milk to the poor children of the tenement districts during the summer, but this year the demands made upon the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission, through which the fund administers its milk, have been so increased by unsettled industrial and financial conditions that those in charge of the fund have worked hard to raise a fund large enough to assist in continuing the work of the milk commission during the winter. The surplus from the summer's campaign will be devoted to this object, and while the Milk and Ice Fund is closed for the season, the Post-Dispatch will continue to receive any donations which may be made to provide certified milk to tenement children during the winter.

Further substantial assistance to the Milk and Ice Fund was received recently from children who reside in the 1400 block of Bremen avenue. They gave a show at 1412 Bremen avenue and earned $24. Those who took part were: Dorothy and Eugene Graubner, Leodrie, Virginia and Vivian Smallwood, Leslie and Esther Vahrenhold and Dod Kirchner.

Bernard Citron of 4638 Page boulevard and Simon Weinsheker of 4647 Page sent $1.25 to the fund, and $1 was received from "Mrs. H. M."

NEW 400-POUND ALDERMAN HAS HIS OWN PRIVATE CHAIR

Specially Constructed Piece of Furniture Has Seating Capacity of One Square Yard.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The seats of the city fathers will be dwarfed by comparison to liliputian size when Frank J. Dotzler, Republican Alderman-elect from the Sixth District, arrives with his specially constructed furniture Jan. 1.

Dotzler lists his weight in round numbers at 400 pounds, and finds it necessary to take with him his own private chair, which has a seating capacity of one square yard. The city had the chair built for him several years ago, when, upon his election to the Board of Aldermen, it was discovered that he could not squeeze into the regular seats. Dotzler bought it for $1 when he retired, because the city was short of storage space.

DANDERINE GROWS LONG, THICK HAIR

35-cent Bottle Stops Hair Falling Out—Ends Dandruff

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous and just twice as abundant.

URBAN LEAGUE AIDED 50,000 PERSONS IN YEAR

Branch of Provident Association Devotes Efforts to Care of Needy Negroes.

The Urban League of the St. Louis Provident Association, which devotes its efforts to the care of needy negroes, during the fiscal year ending Oct. 31, as shown by the annual report of its executive secretary, George W. Buckner, served in one way or another more than 50,000 persons, of whom 10,898 called at the office in search of employment, advice or some social service.

The industrial department of the league served 180 firms and 334 homes. Of the applicants for employment 1145 were placed in jobs at an approximate commercial wage value of $366,240. Six industrial conferences were held and 3559 telephone calls were made in an effort to open up work.

The neighborhood department reached more than 3000 persons and co-operated with teachers and volunteers in the use of four public school buildings as neighborhood centers where classes in folk dancing, art needle work, crocheting, millinery and flower making were promoted. This department also promoted eight community entertainments.

The free dental clinic, which is operated in co-operation with the Bard of Education, is open for the use of all negro public school children. During the past year it served 2806 patients. The commercial value of the work was more than $3000. New appaartus valued at $300 was installed last year and literature on dental hygiene and tooth paste were distributed.

The educational department published 95 articles, using 11 newspapers and magazines, and promoted 121 meetings on health and education.

The Urban League last January called an unemployment conference of employes and employers on this question. The industrial department was also called upon by the State during the past year to make a survey on unemployment among negroes of Missouri.

After successfully conducting a grade manual at L'Ouverture School, using volunteers, the league repeatedly urged upon the Board of Education the practicability of opening a grade manual for negro children. The Board of Education finally opened a grade manual at L'Ouverture School last summer.

SYRUP PEPSIN IN OLD AGE

Much used by elderly people for constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc.

MANY men and women, as they grow older, suffer constantly from little ills. The cause is the poisons produced by chronic constipation, resulting in headaches, depression, bloating, sour stomach, bad breath, etc. A single bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will prove to you that you can so regulate yourself that elimination will occur promptly every day. Increased doses are not necessary. It is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin. The cost is only about a cent a dose.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been on the market 30 years and is today the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, the formula has never been improved upon. It is safer and better for you than salts, minerals, calomel, coal tar and such drastic purgatives.

Half-Ounce Bottle Free

Few escape constipation, so even if you do not require a laxative at this moment let me send you a Half-ounce Trial Bottle of my Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE so that you will have it handy when needed. Simply send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Write me today.

DECLINE TO DEPEND ON PROCEEDS OF WORK FOR WAGES

Employes of British Farm Owner Turn Down Offer Made to Disprove Large Profits.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—S. F. Edge, a scientist farmer offered some few weeks ago, to hand over farm land valued at $100,000 to a committee of his employes without cost, but subject to the proviso that they should pay their own wages out of the proceeds.

It is announced that they have declined the offer, and Edge has extended it to any reputable labor body, such as the agricultural workers' unions.

"The purpose of this offer," said Edge, "is to prove to the trade unions that farming, like every other industry, will only pay wages that are earned, unless they are drawn from capital. Agricultural laborers have been misled as to the profit a farmer makes from corn-growing or ordinary agriculture, and it was to teach them the truth that I made this offer.

"My employes on my farms, which have grown in the last two years from a modest 50 acres to some 2000 acres, have not accepted my offer, knowing that they will make more money in wages than they could make out of the farm.

"I now suggest that one of the farms should be run on a co-operative scheme in charge of the workers and their unions. There would have to be an agreement that accepted methods of good husbandry be observed. It would be possible, of course, to enjoy several years of prosperity by taking everything possible out of the land and putting nothing back. The farm must be kept in good order."

BATHS IN COLLEGE BUILDING

CAMBRIDGE, England, Nov. 26.—Undergraduates of St. Catherines College will soon have the luxury of an occasional bath in college buildings. It has been 486 years since the colege was built. Students have had to bathe as best they could in their rooms or get baths elsewhere. After many years of agitation the conservative authorities have so far unbent as to allow three baths to be installed, but as there are some 70 undergraduate residents, the newspaper Old Cambridge says that, according to rumor, baths are to be taken in order of seniority.

Revival services under the leadership of the Rev. C. Norman Guice, evangelist, will begin today at Shaw avenue M. E. Church, Shaw and Tower Grove avenues, of which the Rev. W. E. Brown is pastor. Services will be held each night.

AID SOCIETY PREPARES FOR CHRISTMAS CAROLS

Children's Organization Arranging Bands to Sing in Holiday Celebrations.

"A candle in every house and a song in every block," is the aim of the Children's Aid Society, which has begun preparations for the annual Christmas Eve carol singing, which every year is one of the picturesque events of the holiday celebrations. The demands upon the society this year have been greater than ever before and also the receipts have been less than in previous years. Many who have been subscribers have been unable to contribute this year.

It costs the Children's Aid almost $4000 a month to operate, and this means the care of hundreds of children. The Aid Society is indorsed by Bishop Tuttle, Archbishop Glennon, Rabbi Harrison and ministers of many denominations, as well as the heads of social agencies dealing with problems of family welfare.

An appeal for leaders of carol bands in all parts of the city is made by the Children's Aid Society. Last year about 250 different groups sang, but there were many complaints that people had put candles in their windows, and no one sang in their blocks. Anyone willing to form a group of from six to 12 children or adults, is asked to call at the Children's Aid headquarters, Vanol Building, Olive street and Vandeventer avenue, and signify their routes. All who sang last year will be given their old territory if application is made at once. Each group has a script box, and after singing before the house in which a candle shines the box is carried to the door for such contributions as the residents care to make for the children whom the Children's Aid has in charge. The carol singers are always welcomed, and this is the tenth carol festival of the Children's Aid.

Mrs. George C. Hitchcock is president of the board of the Children's Aid and chairman of the carol festival with the following assisting: Vice chairmen, Mrs. Sidney Schwab and Mrs. Marion C. Blossom; chairmen of hotels in which there will be noonday carol singing, Mrs. Guido Pantaleoni; downtown district, Miss Louise Kroeger; West End, Mrs. Willard Boyd; North End, Mrs. Charles L. Passmore; South End, Miss Lucy Wulfing; distribution, Mrs. Thomas C. Hennings; musical clubs, Mrs. William A. McCandless; schools, Mrs. Fred Eiseman; churches, Mrs. Dorsey Jamison; downtown buildings, Charles Wiggins; moving picture theaters, Mrs. Ellis Fischel; costumes, Mrs. Ralph Thompson; presents for children, Mrs. Charles Nagel.

BAR ASSOCIATION TO MEET

State Lawyers' Organization Will Convene in Kansas City Thursday.

The Missouri Bar Association, of which Francis M. Curlee of St. Louis is president, will hold its annual meeting in Kansas City Thursday and Friday. The headquarters of the association will be at the Beuhlebach Hotel.

Newton L. Wylder, president of the association in Kansas City, will open the meeting with an address of welcome. The election of new members and of officers will be part of the business.

Bank Employes Form Club.

The National City Bank Club, composed of the officers and employes of the National City Bank of St. Louis, was organized at a meeting at the bank Tuesday. The following officers were elected: President, Ned H. Goldsmith; vice president, L. E. Demper; secretary, Bettye Prosser; treasurer, Arthur C. Sears.

Train Whistle Routs Lions.

NAIROBI, British East Africa, Oct. 17.—Officers on a train arriving at one of the stations on the Uganda railway found three lions had taken possession, one in the telegraph room and one in the refreshment room, while the other came out and stalked up and down the platform, "in true official style," as the driver expresed it. A few shrieks from the engine whistle caused the lions to decamp, whereupon the station staff emerged from a building some distance away.

Walter Brinkop a Candidate in California.

SQUIRREL GREAT AID IN REFORESTATION

Animals Gather and Bury Cones, Making It Easy for Forestry Workers to Find Seed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OLYMPIA, Wash.—The energetic pine squirrel is one of the greatest aids to Uncle Sam in his reforesting work in the Northwest. Advantage is taken of the immense store of pine cones the squirrels hoard away each fall and the best seed is secured. Squirrels usually cache away four or five times as much food as they need in winter, so the raids on their supply does not leave them to go hungry. At the foot of nearly every large fir or pine the forestry agent pokes around until he finds a peck or two of large cones, well filled with the finest seed. Men, women and boys also gather cones from the trees in the vicinity of the Wind River nursery of the forestry service until the 700 to 1000 pounds needed annually to plant is obtained.

After collecting the cones the workers expose them to a temperature of 100 degrees for three days until they open and the seeds easily rattle out. The open cones are placed in cylinder shakers of screen, the seeds falling through into a hamper. They then go through a rubbing process to remove the wings. Finally they are planted in long beds three feet wide.

Millions of trees are planted yearly by the forest service and the nursery at Wind River produces from 6,000,000 to 8,000,000. To date there are 20,000 acres in Oregon and 17,000 acres in Washington reset with seedlings. Some of these plantings are 10 years old and rapidly forming commercial timber. When 40 years old the trees are suitable for telegraph poles, railway ties and mine timbers. When nearly 100 years old they will produce marketable lumber. White pine, Douglas fir, red fir and noble fir are the varieties mostly planted on burnt-over land and other kinds with cedar in logged-off tracts. A voluntee growth of seedlings of hemlock, cedar and spruce often springs up in replanted tract making a natural dense growth.

The reforestation work is in its infancy, but has accomplished big things in the last 10 years.

The Iron Food for Vitality

They need it—
"The Iron Food for Vitality"

Try Stewed Raisins with cereal—for instance, puffed rice—superbly delicious

"Iron Breakfasts"

—for high-powered men who forge ahead—delicious, served with cream

"Big" business men are usually of great vitality, robust and vimful—"Iron Men," so called because of iron in the blood.

Scores of them eat what they call "iron breakfasts" every morning to uphold their driving force.

For instance, stewed raisins — the luscious dish that's given to pale, tired, anemic business men at a famous sanitarium in Battle Creek.

For raisins are rich in food-iron which promotes energy and vigor. Men need but a small bit of iron daily, yet that need is vital. Supply it through raisins.

This is a suggestion to you, madam (if you, too, are reading this). Watch your men's food for that iron content. It's important.

This breakfast-fruit is so well liked that it is welcome daily, and it is daily regularity that counts.

Try tomorrow. Learn for yourself how good stewed raisins are, and how the men folks like them.

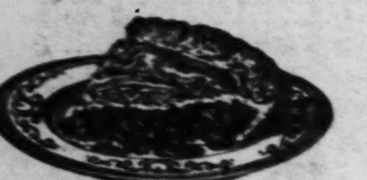
How to Stew Them

Serve for breakfast every morning and get your daily iron in this way

Cover Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins with cold water and add a slice of lemon or orange. Place on fire; bring to a boil and allow to simmer for one hour. Sugar may be added but is not necessary, as Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins contain 75 per cent natural fruit sugar.

Raisin Bread

Add Raisins to "the staff of life" and you have a perfect food



Raisin Pie

Men are quickly refreshed at night by a dessert like this

2 cups Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins
2 cups water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon corn starch
1 teaspoon sugar

Wash the raisins, put in saucepan with one cup cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Add sugar, salt and corn starch which has been mixed with one cup cold water. Boil 2 minutes; add lemon juice. Pour in pie tin which has been lined with crust, while hot cover; brush top with cold milk and bake in moderate oven until brown.

All measurements for these recipes are level.

SUN-MAID RAISINS

Use Sun-Maid Raisins, made from California's finest table grapes—American raisins, processed and packed immaculately in a great modern California plant.

Seeded (seeds removed); Seedless (grown without seeds); Clusters (on the stem.) Also a fine, ever-ready dessert.

Raisins are cheaper by 30 per cent than formerly—see that you get plenty in your foods.

Woman Changes Mind on Way to Hospital

Stops in Drug Store and Changes Her Mind

"I suffered from obstinate bowel trouble and was intending to start for the hospital when I dropped into a drug store. The druggists showed me Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic). After taking the second bottle I am perfectly well now, and have no trouble whatever. Adlerika is the best thing I have ever seen." (Signed) Mrs. George Taylor.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and other leading druggists.

The POST-DISPATCH is the only St. Louis evening newspaper giving the Associated Press news service.

TEXAS BLUE BONNET IS FATAL TO SHEEP

A Meal From Pods of Plant Leaves Animal Either Dead or in a Drunken Stupor.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 24.—When the hills of Central Texas in midsummer are a sky-blue color, due to a covering of the blooms of the Texas bluebonnet, it is hard to conceive the idea that these beautiful flowers are deadly enemies of sheep; that if a sheep eats too much of them it means death, while only a portion means a crazy, drunken stupor.

Yet this is a fact, so officials of the State Department of Agriculture report. When sheep eat too much of the flowers' pods, it is poisonous to them, while a smaller amount will make them drunk or crazy, and even then death sometimes results, the department officials say. The plant does not affect other domestic animals and sheep may eat the plant without injurious results if they do not eat too much at one time.

The bluebonnet abounds thickly in Central Texas, especially in the vicinity of Austin. In summer time the rolling hills and beautiful natural scenery around the State capital is enhanced by the flowers in full bloom.

The plant also is called the Lupinus Texana. Lupinus in Latin means "wolf," while Texana denotes the Texas species. There are numerous kinds of the lupinus. The department officials say this name was given the flower because in ancient days it was known as the "wolf of the soil." It was generally supposed that this name was applied because it was thought that the plant took the moisture from the soil. But with the discovery that it is deadly to sheep, agricultural officials are prone to believe that it was called "lupinus" because it killed sheep, sheep being prey for wolves.

The seeds of the plant are most poisonous, with the pods and leaves less harmful, the department declared.

The bluebonnet does not grow much in West Texas, where the big sheep herds are found, despite the fact that it needs only a poor soil to gather its necessary elements for life.

FOUNDRY WORKER ACQUITTED OF MANN ACT CHARGE

John J. Ward, an employe of the American Car & Foundry Co. at Madison, Ill., was acquitted by a jury in the Federal Court at East St. Louis Wednesday of a charge of violating the Mann act. Ward was indicted as the result of a statement made by Marie Hayes, 16 years old, of Madison, who said that Ward took her to a St. Louis hotel.

Ward testified that he met the girl accidentally in St. Louis and when she told him she had no place to stay, he took her to a hotel, paid for a room for her, and then went to his own home.

LUDWIG van BEETHOVEN
Op. 27, No. 2
Adagio sostenuto
PIANO

Beethoven's Genius

What would the musical world give to know the master's own interpretation of his immortal sonatas! Today, the works of composers and the interpretation of the classics by living masters are preserved for posterity through the Apollo Reproducing Piano.

A perfect pianistic reproduction, giving every shade of tone color and interpretation is accomplished. The Apollo brings to every home a deeper musical understanding through the inspiration and refining influence of the best music exactly as played by the greatest artists.

The APOLLO Reproducing PIANO

The significance of the Apollo as a reproducing piano—not a player piano—becomes apparent when one understands the method. The pianist, playing on a special recording piano, records his individual rendition upon a music roll which catches every trick of execution, every shade of expression, every variation of tone. The Apollo mechanism, having within itself the power to match the touch of any human fingers, responds to this personally recorded roll, thus reproducing the original interpretation of the artist exactly.

Call and Hear The Apollo

We'll be glad to play your favorite selections on the Apollo, so you may judge how perfectly it matches the playing of master pianists. No obligation, of course.

Send the coupon for the Apollo Catalog. Describes all Apollo styles and gives IMPORTANT FACTS about player pianos which all should know. Write for details of how the Apollo Reproducing Action may be installed in your own Grand Piano.

Apollo Foot-Power Upright

This Upright is made in several styles at lowest prices consistent with utmost quality.

Equipped with a METRONOME SPRING MOTOR which is independent of the pneumatic mechanism. Therefore, pumping does not affect tempo of roll; thus only is correct, true interpretation made possible.

Incidentally, this motor makes pumping easy, because all the air is used to play the music and none to run the roll; you need not watch the tempo of the roll. The roll is rewound without the use of pedals.

The Apollo Piano, Grand and Upright, possesses these refinements of manufacture, that exquisite quality of tone and touch which are necessary to do FULL JUSTICE to the playing of great pianists.

Without obligation, send me your catalog. I would like information, particularly on the following, as checked:
☐ Grand Piano

No matter how severe your case may be, or of how long standing. The old, stubborn cases, that are supposed to be "incurable" are the very ones we like best to write to us—for we can nearly always count upon those people to be our best friends and boosters after this treatment has made them well.

Neither does it matter where you live nor what your occupation may be—we are as near to you as your mail box, and if you are troubled with piles, this method will give you quick relief and within a short time you will have joined the ranks of the thousands who write us that they feel themselves to be permanently cured.

We want you to understand that the Page Method is DIFFERENT from all others and that it is the ONE MOST RELIABLE and SUREST remedy for the home treatment of piles. Send the coupon NOW while you have the matter in mind and this offer before you.

Don't let anyone persuade you to submit to an operation until you have at least given this internal method a trial and a chance to cure you. A few days' delay will not make your case much harder for the surgeon, and you may not need him at all.

Aged 58—Suffered for Years

"I want you to know what your treatment has done for me. I had suffered with piles for many years and used suppositories and all kinds of treatments, but never got relief until I tried yours. Am now completely cured. Although I am 58 years old and the oldest active blacksmith in Michigan, I feel years younger since the piles left me. I will surely recommend it to all I know, who suffer this way. You can use my letter any way you wish and I hope it will lead others to try this wonderful remedy."

Yours truly,
J. L. LYON.
Mason, Mich.

Only One Effective

"I wish to express my appreciation of your pile cure. Have doctored with different doctors but will say have found your cure the only effective one."

Respectfully yours,
HIRAM GRAY.
Pleasant City, Ohio

Bleeding Piles for Six Years

"Your Pile Tablets are surely wonderful. I was troubled with bleeding piles, off and on, for six years; couldn't get anything to cure them until I read your ad in the daily paper. The sample must have cured me—I haven't been bothered since."

Yours truly,
MRS. M. J. MANBECK.
R. R. 2, Box 96,
San Bernardino, Cal.

Suffered 25 Years

"It gives me great pleasure to write and tell you I am troubled no more with piles. I am 64 years of age and have suffered for over 25 years; have tried all kinds of Ointment, etc., without success.

"You are at liberty to use my name in reference to your Pile Cure and also my photograph, which I am sending you."

JOHN W. SHUMAN.
1445 N. 8th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Doctors Recommended an Operation

"I was a sufferer from piles. Two doctors had said there was nothing that would do me any good but an operation. First I tried a sample of your Pile Treatment and was greatly relieved. Then I ordered a regular Treatment and now I feel that I am cured. I advise all people who suffer with piles to take the Page Treatment."

Sincerely yours,
J. W. SHORES.

NEBRASKA FARM WOMEN FORMING HEALTH CLUBS

Work Under Direction of Extension Department of College of Agriculture.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LINCOLN, Neb.—How to keep the doctor off the farm is the mission of Louise N. Murphy of the extension department of the Nebraska Agricultural College, and she is traveling over the State teaching farm women how to be healthy and how to avoid contagion when disease appears in their neighborhood. She makes use of the movies.

Miss Murphy gets the wives and daughters of the farms together and then she gives them a talk on health and interests them in the formation of health clubs. As a result of her work already many rural communities have organized such clubs and they are in a flourishing condition. Once a club is organized the farm women see that it is kept going at top speed. Miss Murphy hopes to make every member of the health clubs a missionary.

"Nebraska heads the list of states in the union in the number of cases of smallpox," she said. "This is because people fail to observe the ordinary rules of health. Take the farm women; they are so busy at home that they feel that they can't take the time to improve their physical condition and yet when the matter of health rules and regulations are brought to their attention at meetings such as I have been conducting over Nebraska, they are eager to co-operate. The people of the rural communities are showing the greatest enthusiasm and practical common sense in health conservation and in efforts to avoid contagious diseases."

Miss Murphy said that when the ordinary rules relating to contagious diseases are followed, as they will be, it will not be necessary for every member of a family to catch them just because one member is stricken. This is one of the times when the extension expert would recommend a doctor, and she tells the farm women to report a case of contagious disease at once to him and have the patient isolated. This action, she says, will prevent a tremendous amount of serious illness among farmer folk.

MEMBERS OF TWO NOTED FAMILIES ENTER POLITICS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The recent elections started two members of noted New York families on political careers.

One was Frederick Trubee Davison, son of Henry P. Davison, Morgan partner, and the other John Griswold Webb, whose grandfather, the late John A. Griswold, Troy capitalist, furnished the money with which John Ericsson built the Monitor during the Civil War.

Davison was elected to the Assembly from Nassau County to fill the seat formerly occupied by Theodore Roosevelt, now Assistant Secretary of the Navy. He was opposed by Fontaine Taliaferro, a war veteran who, like himself, possessed an enviable record.

Webb also was elected to the Assembly, but from Duchess County. He is a nephew of Dr. William Seward Webb, who married one of the daughters of the late William K. Vanderbilt. He was graduated from Yale in 1913.

Both young men have a keen taste for politics. Davison, who is the son-in-law of the Rev. Endicott Peabody, headmaster of Groton School and once his mentor, recently announced that he would much rather enter politics than become eventually a member of a banking firm.

NEW HIGHWAY LAW MARKS STEP FORWARD

Concentration of Federal Funds Commended as Advance in Administration and Construction Practice.

The day when the Federal Government will take over the main interstate highways of the nation, was brought measureably closer by the recent enactment of the Townsend highway bill in the opinion of Roy D. Chapin, chairman of the Highways Committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

"While the new highway act is not all that students of the question would like to see," said Mr. Chapin, "the law as it now stands marks a distinct step forward in the evolution of our highway policy. Under its provisions, Federal aid can no longer be scattered broadcast. Each State Highway Department is now compelled to designate 7 per cent of the mileage in the State as a system and of this 7 per cent, three-sevenths must consist of primary highways of interstate importance on which 60 per cent of all Federal funds may be concentrated. In those states where highway work is more advanced and where the State highway departments desire to concentrate more than 60 per cent of their funds on the primary interstate roads they are permitted to do so, a clause which will enable some 16 states to pursue the policy already adopted of building the most important roads first.

Will Stimulate Main Highways.

"The immediate effect of this act will be to stimulate the construction and maintenance of the trunk highways in those states which because of lack of funds have not thus far made much progress toward an adequate system of connected highways. As this progress is made, the states themselves will undoubtedly come to the conviction already expressed by officials in the more advanced commonwealths, that interstate highways perform more than a State purpose, are the most useful to the most people and logically should be constructed and maintained by the national Government. Presumably, this work would always be carried on through existing agencies of construction rather than through the organization of a Federal agency, and the consequent release of State and county funds for the construction and maintenance of the State and county roads would greatly expedite completion of a network of highways everywhere."

Millions Saved in Costs.

"With recognition of interstate roads now a fundamental principle in the national highway law, there are numerous other scarcely less important changes to be found in the new act. The new requirements for maintenance are so exacting as to insure the nation against loss and to set a high standard for the States. The same is true in the clause which provides that highways must be constructed with due regard for future as well as prevailing traffic needs. The new and flexible formula for public lands states will be far-reaching in its benefits as will the liberal appropriations for forest roads and trails which reach a total of $15,000,000 for the next two years. The clause which directs the Secretary of war to transfer to the Secretary of Agriculture surplus war materials available for highway use will effect a saving of millions of dollars in the purchase of equipment and will modernize highway methods of construction and maintenance everywhere.

"Another provision of far-reaching importance is that requiring that states must match federal funds with funds from State sources or so controlled, with a qualifying time limit of three years to permit necessary changes in State laws to meet these conditions. The broadened definition of a highway department will require proper organization of these important units in the future.

"The authority granted the Secretary of Agriculture to undertake highway research in co-operation with independent agencies as well as through the Government will greatly stimulate study and analysis of fundamental highway problems.

Townsend Campaign Successful.

"These are some of the main charges. There are others but sufficient have been enumerated to show that the educational campaign waged by Senator Townsend to bring about a clearer appreciation of the importance of the highway problem, has been a successful one."

ONEIDA TRUCK CO. ESTABLISHES BRANCH

The Oneida Motor Truck Co. of Green Bay, Wis., who have been represented in St. Louis for the past several years by Aldrich Stephens Motor Co., 3027 Locust street, as distributers for Oneida trucks, have absorbed the local company and established a factory branch at the same address.

The factory branch is known as Oneida Missouri Motor Co., with Mr. A. G. Ingram in charge. Mr. Ingram came here from Boston more than a year and a half ago for the Oneida interests.

REO ANNOUNCES THREE NEW BODY MODELS

The new speed wagon bodies have just been announced by the Reo Motor Car Co. All three of the new jobs have enclosed cabs designed especially for winter trade. Panel sides, screen sides and an open sides job constitute the three latest models.

The panel outfit consists of two large side panels, a screen back of the driver's seat and a pair of screen doors in the rear, and is equipped with a new style short canopy covering the express box.

The present standard express box is used in this combination by adding the panel attachments. It carries the added demountable feature and can be rearranged quickly to suit the load.

The open sides job also includes the closed cab, as does the new screen job. The cab has an in-built integral, windshield and seat.

APPERSON FACTORY ESTABLISHES BRANCH

In keeping with the policy of establishing factory branches in principal cities throughout the country, the Apperson factory of Kokomo, Ind., Monday purchased outright the assets and liabilities of the Apperson-St. Louis Motors Co., 3333 Locust street, the former distributers of Apperson cars in the St. Louis territory.

T. E. Jarrard, vice president of the Apperson factory, who arranged for the purchase, stated that the branch would retain the name and premises of the former company, and that L. F. Jalageas, who was general manager of the company, had been appointed branch manager.

ANTI-FREEZE SOLUTION NECESSARY IN WINTER

With the approach of winter, attention to the cooling system of cars is required by automobile owners. With the thermometer hovering around the freezing mark owners should take precautions, because carelessness or forgetfulness may mean trouble.

A summary of the opinions of motor car manufacturers as to the value of various antifreeze solutions shows a decided preference for alcohol and glycerine. Natural alcohol does not act on metal or on the rubber connections. But the alcohol in the solution will evaporate more rapidly than the water. The solution should be watched carefully and the alcohol replenished from time to time.

If 96 per cent alcohol is used, the following solution will be found adequate for all ordinary temperatures:

Alcohol by Volume.	Water by Volume.	Approx. Specific Gravity.	Will Freeze at
1 part	3 parts	0.97	10 above zero
1 part	2 parts	0.96	Zero
1 part	1 part	0.935	20 below zero

Neutral glycerin does not act on metal, but does act on ruber connections. If used the hose connections should be examined frequently to prevent disintegration and consequent leaks. It can be prepared as follows:

Alcohol by Volume.	Water by Volume.	Approx. Specific Gravity.	Will Freeze at
1 part	3 parts	1.08	10 above zero
1 part	2 parts	1.10	Zero
2 parts	3 parts	1.13	20 below zero

Without automobiles, city rents would quickly double.

Without automobiles many suburban houses would be abandoned.

MARSHALL PROMOTED BY EXIDE FACTORY

Harry B. Marshall, for the past 12 years manager of the St. Louis district office of the Electric Storage Battery Co. of Philadelphia, manufacturers of the Exide battery, has been promoted to manager of the railroad sales department of the company, with headquarters in Philadelphia.

Marshall's promotion follows the creation by the Exide factory of individual departments for each of the various kinds of business in which storage batteries are used.

T. P. O'Malley, who has been assistant to Marshall, has been appointed acting manager.

During Marshall's reign the local district office annual business has grown from $86,000 to $1,442,000.

WESTERN AUTO AGENTS FOR GENERAL TIRES

The Western Automobile Co., one of the oldest automobile firms in St. Louis, distributers of the Pierce-Arrow passenger and commercial cars, has been awarded the agency of the General cord tire manufactured by the General Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, O., for St. Louis and adjacent territory.

C. J. Conners has been appointed manager of the tire department of the company.

By abandoning trains and using automobiles, salesmen cover more than twice as much territory.

Prosperity is coming! Railroads will be rebuilt. Highways will be improved and extended.

GENERAL MOTORS TO RETAIN ALL DIVISIONS

Contrary to belief in some quarters, decision of General oMtors Corporation to dispose of its smallest passenger car division—Scripps-Booth—does not forecast sale or liquidation of any other important units. Interests which took an active part in management when W. C. Durant relinquished control last year have been busy formulating new plans and policies which are being gradually executed. Under this reorganization numerous officials have been shifted about, plant operations in a few cases have been rearranged, and buildings not needed have been disposed of.

All this has given rise to considerable speculation as to the future of the big motor combination, and while officials naturally are reluctant to discuss their plans in detail, they are emphatic in declaration that none of the five remaining passenger car divisions is for sale.

In order to more thoroughly clearify the situation President Pierre S. DuPont issued the following statement:

"It is but natural that there should have been constant gossip during the past few weeks while automobile price revisions were under way. The policies of the General Motors Corporation with respect to certain of its manufacturing divisions were not immune; the future of the Oldsmobile being the subject of persistent rumor throughout New England.

"The Oldsmobile division of our corporation is in a healthy condition with its business stabilized and sales increasing in the face of the coming winter. The present line of Oldsmobile passenger and commercial cars, with gradual improvements, will be continued for the 1922 and 1923 selling seasons."

FRANKLIN MOTORS ENTERED IN SHOWS

Through the Salesometer, its house organ for dealers, the Franklin Automobile Co. announces that the present model without change will be featured at both the New York and Chicago shows. The Salesometer also says that Franklin cars of next spring will be of the same design as those being sold today.

For years the Franklin Automobile Co. has advocated among automobile makers the policy of incorporating improvements just as developed, believing that in this way the value of the car to the owner is maintained.

CONTINENTAL MOTORS — Powerful as the Nation — AMERICA'S STANDARD

TRADE MARK REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

To Automobile Dealers and Their Customers

Substitution usually brings more grief than good to the car owner. The Authorized Motor Parts Corporation has made it possible to obtain in St. Louis genuine factory-produced parts for standardized units.

The renewal of a part in your automobile should not be other than the part especially made and like those originally installed by the manufacturer to secure highest efficiency.

Outstanding in their respective fields for furnishing the best the market affords in standardized units, are the names, Continental, Timken, Borg & Beck and Spicer, makers of motors, axles, clutches and universal joints.

The establishment of St. Louis Headquarters where all parts are available for standardized units, marks a step forward which enables dealers to immediately install genuine parts. It gives the motorist who owns a car embodying standard units the service he is entitled to, eliminating the delays incident to awaiting factory shipment.

Continental Motor Parts

Affording every dealer the opportunity to secure parts immediately is one of the objects of establishing this Authorized Motor Parts headquarters—but in the main it is to further the satisfaction of the car owner by sustaining the efficiency of cars and trucks comprising standard units.

TIMKEN AXLE PARTS
for Commercial Vehicles

We shall have available in the very near future a complete stock of Timken axle parts for commercial vehicles.

The maintenance of this Authorized Motor Parts headquarters should prompt the desire when contemplating the purchase of a motor vehicle to insist that such units as Red Seal Continental Motor; Timken Axles; Borg & Beck Clutch and Spicer Universal Joints are part of the equipment and listed in the cars specifications.

PAIGE DEVELOPING NEW LIGHT CAR

It is being rumored in Detroit that Paige dealers, in addition to the present Paige line, will have something new in the way of an automobile to offer the public about the time of the New York and Chicago shows.

BECKER RULES ON OWNERS' CERTIFICATE

According to a recent ruling made by Secretary of State Charles U. Becker at the request of Robert E. Lee secretary and manager of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association, it will be impossible for the State to prosecute an owner of an an automobile for failure of having a certificate of ownership until March 2. Secretary Becker's reply to Lee's letter is as follows: "The penalty for not having a certificate of ownership does not go into effect for four months after the taking effect of the law on Nov. 2. This means that we can prosecute no one for failure to have such certificate before March next. By that time all the used cars now in the hands of the dealers will, no doubt, be disposed of and it is against the law for a dealer or any person to buy a car unless he is provided with a certificate of ownership by the seller, which certificate of ownership shall be sent to this office and a new one issued to the buyer."

"The license registration part of the new law does not go into effect until Feb. 1, 1922. All licenses until that time are sold under the old law.

"Under the new law cars put on the street by a dealer having a dealer's license plate on need not have a certificate of title, but when a car is sold the purchaser should fill out the blank for a certificate of title and the dealer should fill in the certificate of this blank at the time the sale is made.

"In lieu of a bill of sale we ask that all dealers when they sell a car that they fill in space No. 3 on application blank for certificate of title and have purchaser fill in space No. 1, if it be a new car, and send to this office at once with the fee of $1 for certificate of title. Blanks will be furnished dealers upon request.

"However, I further advise that if a bill of sale is necessary for you to comply with the letter of the law, you can use the ordinary bill of sale forms which may be purchased from and blank book maker or blank form maker in the city of St. Louis, Mo.

"I take it that your own bill of sale, the one which you are in the habit of giving to the buyer, will suffice for the new owner to get his certificate."

Rheumatism

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had It

In the year of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Sub-Acute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who are thus afflicted know for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, but such relief as I obtained was only temporary. Finally I found a treatment that cured me completely, and such a pitiful condition has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, even bedridden, some of them seventy to eighty years old, and the results were the same as in my own case.

"I Had Sharp Pains Like Lightning Flashes Shooting Through My Joints."

I want every sufferer from any form of muscular and sub-acute (swelling at the joints) rheumatism to try the great value of my improved "Home Treatment" for its remarkable healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address, and I will send it free to try. After you have used it, and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of such forms of rheumatism, you may send the price of it, One Dollar, but understand I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer, when relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

BUILDING COSTS HAMPER ACTIVITY IN REAL ESTATE

Demand for Residential and Business Properties Good and Early Revival of Trade Is Predicted.

NEW SUBDIVISIONS TO BE OPENED SOON

Several Important Leases of Downtown Buildings and Stores Reported—Outside Interests Seek Quarters.

While the volume of transactions in real estate is at a comparatively low stage, with that of the last year as a standard, conditions are decidedly conducive to a broad market. The demand for both residential and business properties for occupancy is characterized as the best.

Ordinarily negotiations for real estate lag at this season of the year, with the exception of high-class investment property, but surface indications point to an early revival. The chief drawback at this time is the excessive cost of construction, which is deferring negotiations. Capital, however, soon, it is believed, will have adjusted its differences with labor and material dealers. Then a general awakening will ensue, it is predicted.

Much Construction Held Up.

It is estimated that between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 worth of construction for which plans have been approved is held up by the high cost of labor and of materials. Included is the proposed Masonic Temple building, which will cost $3,000,000, and for which a site has been acquired on the north side of Lindell boulevard, west of Grand avenue and west of the St. Louis Club. The plans for this building have been accepted, according to T. C. Young, architect for them. These figures also include estimates on a dozen or more high-grade structures designed for sites in the business and amusement centers of the city, construction of which awaits only the cue from the labor leaders and material manufacturers.

The money paid out for wages and material incident to a building revival on a large scale will swell the volume of capital available for investment in real estate, especially for small homes and for flats. The demand for buildings of these types on the part of homeseekers and investors, has been restricted on account of lower wages and unemployment, but with the revival of business now under way, an improvement in this regard is forecast.

New Subdivisions to Be Opened.

Julius Pitzman, surveyor, is engaged in preparing plats for several large subdivisions which will shortly be placed on the market in anticipation of a building boom with the promised reduction in the prices of labor and material. Negotiations are also pending for several large tracts available for residential purposes.

The Gravois-Neosho Heights subdivision, in Southwest St. Louis, recently placed on the market, is being rapidly absorbed, according to Phil H. Smith, its owner. The majority of the purchasers are preparing to build.

Several Important Leases.

Important leases of downtown buildings and stores for wholesale and retail purposes were reported during the week by Tim Mullen of the Mercantile Trust Co. and the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. The identity of the lessees and location of the places leased will be made public later. The demand for quarters from outside interests contemplating locating here is significant.

3 MEN HELD IN CONNECTION WITH TRIPLE MURDER IN MICHIGAN

By the Associated Press.

DOWAGIAC, Mich., Nov. 26.—With the arrest of three men, Cass County authorities announced tonight they believed they were nearing a solution of the mystery surrounding the murder on the night of Sept. 17 last of William Monroe, his wife and their daughter, Neva.

One of the men, the officers announced, confessed, but later repudiated his statement.

The men detained are Cyrus Ryther, 30 years old; Donald Bass, 19, and Earl Cisco, 20. Bass and Cisco are negroes.

County authorities tonight took Ryther to Cassopolis, where he is held under a strong guard at the county jail.

The three members of the Monroe family were clubbed to death while asleep in their home on the outskirts of Dowagiac. 13,000 CASES OF SCOTCH SEIZED IN NEW YORK

Bonded Warehouses Used by Customs Authorities Raided by Acting Federal Prohibition Director.

INQUIRY IN CASE AFFECTS A BANK

Consignees Alleged to Have No Rights to Shipments Being Diverted to "Bootleg" Purposes.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—More than 13,000 cases of fine Scotch liquors, valued at $1,000,000, have been seized during the last few days in bonded warehouses used by the customs authorities.

The seizures have been made by E. C. Yellowley, the acting Federal prohibition director, in co-operation with the customs authorities, because it was said the consignees had no right to receive the shipments. An additional $5,000,000 worth of imported liquors in the vicinity of New York will be confiscated within the next few days on similar grounds it was announced.

Diverted to "Bootleg" Channels.

Enormous quantities of imported liquors have been diverted to "bootleg" channels, according to a mass of information Yellowley has been going over in the last month. Firms with wine importing permits only have been importing whisky and vice versa.

The trouble, Yellowley said tonight, has been in lack of co-ordination between the customs officials and the prohibition officers, which allowed loopholes of which the dishonest importer was not slow to take advantage.

Shipments totaling 8100 cases consigned to the Alps Drug Co. whose permits as wholesale druggists were revoked by Yellowley because of alleged irregularities in the conduct of their business, were the first seized by Yellowley. Of the 8100 cases one shipment of 4100 cases was discovered last week. The two shipments are valued by Federal agents at $607,000.

Several consignments, totaling 5200 cases, to Victor Casazza & Bro. also were seized, bringing the total up to 13,300 cases. Government agents found that the Casazza consignment was actually made to a national bank in this city which, it is alleged, has aided in other similar enterprises.

Bank Under Investigation.

It is the aid given to "bootleggers" by the banks, agents said, that have enabled them to continue their operations so long and on such a big scale. It is said this particular bank is under investigation by Washington officials.

The Scotch company that shipped the liquor has employed the law firm of Stanchfield and Levy. It is said a representative of the company will go to Washington Monday to lay the case before Federal officials. The firm contends that the shipment was not paid for and was made in the regular way and on permits. It is further contended that the permits had every evidence of being genuine.

Liquor Train Leads to Clubs, Hotels and Exclusive Residences.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—A further investigation made today in connection with the raiding yesterday of an apparently deserted warehouse by prohibition officials revealed that the trail of alleged illegal sales of intoxicants led to the doors of well-known clubs, certain hotels and exclusive residences.

Sixty thousand dollars' worth of choice liquors were found, but what interested the Federal raiders more were the memoranda, receipts and orders for wines and liquors found in the place. Frank Gold, alleged by Government agents to be connected with the raiding place, is under bail for further hearing by a United States Commissioner.

While Federal agents were raiding the place they answered the ring of the telephone and received orders for delivery of choice intoxicants. No names have been revealed by the Government agents, but they promise interesting development.

SOVIET OFFICIALS HOPE FOR INVITATION TO CONFERENCE

Believe Far Eastern Negotiations May Open Way—Look for Resumption of Trade.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Nov. 26.—Soviet officials indicated today that they expected official restoration of business relations with America within a very short time or at least the negotiation of some sort of trade agreement between the United States and soviet Russia.

The conference at Dairen between the Far Eastern Republic and Japan is regarded as the possible gateway through which Soviet officials may find admission to America. The Moscow Government is to participate in this conference unofficially, and it links up so closely with the Pacific problems which the Washington conference is considering that the bolshevik officials hope it will result in an invitation to Soviet Russia to send representatives to Washington.

Maxim Litvinoff is mentioned as a possibility for the post of Trade Commissioner to the United States, or even Ambassador Ludwig Martens also is mentioned as a likely candidate for the American post in the event a trade agreement is reached or America extends recognition to Soviet Russia.

Martens now is in charge of the mining section of the Economic Council in Moscow and has recently traveled widely through the mineral districts of European Russian and Siberia.

PLANNED TRAIN HOLDUP FRUSTRATED BY MARINES

Details of Recent Incident in Texas Not Revealed by Postoffice Department.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Marine guards recently frustrated a planned train holdup and mail robbery in Texas, Assistant Postmaster General O'Shaughnessy announced today. He did not reveal the details, but spoke of the case in announcing the success of the mail guard plan.

O'Shaughnessy said today the marines had been asked for after department agents had learned that raids throughout the country on the mails were being planned this winter and had already more than justified their presence.

Besides the Texas case similar plans at other places were frustrated and generally robbery of the mails had dropped notably, O'Shaughnessy said. There was evidence, he said, that some of the robberies had been carefully planned on a big scale as was that recently in New York.

Relative to the protest of the Governor of Wisconsin against the right of marines to fire at persons beating their way on trains, O'Shaughnessy said that was a matter entirely within the hands of the Navy Department, as the Postoffice Department had no authority over the marines and simply designated what trains and trucks it desired guarded.

ROMANTICISM IS WHAT'S WRONG WITH THE WORLD TODAY, SAYS H. G. WELLS

FACT, REALITY, TRUTH WILL SET THE HUMAN RACE RIGHT

Wrote "The Outline of History" Because He Wanted to Clear the Record of Idle Legend, Misrepresentation and Lies and Bring the World Face to Face With What Really Happened.

His Grievance Against Conditions Today Is That Everybody Is Being Given False Impression of What Is Really Going On, and the Romantic Novel Is Among the Worst Offenders of the Times

Striking Thoughts From Mr. Wells

TODAY we have wars. Why? There are several answers in the popular mind, but the commonest explanation is that the other nation is bad. This, of course, is indisputable. The other nation, whatever it is, is always in the wrong; and our nation, whatever it happens to be, is always in the right. It is a crime punishable by death or life imprisonment, in fact, to hold out for any other view while the war is on. Unfortunately, this gets us nowhere in the matter of preventing war.

In the next war, if there must ever be another war, common sense will demand that we call all the older men first. Let the draft age be high, too; and only in national emergency should there be any call for men under 25. All through Europe, the effects of war upon the young men who remained physically uninjured is becoming sadly apparent. They are as willing to work as ever, and, in many cases, better educated, more highly skilled than they were before the war. But they have contracted the habit of waiting for orders and their initiative has been killed. From 18 to 25 is a peculiarly dangerous time for youth to become accustomed to military life.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—I have just been interviewing H. G. Wells. What could I ask him? I wondered. Was there anything which Mr. Wells had not already said? I was sure there was, and he had come to America on purpose to say it, but the chances were all against his getting me to say it for him. Pondering the whole situation I could think of but one possible subject which he had not already treated or intended to treat, and so I asked him, with a considerable show of nonchalance, what he thought about me.

I braced myself for the reply. I knew it was quite possible that he had not been thinking about me very much; but direct information of this sort, like love or death, is apt to produce a shock, no matter in what guise it comes.

"The reporter," he said, "is the most important person in the world today."

I felt better already, but Mr. Wells added:

"Telling the truth is the finest of the arts. Romanticism is the world's greatest curse. The man who can make us see what is actually happening does us the greatest possible service. The man who tries to fit events into theories instead—the man who believes in something more strongly than he believes in finding out what is actually so—that man is the important nuisance in our modern world."

Would Try to End Wars.

Before I write another word, I want to make a confession to my readers. Mr. Wells didn't use those exact words, but that was the idea. Wells talks very much as he writes. If I could use the exact language that he does, I wouldn't be interviewing him; I'd be writing the world's greatest novels or revolutionizing history instead. I do solemnly swear, then, that the slant in life which I am setting forth in this article came to me from H. G. Wells. But I am going to be very sparing of quotation marks, as I do not want anyone to be criticising him for my own peculiar Americanese.

I think I understood Mr. Wells before we finished our conversation—understood him as I had not understood him from my limited reading of his books. As a historian, as a novelist and as a reporter, I discovered, he seemed to be fighting just one fight. He has been quarreling with romance. He has been trying to outline life as it actually is, instead of as some institution which does our thinking for us has decreed that it must be. He has no quarrel with faith or hope or even with an optimistic desire to put the best possible construction on any particular situation. That we are unanimously opposed to disease is a good sign for the race, but that in itself will never protect us from epidemics. We are all opposed to war, but that is no guarantee of world peace. We must find out what causes disease and what causes war; and after we have found out, we must either get it out of our system or take the consequences.

But why do we have diseases? Well, one reason why we used to have epidemics that swept away whole populations was that we didn't know what the human body was. And why didn't we know what the human body was? Because we thought it a sin to find out. We assumed that plagues were punishments sent by God; and in order to avert them we prayed and propitiated as best we could and tortured and burned all our citizens who were suspected of heresy and doubt.

Everybody But Ourselves Wrong.

Today we have wars. Why? There are several answers in the popular mind, but the commonest explanation is that the other nation is bad. This, of course, is indisputable. The other nation, whatever it is, is always in the wrong; and our nation, whatever that happens to be, is always in the right. It is a crime punishable by death or life imprisonment, in fact, to hold out for any other view while war is on. Unfortunately, this gets us nowhere in the matter of preventing war.

Take another illustration: There is much unhappiness today in love and marriage. Same reason, of course. The other party is in the wrong. Obviously, then, the thing to do is to punish the other party. But unfortunately once more, this does not get us anywhere in the solution of the eternal question.

Now, what is the distinguishing characteristic in our common attitude toward all these questions? From Mr. Wells' viewpoint, it is romanticism. The romantic novel must have a hero and a villain. One must be 100 per cent pure and good and honorable, the other must be an evil betrayer, consciously set up some course which he knows is wrong. Right also must triumph and the hero and heroine must embrace in the fadeaway, with the assumption on the part of all concerned that they live happy ever afterward.

In the romantic attitude toward education also the course must be devised to corroborate what we already know. It is permissible to engage in research of a sort, but no "sacred truths" may be challenged. The world, to be sure, has partially broken away from this, but it took half a century of struggle on the part of modern science to make any headway against the rigid old concepts. The sciences of sanitation and bacteriology have at last broken down our romantic attitude toward disease and in modern engineering lightning is generally employed in human service instead of being feared as an engine of divine displeasure.

But in the science of human conduct not much headway has yet been made. Every moving picture director knows this. The public—and nowhere is this more true than in America—will not permit the movie favorites to act as people act. They must act, instead, as the public assumes or believes that people ought to act. Stage characters must be governed by laws that do not govern actual life. Only occasionally does the realistic drama succeed.

And in the matter of international relations, or world affairs, we have insisted on the assumption that there is no world; that there are only nations, and it is compulsory upon each citizen of a nation to look upon all questions from the standpoint of that nation's interest. In purely national problems, strangely, we permit divisions. Then we are allowed to think as parties, as groups. But in world problems—problems that cannot conceivably be settled from the standpoint of national interest—it is incumbent upon us to think only as patriots. In the meantime competition between nations goes on, and there inevitably comes a time when the various national interests conflict. And wars result in spite of the fact that nobody anywhere wants war.

How We Romanticize War.

If this story could be told as it actually is, the chances of going to war might be slight. But it cannot be told until after the war is over; for the first thing that a nation at war does is to seize the channels of communication. And then they romanticize the war. Our own particular nation, of course, whatever nation that happens to be, does not do this. Our nation is always honorable; it is for the honor of our nation, in fact, that we always fight, and it is unthinkable that our nation should keep us misinformed for fear that a full understanding of the whole situation on our part might cause mischief. But the other nations—they are villains. They have no honor in them. They are committed consciously to the path of sin and they ought to be wiped off the face of the earth.

This, of course, is not the story of the world as it is, but it is the story of the world as it must be told. Almost everybody, in fact, up to a few years ago, assumed that there was no other way to tell it. There had been a considerable rebellion against romance in literature and biology, although the pioneers in both lines were pilloried as folk wha were bent on taking the charm out of life. But as for romance in history—why, all the histories that children were studying everywhere were national histories, glorifying each nation's achievements and dedicated to the assumption that each particular nation was the hero of the world play and that only the nations on the other side were villains.

Mr. Wells didn't tell me so, but there was, I remembered, one important exception to this rule. That was the United States of America. To be sure, this nation had always followed more or less the same course, but different from the others; this nation was always indisputably right and there was obviously no other course to take.

Pupil of Darwin and Huxley.

Darwin and Huxley are generally looked upon today as the great pioneers in the war against romance in their particular lines of research. Their theories have been revised, but their contribution remains. The right to inquire, the right to challenge even the most sacred assumptions, has in a measure been established. But I was particularly interested in hearing of a young student under Huxley and his associates in the Royal College of Science in England. He was a poor boy. He had been a draper's clerk. He not only thrilled to the new life of inquiry, but he saw something in the situation which few others saw. He saw that the story of things as they are is every bit as charming as the old romance.

That boy was Herbert Wells. He was fascinated by the new vistas which science opened to him. So far from losing faith in people, moreover, he believed that they too would be fascinated if they only could see. He experimented. He began to tell real stories; fiction, to be sure, but fiction in which people acted according to the laws that govern people in life. And within a few years he became the greatest name in English fiction and the most popular writer in all the world.

In the course of time came the World War. And just because science had been developed so highly, that war became the most frightful war of history. The more people knew, it seemed, the quicker would they be able to extinguish the whole human race. That is, at least, unless they should turn their inquiry to finding out how that race actually acts.

All of which caused him eventually to write "The Outline of History." For years now Mr. Wells has been taking our breath away. Wasn't it enough, he asked, that one man should become the leading novelist of his time? Must that same individual become the world's greatest historian too? But it is all explained when you come to meet H. G. Wells. He is a man who sees things as they are and asserts his right to tell about them in just that way. "The Outline of History" was the most natural theme on earth for such a realist as Wells to write.

Now, as I was saying, most of us demand of our heroes that they shall not be like other men. This applies, strangely, when the man happens to be a hero in the war of realism versus romance; for our romantic habits are much deeper than our intellectual conclusions, and when we realists start out to have a hero we insist upon having a thoroughly romantic one. But Mr. Wells personally is real. That is, he is unheroic. He is so much like the rest of us in appearance that we would never think of giving him a star part; and where he differs from the rest of us so that you can notice it, is mainly in the fact that he is English, while most of us are not. Seemingly he has just one extraordinary power. He can see and can tell us what he sees so that a whole lot of people can see it too.

To show how ordinary he is, let me tell you what he told me when I asked him what had most impressed him in this visit to New York. He had been in this country but once before—in 1906. I had a right, hadn't I, to suppose that he would call attention to some great spiritual truth, some new note in our art or architecture, perhaps, or some hitherto unnoticed principle in our industrial organization. But no, what he had noticed is just what all of us New Yorkers have been noticing every day for the past two years especially. He had noticed, he said, the fine, athletic bodies of our youth. To be more specific he had noticed the beautifully shaped legs of thousands of New York girls.

I said Mr. Wells' peculiar characteristics is that he can make us see what he sees. Is it that, or that he asserts the right to tell what all of us actually do, but which most of us do not think it proper to take official notice of? An obscure person, of course, talking to his own circle of friends, would be apt to make such a comment concerning the charms of New York. But a candidate for President couldn't do it. A foreign ambassador couldn't do it. And the world's leading novelist couldn't do it if he were dependent for his position upon the maintenance of any romantic formula. Our heroes must never be real people. Whatever brains they may be allowed to have off-stage when they strut before us for our delectation they must be near-idiots.

No American Discourtesy, He Says.

Mr. Wells not only made this intelligent comment, but he wanted to know all that could be known about it. He has traveled a good deal since the war and has become used to malnutrition and its effects. He has seen parades of the gaunt, the deformed and the starved along the very avenues where beauty was on exhibition. But in New York, he said, there was much in evidence which mere opulence could not account for.

The athletic figures, the fine straight legs, full chests and free muscular movements of young New York—nowhere on earth he said, did he suppose there was a city which could make such a showing. I suggested that it might be due to the great work of our Public Schools Athletic League. He didn't know. But whatever it was, it was something for other cities to emulate.

I asked him if American discourtesy got on his nerves. He said that it never had, that he never shared the common idea abroad that Americans were discourteous. Then he spoke especially of New York's taxi drivers. He liked them. He was enthusiastic about them. Some people might call them uncouth in their address at times, but it wasn't discourtesy. They always got him where he wanted to go, with willingness, skill and dispatch, and he hadn't had any trouble about fares. What better courtesy could anybody ask?

When I spoke of the military force available in this best fed of countries Mr. Wells winced. In the next war, he said, if there must ever be another war, common sense will demand that we call the older men first. Let the draft age be high, too; and only in national emergency should there be any call for men under 25.

All through Europe, he told me, the effect of the war upon those young men who had remained physically uninjured was becoming sadly apparent. They were as willing to work as ever and in many cases better educated, more highly skilled, than before they were to war. But they had contracted the habit of waiting for orders and their initiative had been killed. From 18 to 25 is a peculiarly dangerous time, psychologically, for youth to become accustomed to military life. In this country we had no doubt escaped most of these bad effects, but in the next war, if there is to be a war, we cannot hope to do so.

Youth of Today Best in History.

Mr. Wells, it need not be stated, is not the least bit cynical. He likes people as they are and believes that they will abolish war just as soon as they can find a way to act in concert. It is the romanticist, he says, who becomes cynical just as soon as life fails to measure up to his romance. It is the romantic moralist who is all on edge today concerning our youth.

Wells thinks that our best youth today are the best youth of all history. He thinks they are morally cleaner than were the youngsters of his generation and mine. They say shocking things. They talk about eugenics and birth control and all sorts of outlandish subjects to the utter scandal of their elders, and give voice to opinions and views on marriage and sex which betray a knowledge "that properly brought up" children were never supposed to have, to say nothing of blurting it out in mixed company at the dinner table. But one thing, he says, they didn't do, which the older generation did: They don't go off in a corner and whisper stories. Smut has somehow lost its fascination for them. They have become realists and their minds are more sanitary.

I haven't said a word about Wells at the Washington conference. He is there, I know, as a realist. He is there to tell what the situation actually is, just as you and I possibly know that it is if we could only put it into words. He is there as a person, a very ordinary person, who happens to be able to say what the ordinary person knows. He won't be paraded and feted, partly because he doesn't like to be, but partly, I suspect, because he wouldn't know how to act. The role of hero in his mind is a fake. It is romantic nonsense. This world, as a matter of scientific fact, is all peopled with folks, and these folks don't want to spend all of their time and money in the romantic occupation of killing each other off. It has been officially stated from time to time that this is not a disarmament conference and that real disarmament is impossible. I dunno! I have been talking with impossible. I dunno. I have been talking with Wells. I simply want to find out.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

H. C. L.—The religious affiliations of a wife would have no bearing upon the application of a candidate for entry into Masonry.

E. M. S.—We think it would be advisable for a single woman who owns her own home to adopt a girl as a companion. You might inquire at any of the orphans' homes.

B. B. B.—The width of the Mississippi at the Eads Bridge when the river is at 5 foot guage is 1600 feet. The width at the Free Bridge is 1500 feet. The width of the river varies in proportion to the depth.

S. I. S.—To become a fashion model one must have some experience, although some girls naturally have the ability to wear clothes and display them to best advantage without previous training. Apply to wholesale firms and to the department stores, where the models are required to act as saleswomen also. To become a model you should have the required weight, height and carriage.

M. & B. (1) We do not know what you mean by the "best washed people" in the world. (2) President Harding, in a proclamation addressed to the people of the United States, formally announced the death of Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, and directed that the national flag be displayed at half staff as an expression of the national sorrow at his death.

J. S. O.—In order to evaporate any fluid, heat is required, a typical example being the change of water to steam. The amount of heat to effect the change from liquid to gas is in most instances quite enormous. When water is exposed to air, for instance, as on a cooling tower, the air, especially if it is low in moisture, will cause evaporation of the water. That evaporation requires heat from somewhere and this heat is taken from the water that does not evaporate, and in consequence of this removal of heat the water is cooled. A similar instance of cooling is shown when alcohol is placed on the hand. The rapid evaporation requires water, and thus heat is drawn from the hand and causes cooling.

A TEACHER.—To remove grease spots from dark blue taffeta try the following: Benzol 500 parts, benzine 500 parts, best white shaved soap 5 parts and sufficient warm water. Dissolve the soap in the warm water, using from 50 to 60 parts. Mix the benzol and benzine and add the soap solution a little at a time, shaking up well after each addition. If the mixture is slow in emulsifying, add at one time from 50 to 100 parts of warm water and shake violently. Set the emulsion aside for a few days, or until it separates, then decant the superfluous water, and pour the residual pasty mass, after stirring it up well, into suitable boxes. (2) The word legion means a great number or multitude and is usually associated with armies. Where the name of the "American Legion" originated can readily be determined from the character and purpose of the organization.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(Prepared by a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

WANTTONO.—If the woman's husband has been absent for seven years or more, without being known to her to be living, she is not guilty of bigamy.

REGULAR SUBSCRIBER.—It would not be safe for your wife to buy real estate in her own name since you have both gone into voluntary bankruptcy.

WORRIED.—If you signed a contract the correspondence school could sue you, but could only recover the actual loss which they incurred as a result of your failure to take the course. If they threaten you, consult the Legal Aid Bureau in the Municipal Courts Building.

HEARTBROKEN WIFE.—You can sue your husband in the Court of Domestic Relations to compel him to support you. If he had to give his earnings to you that might let the other woman out.

SUBSCRIBER.—In order to sell stock, the company must file statements with the State Bank Commissioner, who will issue a permit. The penalty for not doing this is fine or imprisonment or both. A purchaser has no recourse except to institute prosecution, unless the seller was guilty of fraud or misrepresentation.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

F. J. F.—See answer to C. M. G.

Q. E. D.—The voice is best developed for singing and speaking by tuition, with a teacher who makes a study of teaching. You do not state your age. In adolescence the voice naturally changes.

C. R. P.—The most nutritious foods for the building of flesh are sugars, starches and fats, but after all it is not so much the character of the food as the power of assimilation that counts.

C. M. G.—For dandruff and falling hair: A certain amount of dandruff in the hair is normal. It is the natural exfoliation of the upper layer of the skin of the scalp. When it becomes excessive it generally indicates some disturbance in the scalp and is very often found to precede falling of the hair. Excessive dandruff, therefore, merits attention of those who wish to preserve the hair. There are three forms of baldness from a practical viewpoint, senile baldness, premature baldness and symptomatic baldness. The first two are not amendable to treatment from the standpoint of a cure, although in premature baldness the eventual loss of the hair may be delayed somewhat. It is in symptomatic baldness that treatment is effective, and it is to this that the following applies. Disorder of the general health is often reflected in the loss of the hair and this should be considered in such cases, any departure from the normal health being sought for and corrected. Locally the treatment may be summed up in the one word, "stimulation." Weekly, semiweekly or even daily cleansing of the scalp should be practiced. This is best done with the following wash: Saponis viridis, four ounces; alcohol, two ounces. Dissolve with heat and filter. After shampooing with this, rinse the hair thoroughly in clear water and dry as thoroughly as possible and then apply the following: Carbolic acid, 15 grains; glycerin, 2 drams; cologne water enough to make one ounce. Mix thoroughly and apply as follows: Make a part in the hair and drop the mixture on the scalp at intervals of an inch and rub in with a soft brush, a tooth brush serves well. Cover the scalp by this method, making one part after another. After a time the shampooing may be done less often, but the mixture should be applied faithfully and persistently until the hair ceases to fall or the case must be abandoned as hopeless.

MAN comes into this world with "nothing on him." In a short time "everybody" has something on him. We've got it on the world for selling "clothes at the rock-bottom prices." We have "scored" a "regular knockout" on our 1921 overcoats and suits; $15, $20 and $25 will buy a wonderful all-wool garment, a "drummer sample;" save $10 to $15. "What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you;" these fine garments are made by manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for salesmen; they are made better than the regular goods; after they show them off we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit of our buying. This policy enables us to save you money. All we ask is to "go shopping around" first and come here last. We will certainly get your "dough." Buy more, pay less. Vandeventer, Market, Sarah, Manchester, Chouteau, all lines transfer to our door. "Abrams, the Place to Buy Clothes," 926 S. Vandeventer av., near Chouteau av.

A BRAND-NEW Player-Piano for $295, f. o. b. factory; no camouflage about it. We have them for sale at this price and we want to sell them. No bait about this ad. The other fellows will tell you we can't do it, and that we don't do it, but we do do it, often every day. You will buy one of them, too, if you see them, for the very good reason that you cannot buy a new player of like value elsewhere within $200 of this price. Every person who is willing to pay $500 for a player-piano, who don't look at this $295 new player, is cheating himself.

HOW can you sell that player for $295? That's what nearly every piano man in town has said to us. Well, we have told them all the same thing. We can do it because we are willing to sell on shorter profits than anybody else in the country and rely on volume. Every person that calls at our store who is any judge of a player-piano buys of us because they quickly recognize the wonderful value we are offering in this player at $295, f. o. b. factory. You cannot duplicate it elsewhere within $200 of this price. Make us prove what we claim.

MR. BARGAIN HUNTER—You'll find some second-hand bargain in this column that will interest you, and you will go down to some store tomorrow to see it, and if it has not "just been sold," you won't like it, anyway. The salesman will tell you he didn't think you would, etc. Then he will show you a nice-looking one for twice the price of the bargain you came down to see. Don't fall for that. Say to the salesman "We will go down to Wurlitzer's, and see that new player-piano they are selling for $295." He will say to you, "They don't sell any new player for $295. They can't do it. They advertise they will, but it cannot be done," etc., etc. Then he will try all the harder to sell you one at $500 or $600 (one that has been used for demonstrating. The original price of which was $900?) Keep strongly in your mind that every argument he uses against our $295 new player is absolutely not so, but you still insist you are going to see whether or not Wurlitzer's sells brand-new players at $295. Come in here and you will find we do this very thing, and you will see, too, that these new players we sell for $295, f. o. b. factory, are the equal of the players you have been looking at which were offered you around $500 at the other store. Seeing is believing.

BEYER'S, 17th and Locust sts. (c37)

YOU want to buy a real good player-piano for a small amount of money; that's why you are reading these bargain ads. You don't have to buy a second-hand player to do that very thing. For $295, f. o. b. factory, you can buy a brand-new player-piano from us. Similar pianos are sold by other stores at about $500. We sell these players, too; bear that in your mind when you come in our store. We don't try to get you to buy a player at $500 or $600. Any person who sees this player and don't buy it, does not know values. Look at it and see for yourself; that's fair enough, isn't it? We are the largest manufacturers of musical instruments in the world. From the manufacturer to the home.

FOUR SISTERS AND BROTHERS ACCUSED OF AUTO THEFT PLAN

Philadelphia School Teacher One of Those Arrested in Connection With Los Angeles Case.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—Miss Hazel Whitaker, a public school teacher here, was held in $2000 bail for a hearing by a United States Commissioner today in connection with an alleged scheme to steal automobiles to collect insurance. According to Federal authorities, Miss Whitaker, a sister and two brothers were indicted in Los Angeles, Cal., on Nov. 14 in connection with the case.

Norman T. Whitaker, one of the brothers, widely known as a chess player and a lawyer in Washington, D. C., is under bail in the national capital, according to the Federal authorities, and Roland Whitaker is under bail at Baltimore. The other sister under bonds, the Federal authorities said, is Dorothy Whitaker.

Norman Whitaker characterized the arrest as ridiculous.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 26.—The four Whitakers, two brothers and two sisters, held in Eastern cities on charges of theft of an autmobile, were indicted here following the arrest here of Harry Dresel of Philadelphia several weeks ago, according to Federal authorities. Dresel is in jail here.

Federal authorities say that evidence has been adduced indicating that alleged operations of the group of five were based upon theft of automobiles and bringing them to California from Eastern cities.

NO LECTURES BY DRY AGENTS

National Commissioner Confers With Officers on Subject.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—How much talking prohibition agents should mix with their enforcement activities was said to have been under consideration today by Treasury officials.

Commissioner Haynes conferred with John Exnicious, officially described as "the terror of the Pacific coast," who is head of the enforcement unit in Western Pennsylvania. They were understood to have discussed criticism in Pittsburg against reported speeches by Exnicious on the relation of legal authorities to prohibition enforcement. Later Haynes held a conference with Secretary Mellon. While the Treasury gave no indication of its attitude toward speech making by prohibition agents in general, some high officials have taken the stand that field agents should limit their lecture activities to the minimum and push their enforcement operations to the maximum.

15 SHIPS OF THE OLD NAVY TO BE PUT ON AUCTION BLOCK SOON

Schley's Flagship, the Missouri of 1901 and Monitor, Built in 1862, Are Included.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Fifteen ships of the old navy will be put on the auction block soon, it was announced tonight by the Navy Department. Several of them helped to make American history, among them being the cruiser Brooklyn, flagship of Rear Admiral William S. Schley during the battle of Santiago. Others are the cruiser Columbia, which in her prime was one of the fastest ships on the sea; the battleship Maine, which replaced the battleship of that name destroyed in Havana harbor; the battleship Missouri, launched in 1901; the cruiser Memphis, now a wreck on the San Dominican coast, and the torpedo boat Dale, which recently has been known as the Oriole, while serving as headquarters of the Baltimore naval militia.

Four monitors on the list are the Minatomah, built in 1862; the Ozark, formerly the Arkansas, and the Puritan, both of which have served as naval militia ships at Washington, and the Tonopah.

Other ships are the Intrepid, a steel training ship; the Galatea and the Vega, steam yachts used as patrol craft in the world war, the freighter Surprise and the destroyer Smith, built in 1900.

MAN FIGHTS OFFICERS, WHO COME TO TAKE HIS SISTER

Second Inquiry in Peoria in Two Days Into Keeping of Insane Woman in Private Home.

By the Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., Nov. 26.—After a fight with officers coming to take his sister before a Sanity Board, Henry Bengen is in jail tonight. The body of the woman, Mrs. Martha Peflacks, 38 years old, was covered with bruises when officers took her from the house. A cage-like box was found in the room in which she had been kept. The case is the second within two days in which neighborhood complaints have caused official investigation into the alleged keeping of insane women in private homes by relatives. In both intsances the women were adjudged of unsound mind.

Bengen, who has had the handling of a $6000 estate left to his sister by her father, denied at the sanity hearing this afternoon that he had ever struck Mrs. Peflacks with a club, and said the large box found in the room was for storing of fruit and asserted his sister had never been locked in it.

Appointment of the Dime Savings and Trust Co. as conservator for Mrs. Mary Darr, 80, following assertions by neighbors that her daughter and son-in-law had been practically holding her captive for 15 years, was made in Probate Court today.

Mrs. Hagemeyer, her daughter, said Mrs. Barr had been kept under lock and key after her mind became enfeebled to prevent her from wandering about the streets, according to the State's attorney's office, who announced no arrests would be made.

MERIT SYSTEM ADOPTED AT STATE PENITENTIARY

Misconduct Punished by Deductions From the "Good Time" Marks of Prisoners.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 23.—A new code of conduct has been drafted by Warden Hill and the other commissioners of penal institutions and has been put into effect at the State Penitentiary here for the guidance and discipline of the 2280 men and 80 women confined therein.

Under the "three-fourths law" and the "merit system" it is possible for a convict who maintains a perfect prison record to obtain release after having served seven-twelfths of the sentence imposed. Thus, when a prisoner with a 12-year sentence, for instance, arrives he is credited on the books with five years of "good time." That is, this deduction from his sentence can be earned by good conduct. Reduction of the "good time" to his credit is made according to a regular schedule, so many days for each offense of certain classes.

This "good time" is the most prized possession of every convict. Even the "lifers" jealously guard their "good time" for unless it is intact or nearly so, they realize that all efforts to obtain pardon or parole.

Once Punished by Whipping.

The standard by which convicts in the penitentiary measure their conduct once was marked by a table in which appeared references to "lashes," for there was a time not so long ago when Missouri prisoners were punished at a whipping post, a few lashes for talking, a few more for spoiling a shoe or garment in the workshop, a large number for serious breaches of discipline.

And so it is that an offense for which a citizen might be fined $1 and costs from a Police Judge or neighborhood Justice of the Peace, in the prison is met with the loss of "good time," and this punishment is meted out for many acts which in life outside are common, or at most evoke only a frown or reprimand from one in authority. Loud talking, injury to books, fighting, gambling and faulty work are samples of the sort of offenses summarily dealt with inside the walls.

The list of "thou shalt nots" now in effect developed, from a similar one in use for several years, and the penalties in loss of "good time" follow:

Loss of all "good time" for assault with weapon on another prisoner, attempt to escape, accompanied by violence; escaping, mutiny.

Most Serious Offenses.

Ten days to all "good time"—destruction of State property; destruction or mutilation of State goods.

Fifteen days to all "good time"—having contraband articles on person or in cell.

Thirty days to all "good time"—having narcotics in possession; insubordination; receiving narcotics from another prisoner or from outside.

Sixty days to all "good time"—selling or giving narcotics to another prisoner.

Sixty days—hiding out, using threatening language; 30 to 60 days—creating general disturbance; 10 to 60 days—insolence to officer, guard or foreman, stealing; 10 to 30 days—disobedience, fighting, wasting food; 5 to 20 days—bad work; 30 days—failure to be at cell door at counting time; 15 days—disturbance in cell house, writing improper letters, unbecoming conduct; 10 days—creating personal disturbance, injuring library books, loud talking, quarreling with profanity, smuggling out letters, smuggling letters or aught else to women prisoners, short work, spitting on floor, talking at sick call or in chapel, vile or obscene language, writing unauthorized letters; one to 15 days—gambling, talking in dining room, from cell to cell, or in line.

Only 24 in Stripes.

In addition there are other penalties, such as solitary confinement, revocation of privileges and the striped uniforms. The prison uniform here is horizon gray and only 24 prisoners now are in stripes, most of them for attempts to escape. By good conduct the "stripers" finally may get rid of their badge of misconduct which marks them alike to guards and visitors as "bad actors."

MT. VERNON SANATORIUM NOT OPEN TO NEGRO PATIENTS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 26.—Presence of one negro patient from St. Louis in the State Sanatorium for the treatment of incipient tuberculosis at Mount Vernon does not mean that the institution has been thrown open to negroes on the same basis as whites, Chairman H. D. Evans of the State Eleemosynary Board said here today. Considerable resentment has arisen among the more than 200 white patients of the sanatorium over the presence of the negro, who is waited upon by white nurses and physicians, just as are the others, according to a letter received here from a resident of Mount Vernon.

Chairman Evans said the negro had been admitted to the sanatorium by Supt. Bruton without knowledge of his race, the negro being a light mulatto.

"When Bruton discovered that he had a negro in the institution he notified me," said Evans, "and I told him I would consult the other members of the board. We will have to take some steps, for there is no disposition on our part to force the negro and white wards of the State in any of its institutions to intermingle. In some of the other institutions we have negro wards, and that is what we should have at Mount Vernon, but until the State makes such provision, of course, negroes cannot be received there."

LEGION WANTS CHOICE OF BONUS APPOINTEES

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 26.—A hot fight is on within the narrow confines of the Executive Committee of the American Legion in Missouri over the appointment of the two bonus commisisoners, whose choice was left by the Legislature in the hands of Gov. Hyde. The Governor already has given one of the places to John McNeely of St. Joseph, an attorney, who early in the recent war commanded the 139th Infantry in the Thirty-fifth Division. McNeely is a Republican. Men close to Gov. Hyde say that the other place has been offered to James E. Rieger of Kirksville, a Democrat, who commanded the 138th Infantry on its return from France. Neither McNeely nor Rieger was an applicant.

Plans of the faction, which dominates the Executive Committee of the legion, contemplated the naming of other and younger men, active in the affairs of that organization, and strong support was aligned for J. K. Noonan of Kansas City, a Democrat, and Arthur Conger Jr. of Harrisonville, a Republican. Leaders in the legion affairs in St. Louis sought the appointment of W. N. Phillips, secretary of the local Executive Committee of the order.

Lobby Attended Session.

Several men, including Noonan and John F. Williams of Joplin, former State commander of the legion, were here during the last special session of the Legislature, lobbying to assure incorporation in the bonus bill of features which a majority of the legion Executive Committee wanted in the measure, among which was the commission feature, over which considerable friction had arisen in the legion committee.

Before the legionnaires departed they had several interviews with Gov. Hyde, and previously had discussed bonus matters with him in Kansas City during the legion convention. Though no public statement has been made by either side, it is understood that the legion leaders got the idea they were to be permitted to name the two appointive bonus commissioners who, with Adjutant-General Raupp, would administer the bonus. Gov. Hyde said that he had asked the legion to submit a list from which he might choose.

List Sent to Governor.

When the "list" got to Hyde it was found that the bulk of the recommendations of the Executive Committee had placed their approval on Noonan and Conger, in response to invitation by Edwards Cahill of Kansas City to "submit the names of two," while the recommendations of the others were scattering.

It is understood that this procedure did not meet the Governor's idea in the matter, so his friends in the Executive Committee set out to sound sentiment as to McNeely and Rieger among the 17 who, with Noonan, constitute the Executive Committee. The result was that a portion have given their approval to the two Colonels. Telegrams, letters and telephone messages still are being exchanged rapidly, however, between the persons interested, and even the support of individual posts is said to be in demand by both sides.

The bonus commissioners are to receive $10 a day.

ARGENTINE CITY'S LEADING POLITICIANS AND EDITORS JAILED

Cavalry Patrols Streets of San Juan During Feud Which Caused Slaying of Governor.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 26.—With many of its leading politicians and journalists in jail and with the streets patrolled by cavalry, the city of San Juan, capital of the Province of the same name, is the scene of an old-time political feud, reminiscent of the early tumultuous history of Argentina, when political ascendancy was won by the best-armed party. The feud was responsible for the assassination last Sunday of Gov. Jones.

Jones was leader of the radical party in the Province and a supporter of the administration of President Yrigoyen. The Federal Government immediately sent the military to calm the excited people and to maintain the authority of Luis Colombo, president of the Provincial Supreme Court, who assumed the provincial governship. Colombo also was fired on by the assassins, but received only slight injuries.

Immediately upon taking office, Colombo began the arrest of leaders of the opposing faction, including persons suspected of instigating the crime. Meanwhile, Juan Estrella, president of the Provincial Senate, who had been absent from the city, returned and issued a decree proclaiming himself provincial Governor. He was promptly seized and thrown into jail. Three men, alleged to be the actual assassins, were arrested yesterday. They are reported to have confessed, implicating several politicians.

CAVITY IS WASHED IN STREET

A broken six-inch water main at 1:30 p. m. yesterday washed a hole large enough to engulf an automobile in the street where Rutger, Merchant and Third streets converge.

The neighborhood was without water supply until workmen capped both ends of the break. The point where the earth was washed out is near the place in Rutger street recently excavated for the Mill Creek sewer.

"LIKE A RAINBOW IN THE SKY"——

—LLOYD GEORGE

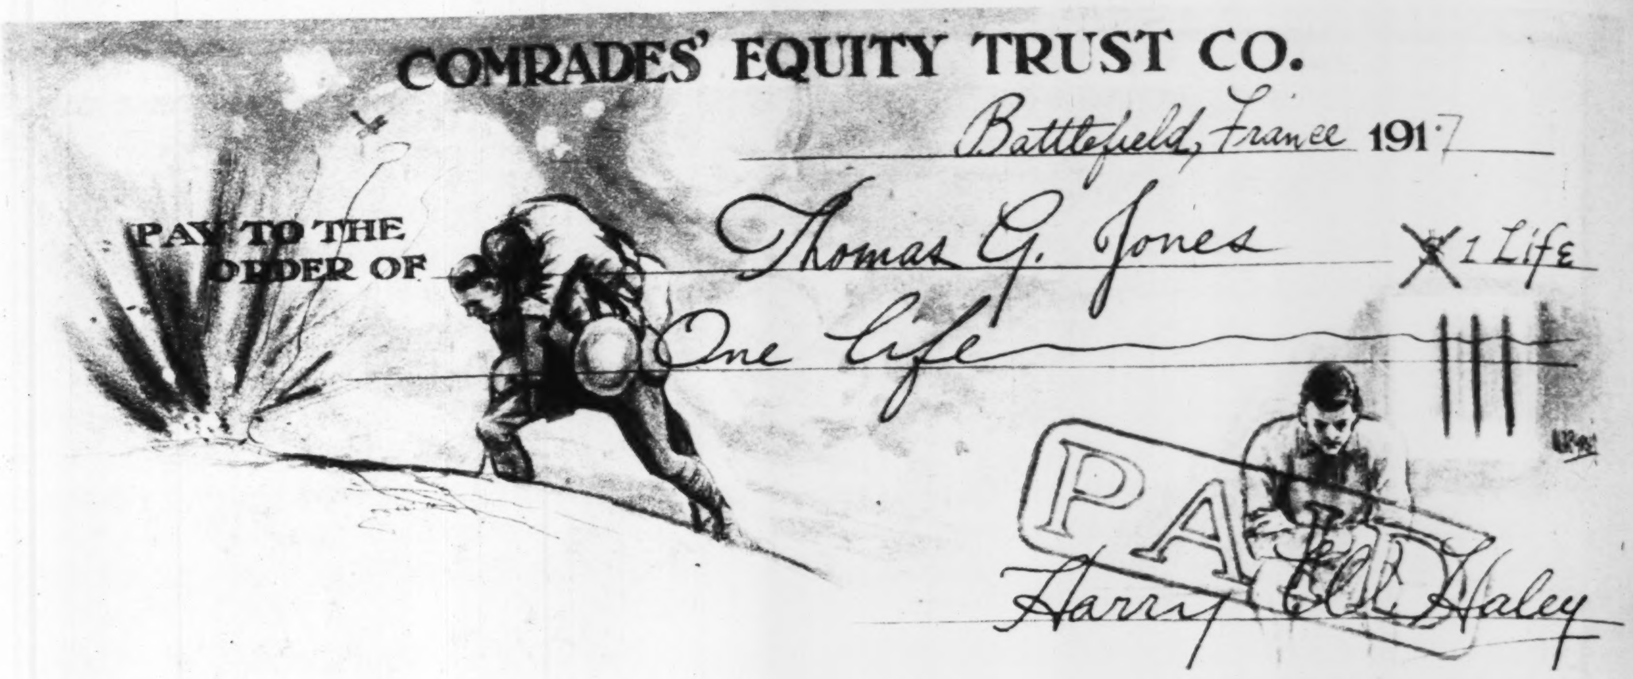
THIS beautiful night picture of the Capitol at Washington, as it appeared during the special illumination arranged for the conference on limitation of armaments, may be regarded as illustrating Lloyd George's eloquent allusion to the conference, shortly before it opened, as "like a rainbow in the sky." The phrase occurred during a speech which the Prime Minister delivered at the Lord Mayor's banquet, in the historic Guild Hall, London, on November 9.

"The world is settling down to work," declared Lloyd George, "and it is work alone that will fill the depleted tills which will enable purchasers to come to the markets. The blue sky is beginning to emerge; the Washington conference, summoned by President Harding, is like a rainbow in the sky. For, without the assurance of peace, restoration of business is impossible.

"This conference comes none too soon. So far, the war has not had the effect which every sane man anticipated from it, in arresting the growths of armaments.

"Man is the most unteachable of all animals. If you inflict punishment upon any other animal, he quickly learns the lesson" . . .

War Veteran Serves Prison Sentence For "Buddy" Who Saved His Life



Extraordinary narrative, verified by army records, of how Private Harry Haley went to Leavenworth and served 5 months of a 6 months term to clear the name of the sick pal who had rescued him in Flanders—Courageous sacrifice came to nothing when fear of discovery moved prisoner to confess the imposture.

THE pages of martial history sparkle with the record of heroic deeds performed by men for their "buddies" on the field of battle; but this story concerns devotion of another sort. It was a devotion that expressed itself, not in one flaming act of high daring, but in silent resolution to face dishonor and weary, dragging months in prison, for the sake of a man's "buddy." It is a story of how a man repaid, up to the very hilt, the friend who had saved his life.

There is no difficulty about the facts in this case; they constitute a part of the records of the United States army. The last item in the record consists of a notation to the effect that Harry W. Haley, former soldier in the United States and British armies, was released from Leavenworth prison a few weeks ago, after serving five months of a six-months sentence for an act of desertion which he never committed, although he had pleaded guilty to it.

Haley's explanation is simple: The guilty man was his buddy. "He saved my life in Flanders," he said. "And, besides, he's married now, and I'm not. Any man would do that much for his buddy, wouldn't he?"

A tragic phase of the story, however, is the fact that Haley's sacrifice was useless. His friend will have to take his medicine if he is caught. (Up to this writing he is at large.) An accidental circumstance led to the discovery of Haley's gallant imposture, and so his sacrifice came to nothing. Nothing, that is, unless you except the satisfaction that comes to a man from having performed so fine an act, and excepting, also, the numerous offers of money and work that have come to him since news of the episode went through the country.

It all began in 1914, when Haley and Thomas G. Jones found themselves fellow "rookies" in a recruit company of the regular army, at Fort Slocum, N. Y. Misery's love of company, or whatever fellow feeling it is that makes "rookies" cleave to each other, asserted itself in the case of Haley and Jones. They were buddies in a very short time.

But Haley got into trouble. He was courtmartialed and discharged from the army in disgrace. By that time war had been declared between Germany and the allies, and Canada was calling for volunteers. Haley wanted action, so he went across the border and enlisted. He liked the Canadian service, but there was one thing he lacked—he wanted his pal. So he wrote to Jones, and the latter promptly deserted from the American army, made his way to Canada and joined Haley in the Canadian service.

The buddies were destined to get action, and plenty of it. They reached France in 1915. They were attached to the machine-gun section, in a time when Britain had few machine gunners and fewer machine guns. It was a terrible story, a story of constant, agonizing, bitter endeavor to hold off a determined, resourceful and better equipped enemy. In 1917 the climax came for Jones and Haley.

Haley was assigned to an advanced position, raked by constant enemy fire. The barrage swept across his redoubt. He was desperately wounded and cut off from aid by the barrage. Jones learned of his friend's pathetic situation. Alone, at night, over ground lighted continuously by star shells, and whipped with bullets and shrapnel, he made his way to the place where Haley lay, now unconscious. He administered first aid, then painfully, laboriously, he crawled back to his own lines, bearing his inert buddy on his back. Haley got well.

Both men survived the war. Before being evacuated home, they visited England, and there Jones met a girl. He was married shortly afterward and the three—Jones, Mrs. Jones and Haley—sailed for Winnipeg.

When buddies separate, the cause usually is a woman, and it was so in this case. There was no place for a third person in the Jones family circle. Probably Haley felt that suggestion of betrayal which every man feels when his boon companion forsakes his society to take a wife. He parted from the Joneses in Canada, and became a rover.

Last spring, however, he ran across his old friend and savior. The latter was in a pathetic plight. His health had failed, and he was in constant fear that he would be identified as a deserter if he returned to the United States, where he had relatives and friends.

Haley turned this situation over in his own mind for a while. Then he confided his resolution to his "buddy" and the latter's wife. Jones protested. He said he couldn't think of Haley making such a sacrifice. Haley scouted the other's objections. He made Jones believe there was a good chance of getting cleared on the basis of his war service, and finally, with many tears on Mrs. Jones' part, and a something in Jones' eyes that could not be put into words, they said good-by to Haley.

The latter proceeded directly to Fort Snelling, Minn., and surrendered to the army commandant there as Thomas G. Jones, a deserter. He gave, accurately, the dates of Jones' enlistment and desertion, and other facts which so quickly identified him as Jones that no suspicion attached to the case. The court martial was held, "Jones" was found guilty and received a sentence of "dishonorable discharge, total forfeitures and confinement for six months in the disciplinary barracks at Leavenworth." It was put into execution.

HARRY W. HALEY

Haley went about his duties at the prison quietly. He was a good prisoner, although he had little to say to officers or fellow prisoners. Five months of his sentence had been served, when an announcement was made that, harmless enough as it was to others, came like a thunderclap to Haley, namely, that there was to be a general reclassification of prisoners' fingerprints. He knew that he would be immediately betrayed. He conjectured that, when his imposture was discovered, the blame probably would be laid on Jones.

So, determined to shoulder the guilt himself, he sent for a barracks official and confessed the imposition. The officer was at first skeptical, but, to make certain, he sent to Fort Slocum for the fingerprints of Haley and Jones, made at the time of their enlistment. The record quickly verified Haley's statement. Here is the official report on this investigation.

"It has been established by comparison of fingerprint records on file in this office that the man whose fingerprint record is herewith is identical with Harry W. Haley, who enlisted Oct. 22, 1914, at Fort Slocum, N. Y. It appears from the records of this office that Harry W. Haley, Twenty-fifth Recruit Co., was released from the Atlantic Branch, United States Disciplinary Barracks, Governors' Island, New York, on April 27, 1915, per expiration of sentence of general courtmartial published in general courtmartial orders, No. 1186, Eastern Department, dated Nov. 18, 1914."

The War Department was informed of the case in a letter from the commandant, Fort Leavenworth Sept. 19, who reported as follows:

"General prisoner Thomas G. Jones, registered No. 22,102, formerly recruited Twenty-first Recruit Co., D E M L (6,511,920), was received here from Fort Snelling, Minn, Aug. 5, 1921, to serve a sentence to suspended dishonorable discharge, total forfeitures and confinement for six months. His sentence is published in general courtmartial orders No. 100, HQ, Seventh Corps area, July 21, 1921. His term of confinement will expire without loss of good-conduct time, on Dec. 1, 1921."

Accompanying this explanation of the prison officials was the following sworn statement by Haley:

"I am not the Thomas G. Jones who is committed to these barracks under above general courtmartial orders. I am Harry W. Haley, who enlisted in 1913 or 1914 at Fort Slocum, N. Y., and was assigned to the Seventeenth Infantry. I was dishonorably discharged the latter part of 1915. * * *

"My reasons for serving the sentence of Thomas G. Jones are that in the World War, in France, Thomas G. Jones saved my life on the battlefield. I subsequently encountered Jones in Canada. He was ill and married. To pay my indebtedness for saving my life I told him I would return to the United States, give myself up at the nearest post and pretend to be Thomas G. Jones, pleading guilty to the charge of A. W. O. L. and accept and serve the punishment. All of which I did.

"I make this statement now, being afraid that my identity will be recognized in Washington, when my fingerprints (as general prisoner here) are scrutinized and classified there."

Of course, in view of the facts, nothing remained but to release Haley. He was released Nov. 6, without even train fare. He was obliged to stay in the vicinity of the prison.

But the Washington correspondents got the story from the office of Adjutant-General Harris, who was much impressed by it, declaring that he had never known of a similar case. Following its widespread

Pasteur Institute Discovers Mite - That Attacks and Kills Germs -

Too small to be seen with microscope, it is capable of slaying thousands of disease bacteria in a few hours—Regarded as one of most far-reaching developments in medical science in this century—Possible that whole populations may be immunized against disease by introducing "bacteriophages" into drinking water :: :: :: ::

So, naturalists observe, a flea
Has smaller fleas that on him prey;
And these have smaller ones to bite 'em,
And so proceed ad infinitum.
—Jonathan Swift.

THE foregoing lines probably were penned by the great satirist half in earnest, half in jest. However, if he could have lived about two centuries longer he might have seen his sardonic couplets recognized as the plain statement of a fact.

If preliminary reports from the Pasteur Institute, at Paris, are verified, a parasite has been discovered which preys upon disease germs themselves, and ultimately destroys them. The enormous importance of the discovery is realized when it is further stated that, by introducing these parasites into drinking water, whole communities may be immunized against the diseases whose germs are attacked by the parasites.

Already, it is reported, cures of typhoid, dysentery, bubonic plague and certain forms of septicemia have been effected by introducing the scavenging parasites into the bodies of patients. Bacteriologists say that if the claims for the discovery are borne out in practice, the discovery is one of the most important of the century.

It is indicated that, perhaps, every disease germ has its own peculiar variety of parasite which, if isolated, may be turned against the germ to destroy it.

Formal announcement of the discovery to the scientific world has not yet been made. Such announcements are always accompanied by a detailed account of the research, and a full presentation of the evidence. This is soon to be given in a monograph to be issued from the institute. Meantime, news reports, which usually precede the formal statement, credit the discovery to Prof. F. d'Herelle, a bacteriologist of the institution, who has been carrying on his work on the subject for several years.

This infinitesimal organism is called the "bacteriophage"—literally: "bacteria eater." It is too small to be seen with the most powerful microscope, and its presence has been deduced from the results which followed its introduction into certain substances. These results were pronounced and striking. For its size, the bacteriophage is a powerful and aggressive individual. When it meets up with a disease bacillus, regardless of the superior size of the latter, it attacks it fiercely, and the outcome of the battle is never in doubt. The bacteriophage always kills the enemy.

It is decidedly comforting to think of having our systems full of these gallant and alert little sentries—patrolling the highways and byways of our mortal frames, ready and eager to sail into the first skulking disease germ they meet, and chew the very life out of it. It would be a very satisfactory form of life insurance.

An additional point in the parasite's favor is that, to men and animals, it is quite harmless. More, it is tasteless, and can be taken into the system without the slightest discomfort.

There is a strong suggestion, in the reports of Prof. d'Herelle's research, that the natural presence of the bacteriophage in the body had been responsible for the cure of certain diseases in the past. For example, the following experiment was made in dysentery cases:

Beginning with the day on which the patient was stricken, a sample of waste matter from the patient's body was taken each day, mixed with bouillon and passed through a filter. This filter was fine enough to retain the microbes themselves, but, it is inferred, the smaller bacteriophages could pass through with the clear filtrate. Such a filtrate was made on each of the succeeding 29 days.

Then 30 test tubes containing ordinary cultures of dysentery bacilli were prepared. A sample of each filtrate was poured into a corresponding tube of culture. This was the result: The filtrates obtained during the first six days of the patient's illness had no effect on the germs in the test tubes. The filtrates obtained on the seventh to eighteenth days of the illness had a startling effect on the cultures into which they were poured. Within 12 hours the bacilli in the tubes had disappeared, and the deduction is that they had been dissolved by some agent in the filtrate, that is, the bacteriophages.

The filtrates taken from the eighteenth to thirtieth days had no effect on the cultures into which they were poured. These tubes, like the first six, remained cloudy with bacilli.

And now to a significant feature of the experiment, which was this: During the first six days of illness the patient had shown no improvement. On the seventh day the cure began, and on the eighteenth day it was completed, these facts corresponding precisely with the action observed in the test tubes.

Therefore, the following deductions are made: that, during the first six days of illness the bacteriophages were not active in the patient's body; that, beginning with the seventh day, they became active, and, simultaneously, the patient began to improve; that, on the eighteenth day the cure was complete, and the bacteriophages, their task completed, again became inactive. The experiment in the test tubes indicated that the filtrate obtained from the patient's body during the first six days contained no bacteriophages; that the filtrate obtained during the seventh to eighteenth days did contain them, and that, after that, they disappeared.

This is reasoned from the fact that the earlier filtrates had no effect on the bacilli in the test tubes; the succeeding filtrates, up to the nineteenth day, utterly dissolved the bacteria among which they were placed, while the remaining 12 filtrates, like the first six, had no effect on the bacteria in which they were placed.

All this, of course, leaves many questions unanswered. Are some persons naturally blessed with adequate bateriophages and others not? And is this the reason some patients recover while others die? Will bacteriophages do their saving work in some of us, and refuse to operate in others?

The present meager information does not touch on these and numerous other points, but, unquestionably, all these things will be treated in detail in the forthcoming monograph.

The agent—bacteriophage or whatever it is—that occurs in the clear filtrate obtained from a dysentery patient during the period of cure, is vastly more powerful than the most active antiseptic known. Its assault upon the dysentery bacilli is furious and rapid. In 12 hours after its introduction into a bacteria culture, every vestige of bacilli has disappeared. The most powerful microscope fails to reveal the slightest trace of the germs that were there 12 hours before.

Although it has never been seen, the volume of a bacteriophage has been approximately calculated as equal to that of a molecule of albumen: that is to say, there are about 2,500,000,000 of them to a cubic centimeter. The calculation was made by taking a filtrate, diluting it to a tremendous extent, then placing the dilution in a culture of bacteria and counting the spots where the bacteria began to dissolve, assuming that there was at least one bacteriophage at the center of each point of dissolution.

The bacteriophage is believed to attack a bacterium, or germ, pierce to its center, and secrete, or devour, the substance of which the bacterium is composed. As it feeds upon this matter it sends off numerous offspring, which, in turn, attack other bacteria.

The normal habitat of the bacteriophage is in the intestinal tract of humans and animals. However, when introduced into the blood, it does it work just as when taken into the stomach.

Several species of bacteriophage have been developed in the Pasteur laboratories. Only one of these species was able to act against several species of bacteria, although each of the others was powerful against one particular kind of bacteria. This suggests, of course, that there may in time be developed a universal bacteriophage which will attack every known germ. All that would be necessary then, to immunize all of us against all bacterial diseases, would be to take an adequate number of these bacteriophages into our systems—provided, always, that they will operate equally well in all bodies.

So far, according to report, the bacteriophage has proved very amenable to education. For instance, a bacteriophage that is active against one kind of germ can be trained, in a test tube, to become active against an entirely different variety.

An idea of the savage energy with which a bacteriophage attacks its enemy, the bacterium, and of the rapidity with which its offspring multiply, may be gained from the statement that a billionth part of a cubic centimeter of bacteriophage-infested filtrate will clear up a whole test tube of bacteria; and that a trace of the matter from a tube that has been cleared up will clear up another tube—and so on. In fact, a small amount from the 999th cleared tube will clear up the 1000th infected tube.

There are some drawbacks already discovered, however. It has been found that, under certain conditions, bacteria can acquire immunity to the attacks of the bacteriophage. How to avoid, or overcome, such conditions, so as to give the bacteriophage scope to act, may be a problem easy or difficult to solve.

Dr. E. L. Opie of the Washington University Medical School is one of the foremost bacteriologists of the world. For this reason, a Post-Dispatch reporter showed him a copy of the news report from Paris and invited him to comment upon it. Dr. Opie said that, in the absence of more detailed and authentic information upon the nature and scope of the research, no observation could be proper or intelligent.

"If this report is correct, there is no question that such a discovery is of astounding importance," he said. "The value of any agent by which whole communities could be immunized against disease needs no emphasis from me; any layman can see it. There has been a vast amount of inquiry along this line, but no man heretofore has been able to do more than approach the subject. We have known that filtrate taken from the

When Mail Car Bandits, Unsuspecting,

Inside story, now told for the first time, of how the robbery of Texas-Pacific train was frustrated—Young messenger, knowing that as soon as he opened safe his throat was to be cut, enacted part with great fortitude :-: :-: :-: :-:

WITH the Government planning to safeguard every mail car with a detachment of marines, in the hope of abating the flood of train robberies, it is instructive to recall a recent attempt of the kind in Texas, the full details of which now for the first time come to light. This event is notable, in the first place, for the thoroughness and skill with which all but one of the members of a bandit gang were at one swoop either exterminated or captured; and in the second place, for the heroism of a mail clerk who, with the consent of his superiors, volunteered to pose as a member of the band, met with the desperadoes at half a dozen sessions, and acted as messenger on the mail train so that he might "assist" his supposed confederates.

What the latter did not know, but what the clerk was sure of, was that the robber who boarded the car had in his pocket a dagger, with which he proposed to cut the throat of the messenger as soon as he had opened the safe. The name of the hero is Alvin S. Page, and he lives in Fort Worth. He was summoned to Washington and officially congratulated for his courage by Postmaster-General Hays.

It was during last August that there came to the ears of Patrick V. Cahill, formerly of St. Louis and now chief special agent of the Texas & Pacific Railroad, a report that plans were on foot to hold up and rob one of the mail trains on this system. He communicated the information to Federal secret service operatives.

In the robber band, it was learned, were five men. One was an ex-convict from the penitentiary at Baton Rouge, La., known as "Indian Charlie," on account of his swarthy complexion and coal-black hair. Another was "Bill" Edwards, an engineer, for 20 years an employe of the Texas & Pacific. A third was known as "Skeet" Jenkins and a fourth was named Kier. The fifth escaped on the night of the fatal roundup and has not been identified.

The men had a camp at Lake Worth, in the outskirts of Fort Worth, consisting of a tent stretched above a sort of cave. It was in this dugout that they proposed concealing their loot, and all of their plans were made with a view to a quick and easy escape to the camp.

Their first scheme was to hold up train No. 6, which is eastbound, in the vicinity of Sweetwater, about 200 miles west of Dallas. But this, it soon appeared, was too distant from the cache at Lake Worth. Then the robbers considered making the attempt at Earl, which is 18 miles west of Fort Worth. But No. 6 arrives at Earl at 6:07 a. m.—in other words, at daylight, which is not healthy for bandits. So, at last, they switched to train No. 11, which is westbound. It originates in Dallas at 10 p. m. and leaves Fort Worth at 11:30 p. m. On No. 11 are often carried large sums of money destined for the oil fields at Breckinridge.

The date was set for Sept. 14, and this fact came to the knowledge of the agents and secret service men just 29 days before the night scheduled for the attempt. The strain and suspense of waiting during all this time, for virtually a month, can better be imagined than told. Suppose the robbers should again change the train selected and the date? Would it not be easier and surer to arrest them at once, since their identity was known? What would be the punishment of officials who had this much knowledge of the robber band, and yet permitted themselves to be surprised and some big holdup perpetrated under their noses? But the operatives decided to take a chance. They wished to use what they called "frontier methods;" that is, to baffle this robbery in the very act, with such dramatic suddenness and completeness, and with such destructiveness to the robbers themselves, as to warn all bandits for a long time away from the Texas & Pacific. Information that kept reaching the chiefs reassured them No. 11 would be the train and Sept. 14 the date. Gradually they learned of a well-elaborated plan on the part of the robbers which almost deserves the name of strategy.

In the first place it was resolved to corrupt the messenger who would be in charge of the mail car, by offering him a sixth share of the plunder. This would be no small sum, as No. 11 often carries $250,000, and, as it happened, on this particular night did carry approximately $200,000. It was also determined to murder the messenger as soon as he opened the safe. There were two motives for resolving on this crime. In the first place, those sharing in the loot would be reduced from six to five. In the second place, it was well known that the first thing the authorities would do would be to arrest the messenger and put him through the third degree. There was not only a chance, but a virtual certainty, that he would succumb and betray his accomplices.

It was planned, then, that one robber should board No. 11 as it drew out of the yards in Fort Worth, and be welcomed in the mail car by his supposed "pal," the messenger. The latter would quickly point out the mail bags destined for Breckinridge. The robber was to throw these bags off the car at a water tank three miles west of Fort Worth. At this tank two of the bandits were to be waiting with an automobile, with which to hasten to the camp at Lake Worth.

After passing this point, the robber on the mail car was to induce the messenger to open the safe, and to rifle it of its valuables. Immediately afterwards he was to fall upon the messenger and cut his throat. Twelve miles west of Fort Worth there is a steep grade, on which the train would be compelled to reduce speed. Here the murderer would leap from the mail car with the booty from the strong box, and be greeted by the other two robbers, in a high-power automobile. They, in turn, were to make their way to the cache.

Having this plan of campaign in their possession, the authorities were able to elaborate a scheme equally clever in order to foil the enemy. The pivotal point, it was quickly perceived, lay in the messenger whom the robbers hoped to corrupt. The operatives determined to name this man themselves, and here it was that Alvin S. Page volunteered for the desperate job—one in which an instant's loss of nerve, a moment's forgetfulness of the role he was playing, the lapse of a single phrase, would spell his immediate death.

Page is 35 years old and married. He became connected with the railway mail service 11 years ago, and is now a departmental chief clerk in the headquarters of the Eleventh Railway Mail Service Division, with offices at Fort Worth. During the war he was detailed for service with the mail division in France.

Page contrived to obtain an introduction to the robbers, and, under the tutelage of the operatives, played a game which won their absolute confidence. He met with them at this cheap hotel or that questionable rooming house; and never for a moment did his new "pals" find anything to distrust in his demeanor. He was "sore" on the railroad; he was anxious to find the way to some "easy money."

Gradually the plot of the robbery was broached to him. The bandits found him in a receptive mood. Yes, he thought he could get himself assigned to act as messenger on the night in question; very gladly would he point out the richest mail sacks and open the safe. The robbers laughed in their sleeves at finding an accomplice thus naive. Think of an idiot so besotted to not know they could not possibly afford to leave him alive!

At last the great night arrived. No. 11 drew into Fort Worth on time. The regular mail car messenger was pulled off—he had no idea why—and Page was put in charge in his stead. The mail was so heavy that the train was delayed; it did not leave the depot until 11:44, 14 minutes after it was due to depart. As the train rolled through the yards "Indian Charlie" swung on board the mail car. The sight which met his eyes was reassuring. Page was at his desk, and apparently he was alone in the car. At one end, in the gloom, was a heap of mail sacks. The robber, however, took no chances. Thrusting his revolver against the clerk's stomach, he commanded him to give up his revolver, which Page did. The robber cursed him very terribly. The clerk felt a thrill at knowing that the ferocious "Indian Charlie" was taking this means of working up his temper to the pitch of committing a murder.

With more oaths, the robber commanded that Page point out the Breckinridge mail sacks. He did so, and "Indian Charlie" dragged them to the open door of the car. It was only a minute or so until they reached the water tank, and here "Indian Charlie" kicked the sacks out in space with a side movement of his leg, so that he need not for a moment turn his back on Page.

We must leave the speeding mail car for a moment and dismount at the water tank. If we could have been there unobserved ourselves, we should have beheld several interesting things. In the first place, we should have seen "Bill" Edwards crouched down by the tank, waiting for the train to pass. A couple of hundred yards away we should have detected a second robber, seated at the wheel of an automobile. And likewise, peering into the darkness, we should have witnessed several secret service men, with sawed-off shotguns, who lay with their weapons trained on Edwards. He was unaware of their presence, for they had crawled on hands, knees and stomachs for two miles to ambush the robbers at the water tank.

The train roars past, with blinding lights, through the night, and from the mail car come hurtling three bags of mail. Edwards is about to pick them from the ground when he hears a command of "Hands up!" He whips out a six-shooter and empties it in the direction of the voice, but hits no one. Instead, he himself instantly falls, almost torn to pieces with charge after charge of heavy-gauge buckshot. His companion in the automobile does not wait to investigate, but is promptly off at full speed and escapes.

Now we may return to the mail car, which has traveled onwards so rapidly that the sounds of the shots do not reach the robber above the crash of the wheels. The first part of his task is done. In the next 10 miles; or perhaps 20 minutes, he has to rifle a safe and kill a man. He screws up his nerve with still more horrible imprecations. Page, who knows what the purpose of these outbreaks is, remains cool, bearing himself with iron nerve.

And here is where the bandit makes a disastrous miscalculation. He orders Page to open the safe. Now the safe is on the other side of the car, about six feet away from where the robber is standing. Page promptly steps across and kneels down. There is a clear path from the robber to the pile of mail sacks in the corner. No sooner is the messenger safely out of range than shotguns reverberate, and two operatives, who were hidden under the sacks, spring through the smoke to see what execution their weapons have done.

"Indian Charlie" has committed his last outrage. He has died instantly, so completely is he riddled with 31 wounds. As an instance of the deadliness of these sawed-off guns, it may be remarked that the necks of both "Indian Charlie" and "Bill" Edwards were broken by shot.

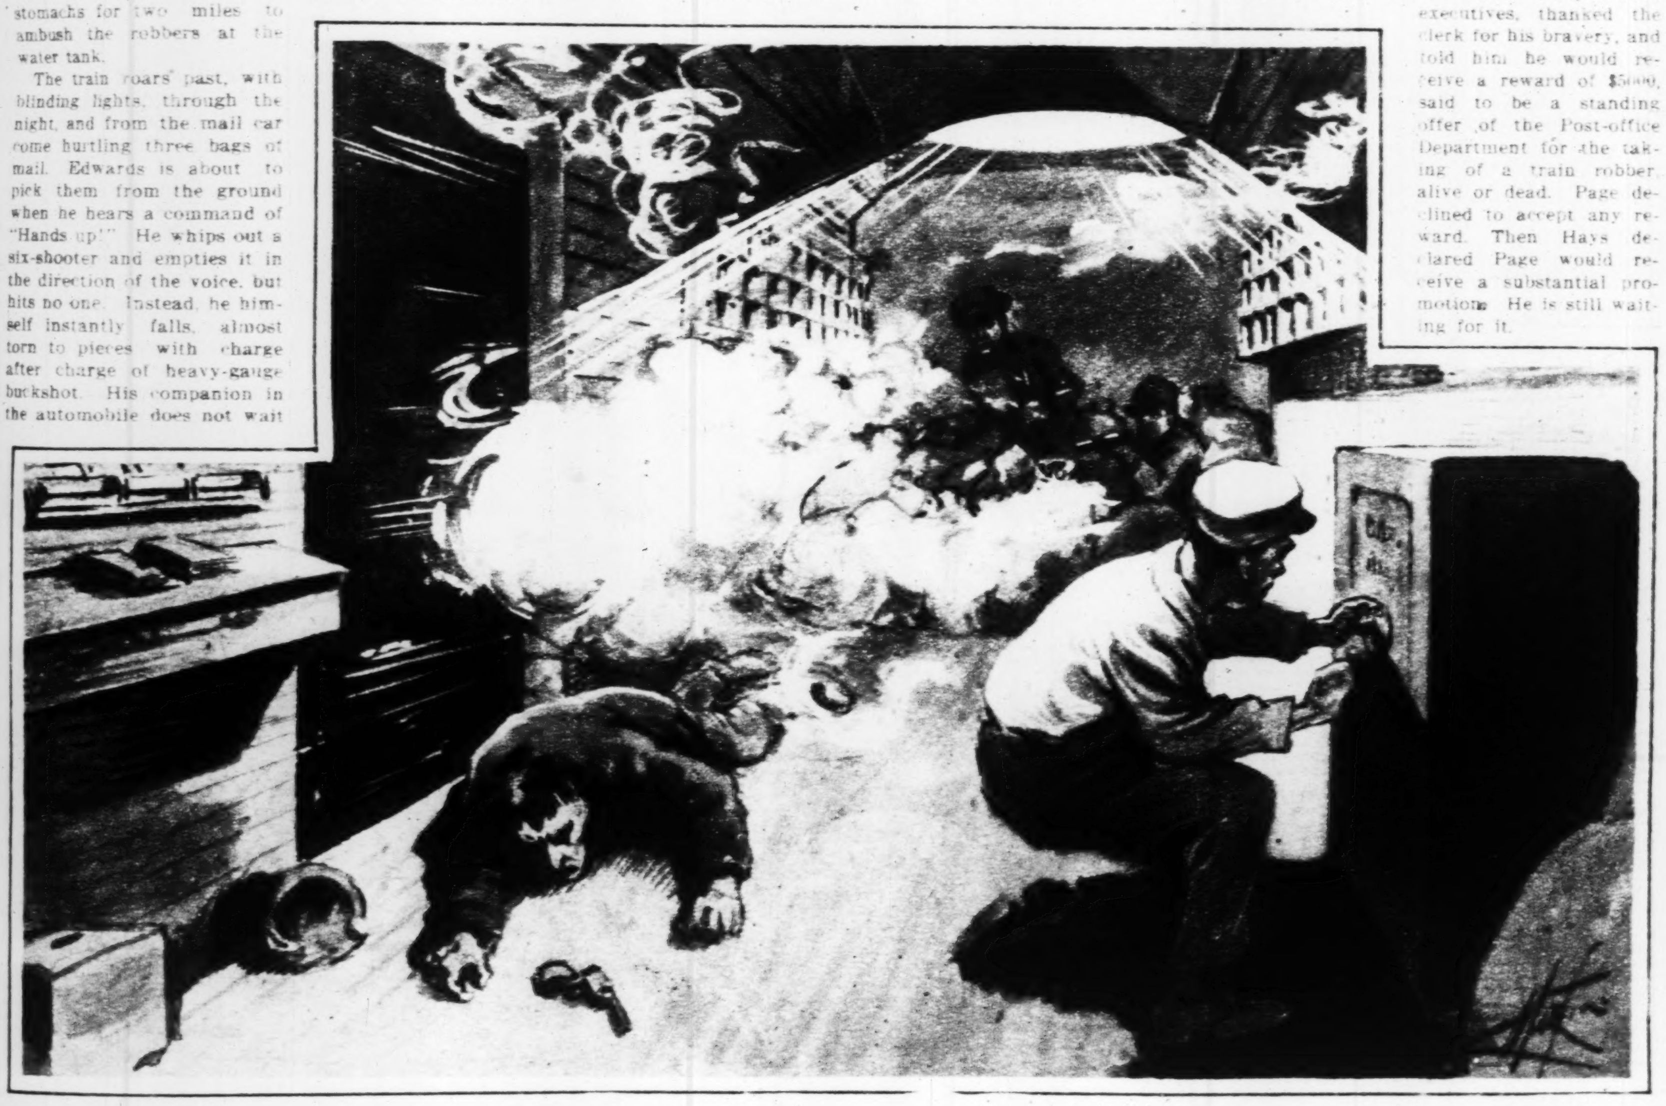
The operatives stop the train and order it backed to Fort Worth. The engineer and fireman, the conductor and brakeman, and the passengers, learn for the first time that there has been an attempted hold-up, and that there is a dead bandit on board. At the water tank the train stops, and the body of "Bill" Edwards is laid beside that of his "pal." The news spreads, and when the train gets to Fort Worth a thousand people have gathered to meet it. "Indian Charlie's" pockets are searched at the morgue, and one of them yields a dagger with an eight-inch blade.

It will be remembered that two other robbers were waiting 12 miles down the track to pick up "Indian Charlie" when he should have robbed the safe and killed his man. One can imagine how confidence changed to anxiety and anxiety to alarm as the minutes passed and the train did not arrive. The news spread like wildfire, and presently the robbers heard of the deaths of their companions.

In their panic they do not know which way to go. Instinct leads them finally back to their camp, at Lake Worth, which they reach shortly after daybreak.

Their movements have been accurately anticipated, and secret service men are waiting for them when they arrive. So utterly demoralized are they that they surrender without firing a shot. "Skeet" Jenkins, it is said, confessed, and both men are in jail at Dallas, awaiting trial.

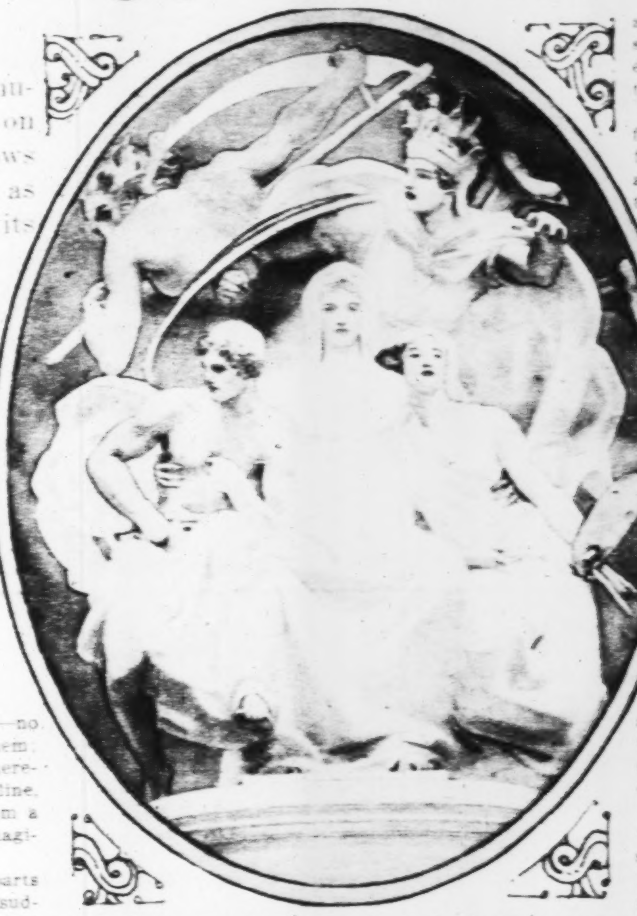
Page was summoned to Washington, where Postmaster-General Hays, in the presence of department executives, thanked the clerk for his bravery, and told him he would receive a reward of $5000, said to be a standing offer of the Post-office Department for the taking of a train robber, alive or dead. Page declined to accept any reward. Then Hays declared Page would receive a substantial promotion. He is still waiting for it.



"No sooner is the messenger safely out of range than shotguns reverberate, and two operatives, who were hidden under the sacks, spring through the smoke."

LATEST MASTERPIECES OF SARGENT, GREATEST OF LIVING ARTISTS

Are unveiled in the dome of Boston museum—Artist has been working on them for five years—Result shows that he is almost as much sculptor as painter—Work is remarkable for its calm beauty and dignity, but the meaning of some of the designs has the critics guessing—Nothing "modern" in it :: ::



Architecture, Painting and Sculpture protected by Minerva from the ravages of Time.

THERE have just been unveiled in the dome of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, in the rotunda at the head of the main stairway, the wonderful decorations in combined sculpture and painting by John Singer Sargent, on which the artist has been at work for five years. Aat the unveiling they were viewed by a throng of prominent citizens, in that sort of hushed silence which is the first tribute of intelligent appreciation. Those people privileged to first see the decorations were the generous subscribers to and supporters of this great museum.

There is nothing sensational about these works—no confusion of the mind of senses in looking at them; nothing hectic or bizarre about them; nothing meretricious or "modern"—nothing except beauty of line, color, form and composition, such as one gets from a beautiful flower, a face or vista that stirs the imagination.

And like all beautiful things in which the parts balance and harmonize, it does not lend itself to sudden or superficial analysis. It is so beautiful that it commands silence.

The world is more or less familiar with the Sargent decorations in the Boston Public Library, and naturally the world would look for something reminiscent of these. But not! There is little in common between them, except that both are the creation and work of the same superb, versatile genius. That library decoration takes one through the confusion and terror of the regions of the ancient world up to the calm faith of medieval Christianity on the one hand and up to the Hebraic vision of an ultimate, fuller life on the other. But the museum decorations all suggest or give expression to the beauty, the dignity and repose and the breadth of understanding with which the fine arts have suffused the imagination of all the ages since men began to think and create in terms of beauty.

Mr. Sargent has been working for five years on these decorations, althought not constantly. In point of fact, he has done an immense amount of other work in the meantime. But this particular work has been on his mind all the while, whether he was sketching at the front during the war or sketching out in the Canadian Rockies and resting. He was told to take his time on this work, and in spite of the feverish, hurrying world, he took his time. One feels the calm of thought in every line of the work.

Just beyond the rotunda, in the tapestry room, is a model of the inside of the dome, one-eighth size, on which Sargent planned out every bit of the work he did in the larger dome. On this model he experimented, and it will be noted that here the four larger paintings were first worked out in low relief. At first he thought he would make these four compositions in relief, with a colored background, but he changed his mind and decided to paint them and carry out a scheme of relief decorations in other parts of the whole design. There are 16 pieces in the whole decoration.

And it is unique in that it actually shows more relief sculpture than painting. In these relief decorations Sargent demonstrated that he is a great sculptor as well as painter. What is more, he changed the interior architecture of the dome to meet the requirements of his decorative scheme. Every bit of molding, tracery or framework is as much his as the paintings and the sculptures.

There is no attempt at overemphasis of color in his paintings. In fact, the color scheme is very chaste and simple, confined largely to blue, white and gold, with an occasional blend of warmer color. He pleased himself and fancy free in this work. He did not work out a theme. Rather, he expressed some thoughts and feelings regarding art. There are four large circular paintings. The one directly opposite the stairway represents Architecture, Painting and Sculpture, protected by Minerva from the ravages of time. The painting on the right shows a group that personifies Classical and Romantic Art—in the center Apollo, on the left Pan and Orpheus and on the right Erato and Minerva.

The painting on the left shows Apollo surrounded by the nine muses and the painting over the stairway entrance is called the Chimaera and the Sphinx, showing a winged nude female figure descending and as if about to kiss the lips of an inscrutable Egyptian Sphinx. In many ways this is the most enigmatic and remarkable of the four large paintings.

Then there are four smaller circular paintings depicting Music, Astronomy, Prometheus attacked by a vulture sent by Zeus and Ganymede carried off by Zeus in the form of an eagle. Above these are four relief sculptures. There are four framed relief sculptures—Cupid and Venus, the Three Graces, Venus and Psyche and the Three Dancers.

There are also four unframed relief sculptures showing the Education of Achilles my the Centaur Chiron; Amphion, one of the two sons of Zeus, who became a great musician; Satyr and Maenad and Faun. Besides these there are four open lunettes in the dome, each of which is treated in such a way as to fall into the general decorative scheme.

The sculptures are a cream color and those in the frames have a delicately tinted background. The unframed sculptures are also cream tinted and are flat against the general background. As has been said, the drawing is always superb, but it should be borne in mind that in the four large paintings it was necessary to meet—in the drawing and painting—the requirements of a curved surface seen at a considerable height above the floor level. So beautifully has this requirement been met that one is not conscious of either the curve or the height.

In the group of the Arts the three main figures make a stunning composition. The male figure, tpyifying Sculpture, showing a nude torso, is both graceful and powerful. There is fine dignity and repose in the central figure—Architecture—which fact also embraces both Painting and Sculpture. The helmeted figure of Minerva, in watchful and guarding pose, contrasts well with the moving figure of Time swinging a scythe. The color scheme in this group is simple, but very effective and harmonious.

There is a wonderfully fine circular sweep in the group which shows Apollo and the Nine Muses, all very Greek in line and character. The draperies on the Nine Muses are well managed and the heads, arms and hands are in just harmony with the rhythmic movements of the figures. The statuesque figure of Apollo with the lyre stands in the center of the moving group.

There is something of a strange fancy in the painting which shows Apollo acting as a sort of judge in a singing and musical contest between Orpheus and the Muse Erato, who is guarded by Minerva, while the god Pan guards Apollo. Apollo, with the shafts of light radiating behind him, is partially seated on the prophetic tripod with a swan in front of him instead of a snake—holding a wreath in his right hand which rests on his hip as he gazes at Orpheus, who is singing at the top of his voice. He has a lyre in one hand, while the other appears to move to the emotion of the song. Even Pan, the greatest Pan that was ever painted, seems to be spellbound by the singer, and the Muse Erato on the other side, holding a lyre in one arm and lightly embraced by Minerva, seems to be overcome by the Orphic voice. Sargent calls this Classical and Romantic Music.

But the strangest fancy of all is expressed in the painting which is entitled Chimaera and the Sphinx. This will arouse a great deal of curiosity. Whether it is a mere whim of Sargent's or whether it has some deep, symbolical meaning, is a question. He hasn't told what it means and he is in England at present. In fact, he has said very little to anyone about the exact significance of these various groups of paintings and sculptures.

In this particular group is the nude figure of a winged woman, her face hovering over the stone face of the Sphinx as if about to ask the question which only the Sphinx could answer.

The Chimaera to the ancients was at first an unsightly figure, with the head of a lion, the body of a goat and the tail of a serpent. Sometimes it was pictured with three heads—that of a lion, a goat and a bear. But in Roman times the Chimaera—a figment of the imagination anyway—took on the form of a voluptuous female.

Mr. Fox, who helped Mr. Sargent in this work, doesn't think that the artist had any particular thing in mind when he painted it—that it was just an interesting fancy; something that might have come to him as he looked at those wonderful ancient Egyptian sculptures in the Boston museum. However, Mr. Fox does not know that Mr. Sargent didn't have something deeper in his mind than a mere fancy. The fact remains that Sargent's works are pregnant with thought.

A Beauty in Real Life, But Not on the Screen

Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, known as one of the prettiest women in New York society, encounters the same difficulty when she attempts moving pictures that has frustrated plans of several other beautiful and talented stage stars—Some faces do not "screen" well, although actually charming—What Theda Bara, actress, and D. W. Griffith, producer, say about strange difficulty of the studios :-:

Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, New York society beauty, whose pictures in first film are so disappointing that she may abandon projected movie career.

ANOTHER beautiful woman has stepped confidently in front of the camera in a moving picture studio—only to find that in this new environment she was stripped of her loveliness like a cloak which the wind whisks away.

It has happened before, this astounding transformation of a beautiful face the moment that face is touched by the fierce light which beats upon screen actors at their work. Deep disappointment to the actress herself, the bewildered surprise of her admirers, financial loss to the producer and the sudden termination of a film career just starting—these are some of the things which follow in the train of such an event. It is real tragedy.

But there are reasons which prevent certain persons from "screening" well, no matter what their attractions under usual conditions.

Progress may bring a day when the race for movie honors will be open to all aspirants on equal terms. At present, however, sure disaster awaits certain types of physiognomy—and to a lesser extent, of personality. Some of the interesting facts about the matter will be given here, as explained by people of filmland whose names are household words.

Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, famous New York beauty, is the latest eminent example of what this cruel law of the movie camera does. The perfection of her features and her coloring are widely known, not only among the society folk of New York and Newport, but abroad as well. Not long ago she won a beauty contest conducted by the New York World, being voted the handsomest woman in America.

And when the announcement came that she would enter the movies, nothing seemed more certain than that another American screen star would soon be added to the list. For in addition to her acknowledged beauty, Mrs. Hoyt had been successful in amateur theatricals. Under the stage name of Julia Hoyt she was to be a co-star with Norma Talmadge in a film called "The Wonderful Thing."

So much for anticipation, seemingly logical enough. But when "The Wonderful Thing" had its first showing in New York recently, alack and alas! The chief concern of the critics was their disappointment in Julia Hoyt. As a beauty, and as a young society woman who had taken up professional acting before the camera, she was naturally an interesting feature of the play.

But her beauty, or a whole lot of it, had been yanked from her by the glaring lights, the unfeeling camera lens, the limited color range of the reproduction on the screen. She was no longer a beauty, and some of them even said she couldn't act! This about a woman whose beauty and cleverness on the amateur stage had been demonstrated many times.

"Mrs. Hoyt is the type of woman about whom motion picture directors shake their heads in dismay," says one of the critics. "She does not possess a true camera beauty that would make her a star or leading woman. She is too sedate to be cast as an ingenue. There is a certain personal dignity and uppishness in her very face that would preclude her from menial parts. * * *

"We suspect that if Mrs. Hoyt is determined to drop picture work, as the latest report has it, it will be more largely due to her own honest conviction that she does not and cannot 'stand out.'"

In the play Mrs. Hoyt had a part as the snobbish sister of a poor but aristocratic Englishman who falls in love with a rich American girl. At one point in the film she is seen as an artist painting in the grounds of an estate in England, and here the critics agreed she was really attractive.

A white hat with rather wide brim droops over her face and ears, the white background enhancing the sparkle of her dark eyes and the softness of her dark brown hair. As she glances up into the face of her brother, Mrs. Hoyt's beauty flares up strikingly for a few brief moments. (Remember the wide-brimmed, drooping hat. It was undoubtedly what saved this one scene for Julia Hoyt.)

The course of the entire film displays a curious irregularity in the degree to which her actual charms are recorded on the screen. Mention has just been made of the moment when she is at her best. At other times, when wrapped in fleecy silks or wearing a hat, she is comely enough, but by no means a beauty. When hatless, the light striking brightly and her face braving the lens to do its worst, Mrs. Hoyt possesses little of the charm or magnetism which are so necessary for a movie star.

In profile she is at her worst. With features not more irregular than those of Norma Talmadge, one critic said they were "as stone under the merciless gaze of the camera's eye." In addition, although her eyes are animated and attractive in the shadow of her hat, they seem cold, harsh and almost lifeless in the full dazzling lights of the studio.

The "close-ups," especially those giving side views, are the worst of all. Furthermore, in front of the camera she appears to possess no vivacity, so thoroughly do the conditions of moving picture production wipe out the countless tiny details which give expressiveness. She has not even any great amount of matronly dignity. She attempts no emotional acting, but with all this avalanche of criticism is adjudged to play the part of the sister fairly well.

"Did one not already know this was Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, he would certainly never give the character a second thought," is the way one critic sums up his impression of the real-life beauty who is not a movie studio beauty. And about a moving picture actresses, it is nearly as damaging a comment as could be made.

It happens often enough, in the big studios, that a beautiful girl who has dreamed of being a movie queen and has at last been given a chance before the camera, turns out a disappointment, even to experienced directors and camera men, and most bitterly to herself. Strangely enough, some of them take beautiful "still" pictures, yet look quite ordinary on the screen.

But Mrs. Hoyt's recent failure was not the first time that a woman of really remarkable beauty, and stage training besides, has found success in moving pictures beyond her reach. There was Maxine Elliott, for example, who ventured into the studio for the making of a film and was so mortified with the film that she bought it herself, to be destroyed.

Jane Cowl, another distinguished actress, found that the movies were not for her. Back to the regular stage went both of them. And there have been other instances of the same kind of failure, due certainly to no deficiency of talent or training in the artist.

Here is what Theda Bara, herself a famous star of the movies, has to say about a puzzling matter. Miss Bara—"herself," as the press agent puts it—was in St. Louis recently on a tour of the big cities preparatory to resuming her work in the studio soon. Incidentally, for the benefit of those who do not really already know it, she detests the "vamp" roles which brought her fame, and is determined to play something else in the future. But she has been chagrined by the fact that the audiences invariably have demanded more "vamping." She first created the "vamp" some six years ago, when she starred in a film play, "A Fool There Was," based on Kipling's poem.

"Many people whom we know intimately," said Miss

ON THE bank of the Mississippi at New Orleans a man and a boy stood and gazed with satisfaction and pride upon a little fleet of boats tied up at the waterside. This fleet carried their fortunes and it was busy with men about to cast off the lines and push northward to the unknown lands a thousand miles away. That was high adventure, for it was in 1763, on an August day of bright sunshine. The leader was a Frenchman of high birth, a gentleman adventurer; the boy, with unfaltering loyalty, felt that the man he followed was the peer of any man in the world, barring only the King and the Pope and possibly the Vicar-General.

The man was Pierre Laclede Liguest, and the boy was Auguste Chouteau, his clerk. Neither suspected that they were about to lay the corner stone of a great city, but they were.

He was a tall dark man who signed his name Laclede Liguest. His career, even now, is shrouded in mystery, his ambitions and dreams are unknown, and his purposes are disputed. He was a romantic figure who still fills the eye, although it is nearly a century and a half since all trace of his very grave was lost.

Pierre Laclede came of a noble family of Bearn, in the South of France. His home was on the slopes of the Pyrenees, near the Spanish border, and many another gentleman of resource has come out of the same hills to make a stir in the world. Among them are the redoubtable D'Artagnan of fiction, and Foch and Joffre of fact and fame, to name but a few. The name Laclede had the grave accent over the first "e" and was pronounced to rhyme with "led" and "bled."

He was a man of force and ability and of superior education for his time. Histories say that he had taken part in the war of 1756, in which France lost Canada to England, but in the records I have found nothing to prove this. He seems to have been one of those gentlemen who had come into the new world, which was very new then, to make his fortune. Whatever honorable method was most convenient was to be the method he would adopt.

He became a planter and lost some of his money. He did not have much money at any time. He usually was in New Orleans in the early days, making trading trips up the river occasionally. It is possible that he had first entered New Orleans from the north, having come by way of Canada. He became a figure in the daily life of New Orleans. He attended weddings and signed the register in a full, bold hand, "Laclede Liguest." He was godfather to the children of his friends, and on one occasion he made a translation of the sailing papers of a disreputable Spanish brig, the Little St. Anthony, which was forced by bad weather and shortage of supplies into the port of New Orleans. He signs this document seven times, testifying to the accuracy of the translation and other things. This should set at rest the question which troubles several historians as to whether Laclede was acquainted with the Spanish language. Laclede formed a partnership with Maxent, the leading merchant of New Orleans, for trading with the Indians "of the Missouri." Maxent furnished the money and Laclede was to do the work. He obtained from the Government the grant of a monopoly, and goods to be bartered for pelts and lead were brought from France. If he were alive today, with the sentiments he held in his lifetime, he would be called "anti-English." All good Frenchmen were in those days. It was almost a religion to be opposed to the growing power of Britain. Wars between England and France and England and Spain were only ended to begin again. The British Isles were fast assuming their place as a world power, and the menace to France and Spain, with their great American colonies, was strong.

For a century and a half it has been believed that Laclede had made an ecclesiastical marriage with Madame Chouteau and that he was the father of her four younger children. This belief, within the last few months, has been much disputed. It is not the province of this article to decide.

This woman, who attained to power and renown, and was the unquestioned social leader of early St. Louis, was born Jan. 14, 1733, in New Orleans. Her parents were married Oct. 20, 1730. The girl's name was Marie Therese Bourgeois, and she was an orphan at 4. She was sent to the Convent of the Ursalines and when she was 15 was married to Rene Auguste Chouteau, a merchant. A son was born to them, probably on Sept. 7, 1748, as that was the day he was baptized, and it was customary to omit the date of birth when the baptism occurred the same day.

This was the boy upon whose tomb in Calvary Cemetery the inscription recently has been changed to show that he was born in 1740. The dates given are from the unquestioned records of the Cathedral in New Orleans. If Auguste was born in 1740 it was some 10 years before his parents were married, it was when his mother was but 7 years old, and it was when his grandparents had been married but 10 years.

These facts are given for the purpose of showing that the age of Auguste Chouteau is established beyond question. He was not 14 years old when Laclede's Armada sailed northward.

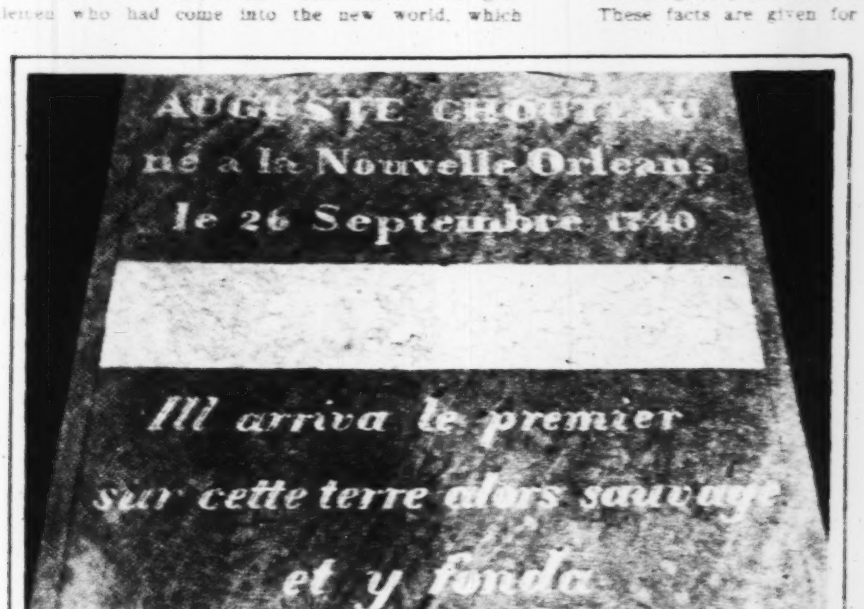
The statement that the elder Chouteau financed the expedition which founded St. Louis has no basis in truth, so far as the records or tradition show. Maxent, the rich and powerful merchant with great resources behind, was Laclede's backer. The expedition to the north to take up the monopoly of trading with the Missouri Indians was a big enterprise, calling for a lot of money to set it afloat, and a strong man to lead it. Laclede was a strong man. Maxent furnished the money. They were to share the profits on a basis not known. Chouteau seems to have had nothing to do with it.



On the tomb of Auguste Chouteau the date has been changed from 1750 to 1740, and the words "envoye par M. L. de Laclede" have been erased. They are interpreted "sent by M. L. Laclede" and the effect is to imply that young Chouteau was himself the founder of the city instead of the agent of Laclede.

On Aug. 3, 1763, he started northward from New Orleans with his armada. The boats were cordelles, pulled along by a rope running from the mast to men walking along the shore, who towed it. Adventure and the wide world lay before him. He leaned against the mast and gave his orders to the cordallers, he laid his own flint-lock rifle on the gunwale and shot deer on the bank and wild geese in the eddys. He held up his hand in greeting to the Indians. He reported at night to the grave and kindly Laclede when their boats tied up together, and if trouble was toward, he probably stood his watch like a man. the world!" A world rich in romance opened im that autumn of 1763, and each new turn into view another majestic sweep of the river. The leaves turned red and brown and the river bank as the little fleet worked northward. His face tanned in the sun and his muscles filled and hardened with his rk, when they reached Fort de Chartres, on Nov. 3, Laclede knew there was good stuff in the lad, and he probably told him so, for to the end of his days, Chouteau held and proclaimed for Laclede only admiration, reverence and love.

Madame Chouteau did not accompany the expedition. I believe that every historian of Missouri, without exception, has said that she did, but there is no documentary evidence of it. Laclede and young Chouteau left New Orleans on Aug. 3, 1763, and in New Orleans on March 23, 1764, Madame Chouteau became the mother of a third daughter. On the May 1 following, this child was baptized Victoire. Pierre, the younger brother, and a sister, probably Pelagie, were godparents. Laclede soon returned to New Orleans, gathered up the family and took them northward, and they had finished with New Orleans forever. It is possible that she did accompany the expedition north the previous fall, and returned to New Orleans in the winter or early in the spring, but this is unlikely in the extreme.

Laclede's armada stopped at Ste. Genevieve, a good-sized town even then, but no building was found capable of storing his goods, so on they went to Fort de Char-. This was a few miles above Ste. Gene- on the east bank of the river, in what is roe County, Ill. It was a fort upon which had spent more than a million livres. It ngly garrisoned and its mission was to hold der line for France, and protect communica- tween Canada and Louisiana. Now, France t Canada, which included in the treaty, Illi- There were other French settlements in Illinois, the protecting shadow of Fort de Chartres.

Laclede's actions at the time look reasonable ible now, and they seem to have been inspired patriotism than by a desire to further his own . He knew that France had ceded the east the river to England, and he probably knew nce was going to announce the cession of the nk to Spain. His patriotism was of the kind gned him against England, and I suspect that equally willing to align himself so as a Spaniard Frenchman. He came from the Spanish border, he both languages, he knew the laws of both and his political faith was to range himself with the foes of England.

He stored his goods at Fort de Chartres, talked matters over with the officers of the fort, and went forth prospecting in December, 1763, for a place to set up his trading post. It must be on the western bank of the Mississippi. With some of his men and young Chouteau, the boy adventurer, he went by canoe and afoot up to the mouth of the Missouri, and even up that stream. He came back and after a while camped at a place which seemed suitable to him. There was good water from springs, and back from the river was a prairie which would furnish pasturage in case his settlers brought in cattle. There was a stream which would turn a mill, there was plenty of firewood, so he took an ax and marked some trees. He told his little lieutenant that "here" was to be the trading post. With his own hands, Laclede marked some trees. That spot was between the place where the Laclede avenue cars now clang when rounding the corner into Fourth street and the levee. The stream which would turn a mill became known as Mill Creek, famed now for its railroad tracks and its sewer.

That action, because it was followed by further action, probably was the technical founding of St. Louis. The next spring, either on Feb. 15 or March 15, 1764, young Chouteau came with 30 men and drew his boats up on the bank to the place where the trees had been marked, and set about putting up a house.

Laclede came soon after, looked things over, told Chouteau to carry on, and departed again. His life seems to have been made up of arrivals and departures, but the City of St. Louis was founded.

I doubt if any other city in the world has as clear and authentic a record of its actual founding as St. Louis.

It happened this way: Rene Auguste Chouteau, the glittering, romantic boy, grew to a manhood filled with distinction, prosperity and honor. When leisure came finally, he wrote a journal in which he told of the founding of the city. A fragment of this document, now the most treasured possession of the Mercantile Library, is authentic beyond dispute. It is only a fragment, but it is a vital fragment. It is written in French and is well preserved.

After telling of the formation of the company in New Orleans and the trip up the river he says Laclede, the writer and possibly others went prospecting and finally reached the place where St. Louis now stands. Chouteau continues, speaking of Laclede:

> He was enchanted with the situation where St. Louis now stands. He did not hesitate a moment to choose it for his intended settlement, for besides the beauty of the site, he saw there all the advantages one could desire to found an establishment which could in time become very considerable. After examining well about the place, he fixed upon the very spot where he wished to commence this settlement, marked with his own hand some trees and said:
> "Chouteau, you will commence here as soon as navigation opens, you will have this place cleared to form our post here after a plan I shall give you." We then set out immediately on our return to Fort Chartres.
> On arriving, he said enthusiastically to M. de Neyon and his officers: "I have found a site where I will form an establishment which may hereafter become one of the first cities of America, so many advantages does the situation comprise by its locality and central position for such a settlement."

* * *

Laclede's desire was to make his post strong. He wanted men, and he set about getting them by telling the French settlers on the east side of the river that England owned the land, and that the settlers had better come on over to his colony on the west bank. They came, and the limits of the town constantly bulged outward.

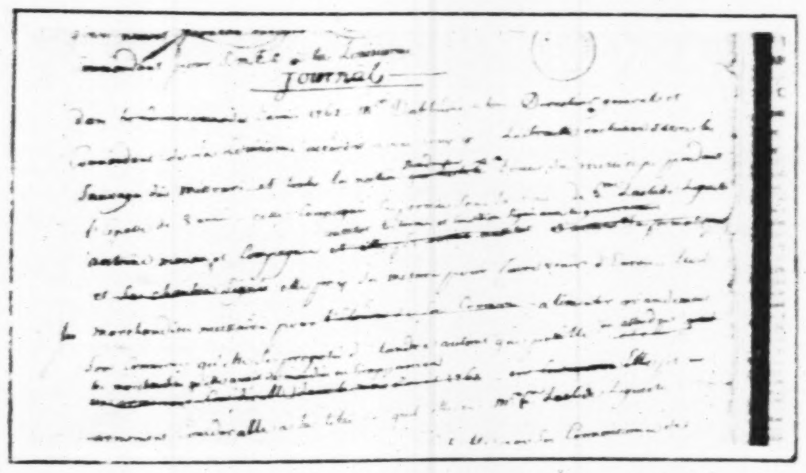
Business grew better. Laclede seemed to be making that rarely successful mixture, business and politics.

He named his post Saint Louis for the King of France. Not, alas, for that one whose good deeds have brought the beatification and sanctification of the Roman Catholic Church and whose heroic statue stands before the Art Museum in Forest Park, but for Louis XV, the then reigning King of France, famed chiefly now for his attentions to Madame de Pompadour, Madame du Barry, the Duchess of Chateauroux, and many other fair, frail ladies. The Chouteau Journal makes this plain.

Politics alone dictated the selection of the name. He desired to attract patriotic Frenchmen to his post, and the name of the King was a word to conjure with.

Prospects improved for the future of Laclede's post. The more settlers the more trade, and the stiffer front the post could present to the encroachments of the British.

When British troops finally took over Fort de Chartres, the commandant, De Valliers, went to New Orleans, and the next in command, Capt. St. Ange de Bellerive, moved with all his forces and civilian followers to St. Louis. He was a friend of Laclede, who had induced him to make this transfer. St. Ange was a crusty bachelor, about 60 years old, who became warmly attached to Lacede and Madame Chouteau. He died in Madame Chouteau's house.



Opening of "Chouteau's Fragment," photographed from the original in the Mercantile Library.

When Laclede saw St. Ange and his men come into the town, he probably looked across the river toward the Illinois bottoms, where the English would come some day, and then at the growing buildings of his flourishing post, and he probably said the French equivalent of:

"By Jingo, this place will be a town yet!"

Many years after, Auguste Chouteau may have remembered this when he wrote in stately French Laclede's prophecy that his post might some day be a city.

Madame Chouteau came to St. Louis some six months after the post was founded, bringing all her children, and she never again saw her husband, so far as the records show.

She arrived in St. Louis in the fall of 1764. In Hunt's minutes, Book 2, page 102, Baptiste Riviere made oath on July 2, 1825, that his father drove a cart in which Madame Chouteau and her children traveled from Kaskaskia to St. Louis. The cart was accompanied by Laclede Liguest on horseback.

Pierre Chouteau, the second son, testified, Nov. 22, 1825, that he came to the town about six months after the founding. These records were made in the actions incident to establishing titles to downtown plots of land.

It was possible for Laclede and Madame Chouteau to have made an alliance which could have had the approval of the church, but they could not have made a civil alliance without the open consent of the church to an annulment of Madame's first marriage. This information comes from a learned priest of the Roman Catholic Church who has made a special study of conditions existing in early Louisiana. The children always were called Chouteau, and no one was more punctilious than Laclede in seeing that they were always so referred to in the writings of the day. This kept the record clear for inheritances and such legal formalities as might eventuate.

Laclede always had the children born to his slaves baptized with due formality. He seems to have been most careful in fulfilling his duties to the church. It was customary for members of the owning family to act as godparents to their negro children. Once when Pelagie Chouteau was acting "marraine" to a baby, Father Meurin wrote her down as "Pelagie Laclede," and so it stands today in the register of the Old Cathedral on Walnut street.

On May 12, 1768, Laclede made provision to the best of his ability for Madame Chouteau and the children. This deed of gift, which is signed by witnesses Antoine Berard and Milonie Duralde, also bears the sig-

Forgotten Fortune Found in a Garret

FAVORITE EPISODE OF FICTION WRITERS HAPPENS IN REAL LIFE

Genealogist, searching for records of another family, comes across certificate of bank stock almost 100 years old, which belongs to owner's descendants who had never heard of it—Shares now worth $500,000

FORTUNES have descended unexpectedly upon many persons in these United States. Within the last year the press has carried accounts of an obscure employe finding himself the unexpected heir to the estate of an eccentric millionaire named Searles, and the entire congregation of a church in a little Texas town has been enriched by the discovery of oil on the church property.

Moreover, some highly democratic Americans, who have taken delight in flouting all things pertaining to royalty, have suddenly found themselves heirs not only to foreign estates but to titles as well, due to entire male branches of British families being swept off in the World War.

But it has remained for Thomas Seymour, keeper of a small restaurant at Seattle, Wash., to open a brief note and find himself informed that he and his sister, who lives at Troy, N. Y., were heirs to a fortune of a half-million of which neither had even heard.

And this discovery of a fortune came, not through any of the expected avenues of inheritance, but through the investigation of a genealogist into the pedigree of an entirely different family. In his quest he picked up a scrap of paper, dated 1822, which showed that 67 shares of a bank stock now standing high in the financial market, had been transferred in 1822, to Archibald Cornell, whose family and name died out years ago. Yet with the instinct of his profession, the searcher realized that if Cornell had any direct heirs, no matter how distant, he held a fortune in his hand.

The time-stained piece of paper that H. S. Enyart of New York, the genealogist, found while going through an old mansion in the Bronx, would have meant nothing more than the proverbial "scrap of paper" even to the majority of lawyers. To him, it meant something else and the lower courts of New York have already upheld his opinion and have ordered the Mechanics and Metals Bank of New York to pay over approximately $500,000 as present value of the 67 shares, with accumulated dividends. The case is now before the Supreme Court and if the lower bench is upheld the chance find of the investigator will have lifted two persons from comparative obscurity to affluence.

The little slip found by Enyart read as follows:

"This is to certify that 67 shares in the capital stock of the Mechanics Bank in the City of New York are this day standing in the name of Archibald Cornell, acting executor of the estate of Thomas Williams, dec. on the books of the company, New York, 19th August, 1822. John Fleming, cash."

When Enyart picked up this slip, he wondered who Archibald Cornell might be. There was no record of any man of that name in New York files that threw clear light on the matter. But thousands of Cornells had lived and died in the city. To the casual investigator the attempt to identify any one Archibald would have seemed hopeless.

But Enyart had access to files of his own profession, which kept not only direct family trees but cross files and branches in all directions. Old city directories, old documents bearing on all sorts of diversified subjects, were listed alphabetically in files to which he resorted. And through these he discovered that Archibald Cornell had once lived in the old house where he himself was investigating some papers for the heirs of a family of entirely different name.

By the same method he discovered that a man named Cornell had once been executor for a man named Thomas Williams. This, of course, brought up the question as to whether the shares belonged to him or to Williams originally—in which case the genealogist's first presumption that a fortune awaited the Cornell descendants must be revised. Another search was made and it was found that a Thomas Williams had once been a rather important personage in the shipping trade of early New York. There were several thousand men of the name of Thomas Williams that would have also had to be disposed of but for one thing—it was found that the address of the old house in the Bronx occurred in some of the papers pertaining to a certain Williams, and this easily identified the right one.

By references in old shipping papers, it was found that this Williams had relatives in Troy, N. Y. And investigation there showed that although the direct line had died out, descendants of a daughter still lived under the name of Seymour. Once the identity of the Miss Seymour who lived in Troy was proven, Enyart had "made his case." He had established a direct line of connection between Thomas Williams, original owner of the shares, through Archibald Cornell, his executor, down to the children of a daughter in the direct line. And this trail was followed without the use of any of the official documents through which lawyers would have to plow their way to locate the same information—a job that might have taken years and that, as his quest showed, might have proved utterly fruitless. It was his "cross-checking" of records that enabled him to follow the trail without difficulty.

The Mechanics Bank stock in 1822 was worth $100 per share. In 1865 the institution changed its name to the Mechanics National Bank of New York. In 1904 it merged with the Leather Manufacturers National Bank, assuming the latter name. In January, 1910, there was a merger with the Copper National Bank of New York and in 1914 it absorbed the Fourth National Bank. It took the name of the Mechanics and Metals Bank and the stock now sells at between $287 and $290 per share. A reckoning of unpaid dividends for the century that had elapsed brought the total value up to $500,000.

In relating how he followed this trail, which would not have been apparent to the casual observer, Enyart described some little-known features of his profession. One is to take note of the so-called legends about various families which, while exaggerated from generation to generation, usually maintain a general resemblance to the original tale.

A scientist once remarked that the two most lasting things in human vocabularies were the names of mountains and rivers—they survive when the names of countries perish. Mount Olympus is still Mount Olympus, although Hellas has become Greece. And doubt of the old legends of the ancients, which appeared in the universities even in the days of Walter Scott, has been wiped away, in many cases, by discoveries which show that legend was founded on solid fact.

It was generally believed, for instance, a century and one-quarter ago, that the Tale of Troy was simply a beautiful allegory and that the Odyssey was also a bit of ancient fiction. The site of Troy, however, has been found beneath the ruins of several other cities and the tombs of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra have been discovered. Only a little more than a year ago archeologists uncovered a tomb in England which is supposed to be that of Fair Rosamond, who was believed by many to have been a legendary character. And while the tales of the Knights of the Round Table are too fantastic to be accepted even in part, an immense hollow tree, fashioned into a rude coffin, was recently disinterred near Wales, within which were remains of a man and woman, still identified by metal crown and scepter as a royal couple who are generally supposed to have furnished the originals for the stories of Arthur and Guinevere in the dim past.

Those who hold that all topographical notes in the Bible are inaccurate because the testaments were handed down for so long by the mouths of inspired but illiterate peasants before they were finally inscribed in the Greek characters, will remember that the tomb of St. John has but recently been discovered on the very spot where tradition said it would be found—under the crypt of a church at Ephesus. So legend will have to be counted upon, in scientific research. Even tales of buried treasure, which originate freely about every old ruin, can often be found to have some basis for their existence.

It was recognition of this fact that prompted Enyart to follow up many a trail where many persons would have seen no opening at all. The old tales of how a family ancestor in some long-distant time received a grant of land from some foreign potentate, often have been found to have a substantial basis, even when elaborated by several generations of braggarts. The one exception archeologists find is in the case of Irish "nobility," for if all the stories of descent from Irish Kings are correct it is very evident that no persons except of royal blood lived in Erin in the old days. Just who did the useful work of the island under those circumstances is a mystery.

The genealogist has a system of his own, however, in tracing down all such records, and while some of his documents are unofficial, they can generally bring any case within reach, at least, of legal proof. One difficulty with which modern investigators in genealogy have to contend is the phonetic spelling of names, due to carelessness or illiteracy. The omission of a single letter in an unusual name can readily invalidate a claim otherwise well established. And this omission occurs every day in America, especially among the foreign born. In fact, tracing the names of many arrivals from the Continent would be an almost hopeless task, as their title bears no resemblance whatever to that of their forefathers.

What makes this tracing up of family names remarkable is the fact that a single family, if allowed to flourish undisturbed, can readily have an enormous number of descendants. In the Philadelphia Souvenir of June 28, 1828, Father Peters, a Jesuit, calculated that it was possible for four men, in 208 years to have 258,719,000,000 descendants—extreme figures, of course, based on the utmost fecundity prevailing in all branches of every family among the descendants, but still a physical possibility. Sir W. Blackstone has shown that in 20 generations each person has an army of 1,048,576 ancestors. So it might be assumed that the difficulties of working out any one branch might be extreme.

Some persons are openly incredulous that any authentic records can be traced of persons long dead, concerning whom all official records have been swept away by time, fire or wars. Moreover, the number of fake genealogical records that have been foisted upon Americans of plebeian descent, who have made money and who wish to lay claim to nobility, cause all such coined lineages to be viewed with general distrust. Yet the reputable genealogist is able to gather his material in most surprising fashion.

An example is one case that Enyart traced. A client lacked the date of birth and death of his forefathers, which were essential to proving a claim. Enyart undertook the apparently hopeless task. After patient search of old newspaper files and papers, he finally found an old letter containing a brief reference to the

IT WAS A SWELL PICTURE

MYRTLE AND MAZIE AT THE MOVIES

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

WHOJA thinks swellest, John Barrymore or this Wallace Reid?

'Bout tha same. Both nice lookin' fellahs.

I see where John Barrymore's wife's wrote a show.

That so—good pitcher?

Ain't no pitcher. Theayter play. Called Clara de Lune.

Clara de Lune? That's funny. Crazy was she?

Crazy? Who?

Tha girl. Clara?

Whatja mean crazy?

What'd they call her "the Loon" for?

D'know. Her name I s'pose.

'Ja see it?

Who me? I don't waste no money on them high class shows. Pitcher's good enough for me 'nless he takes me. An' he's gettin' to be a ter'ble tight wad.

Why don' ya shake him then? I would.

Mebbe I will. He'd kill himself though.

That's what they tell ya. They don't though.

Mebbe I will shake him. Lots of other guys.

Sure there is. Live ones, too.

What's this pitcher about?

'S one them Classy Comedies I guess.

I forgot to look—mebbe it is.

Name's "The Man That Laughed." Otta be funny.

Who's in it?

I ferget. One the big stars, prob'ly—John Barrymore or somebody like that.

I like these funny comedies. Laugh myself sick at them.

I don't. I like the heavy stuff. Vamps and all.

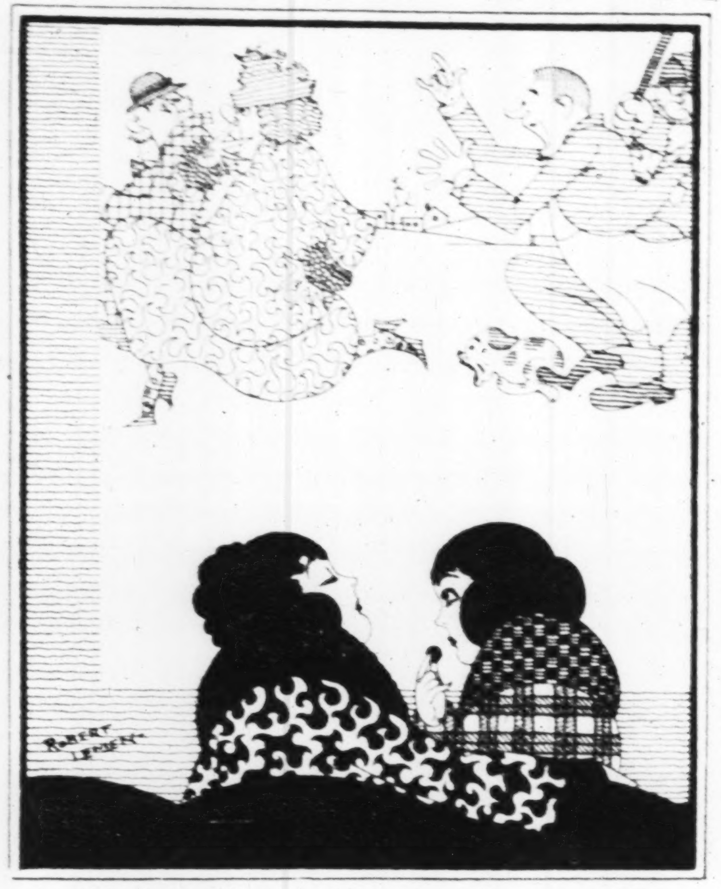
Ya s'pose them vamps is really bad—the way they behave off the fillum, I mean?

Don'no any of them personally. I s'pose so. 'Swat everybody says, and looka the money they spend.

That don't mean nothing. They get paid big.

I s'pose they do. But ya never can tell.

Ain't that the truth? You never can tell.



"Mebbe I will shake him. Lots of other guys."

I don't see nothin' so funny about this fillum.

Neither do I just yet. Mebbe they're leadin' up to it.

Ain't no stars that I know in it, neither. I think it's a bum show if you ask me.

Well I didn't get you in here did I? You choosed this theayter.

Oh well s'as good as any of the sad ones, I guess—only I'd like to know what it's all about.

I wisht I could go down to this here now Hollywood an' see all them actors makin' pitchers. You wouldn't have to pay nothin' to go to shows.

That's right, you wouldn't. Where's Hollywood, anyway?

Don'no exactly. Some says over in Jersey and some says out in Long Island.

Didja ever write to a pitcher magazine an' ask?

Naw. I never write to no magazines. That's jus' tha bunk. They answers their own questions.

D'ja like this cowboy stuff with the ridin' an' shootin' an' all?

Oh, kinda. But I'd rather see the Fifth avenyuh shows with the insides of the houses an' all the butlers and chiefs and shoffers an' the swell dinners they have.

An' lampshades. Say, in some of them Fifth avenyuh houses sometimes they's fifteen lampshades in a room, an' all of 'em perfeckly grand.

I s'pose that's how the rich spend their money.

Doin' fox trottin' lately?

Not much. Me and him was out to one of the resternts night before last. Ain't so crazy about it as I used to be.

That's cuz ye ain't stuck on him no more. Better chase him.

That's what I been thinkin'. Cert'nly's a lazy loosener.

Them kind ain't no good. He's probably spendin' it on somebody else.

I should cry about that. Guess I will chase him.

I would.

Ain't this show pretty near over? I ain't been gettin' it, are you?

Oh, a little. It's kinda rough. Let's beat it.

Is there time to get into another before the second show begins?

Jus' about. Let's beat it.

Laclede, Not Chouteau, Was Founder of St. Louis

natures, "Laclede Liguest," "Marie Therese Bourgeois Chouteau accepting for her children" and "Labuxiere." It is in the Missouri Historical Society archives. It reads, with a good deal of bad spelling:

GIFT OF Mr. Laclede in favor of Madam Choutand.

Personally appeared Mr. Pierre Laclede Liguest, merchant of the Illinois, ordinarily residing at the post of St. Louis, on the french portion of the province of Louisiana, who in consideration of the faithful service which he has received from Mr. Auguste Choutand, during the several years in which he has worked for him as his Clerk and given some (illegible) to the said Mr. Choutaud, as well as to Pierre Choutaud his brother, Pelagie Choutaud, Marie Louise Choutaud, and Victoire Choutaud brothers and sisters through the affection which he bears them, has voluntarily made gift to them unreservedly and irrevocably in the best possible manner with out hope of revoking same, and for greater security promises against all trouble, debt, mortgage, eviction, entailment and other impediment whatsoever to the Sr. Auguste Choutaud, pierre Choutaud, pelagie Choutaud, marie Louise Choutaud and victoire Choutaud, brothers and sisters, children of dame marie therese Bourgeois and of Sieur Rene Choutaud, the said Sieur Choutaud absent from the post, and the said dame marie therese Bourgeois his wife here present, living in this said post, accepting for the said Messrs. and Misses, her children.

The rest of the document, in strict legal phrase, provides that Dame Chouteau is to have the enjoyment of this property during her life, and then it is to go to the children. If any of the children die without heirs, the share is to go to the others. If all die without heirs, the property is to go to Laclede heirs "of his own line."

The elder Chouteau may as well be finished with right here. He does not seem ever to have bothered his wife again. He continued to live in New Orleans, his calling uncertain, but usually some kind of merchandising. On March 4, 1752, he sued one St. Hynand for certain moneys due him. In this document Chouteau calls himself a "trader."

There were eight cabarets, or wine shops, in New Orleans at that period, one for the French troops, one for the Swiss troops and six for the civilian population. A document shows Chouteau later to have been connected with one of these. Finally he died, and the following record is on page 42 of the second register for burial of white people:

> On the 21st day of April the year 1776 has been buried in the cemetery of this parish the body of Rene Auguste Chouteau, palissier, a native of (illegible) in the province of Saintonge who died on the same day having received the sacrament of the religion in faith of which I have signed F. Ferdinant vic.
> In the margin is written:
> Mr. Chouteau a native of Hermin Onault diocese of La Rochelle.

The word "palissier" is intended to give the occupation of the deceased. It may be spelled wrong in the book, the experts say. "Palissier" means a fence carpenter, a maker of pointed stakes or pales or palisades. "Pallissier" with two "l's" was a word used to indicate the maker of corn-husk mattresses, a necessity in every household of the time. "Patissier" would be a pastry cook. Whichever of these callings the elder Chouteau took, he would not seem to have advanced in fortune or standing over the merchant who married the pretty orphan girl 18 years before.

When the elder Chouteau died the two young men in St. Louis who bore his name, on Aug. 4, 1777, gave to Laclede a power of attorney to represent them in settling the Chouteau estate. The document, which is on file in the Missouri Historical Society vaults, is more than an ordinary power of attorney. It gives Laclede full and complete control in every way in the handling of any property which might fall to them from the death of Auguste Chouteau, pere, and cancels a previous power of attorney given to Duralde.

Laclede went to New Orleans and there made a settlement with Maxent, Laclede & Co. He was heavily in debt to his partner. After his death Gov. de Galvez wrote to de Layba, the Governor in St. Louis, that the debt amounted to 41,000 livres. There is no evidence anywhere that I can find that Laclede was a good business man, but he was a person to be reckoned with when he set his foot on the outbound trail and started making trouble for England.

He had handled the business in St. Louis, sent the pelts, grain and lead southward, received goods from the south and sold or traded them. He took in a lot of bad or questionable paper and it seems to have been no trouble at all to get credit at his store. He preferred to do his trading with the Indians pretty far out. He had grounded his canoe on the banks of the Osage, the Gasconade and even the Platte, Houck says. He even went so far, in his endeavor to build up a barrier against the English as to invite competitors to his post, which was bad business but good politics.

He went to New Orleans in 1777, or early in 1778, settled his affairs and started back to St. Louis in 1778, probably in a canoe with one or two men, white or red. On the way he fell sick and died at the mouth of the Arkansas River. Thus passed, at the age of 54, without the sacrament of his church or the comforting grasp of a friend, a gallant gentleman who had founded a great city. He was buried in a grave dug in the soft bank, and doubtless his body was soon borne away on the current of the mighty river which for half his lifetime had carried his fortunes.

He had never seen again his France, which he left as a youth. He left no children who bore his name. There is to me something tremendously moving in Laclede. His eyes were dim with the dust of many trails and the smoke of many camp fires, but the principles which guided him as a boy were unchanged throughout the years of his life. He seems to fit better in an Old World romance than in his high niche in history. He was ever gallant, bold and kind. Nobody ever needed to ask where he stood. He was for St. Louis and France, and he was against England. He was the ideal voyageur, and where he set his foot upon the shore, there stood a man.

No stone marked his resting place. The city of St. Louis was his monument, and even in that city half a century later he was only a name. In 1847 he was virtually forgotten except among those who believed themselves to be his descendants. In that year St. Louis, a booming town of 45,000, held a celebration of the anniversary of its founding. Why that year was chosen I do not know. Mr. Wilson Primm was the orator of the day, and he delivered a smashing oration, spiced with Latin quotations and mellowed by verses from the poets. He eulogized Laclede to the skies, rediscovered him in fact, and proclaimed him the founder of St. Louis. After this a lot of people wrote letters to the papers about it, some saying he did and some saying he did not, and again Laclede sunk into oblivion for half a century. Then came the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, and there was a Laclede revival, a statue of him was made and finally placed in the city hall grounds, where it now adorns the somber vista south on Thirteenth street from Olive. There was a good deal of talk about him back and forth at that time, but it finally quieted down.

Then came the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the admission of the State, and the question of who founded St. Louis was revived. The present writer ventures to express the hope that it is now finally and satisfactorily settled.

Miss Lulu Bett

BY ZONA GALE

Number Nine—In Which Lulu Says Good-by.

WHEN Di had gone upstairs, Ina said to Lulu, in a manner of cajoling confidence:

"Sister"—she rarely called her that—"why did you and Di have the black bag?"

So that after all it was a relief to Lulu to hear Dwight ask casually:

"By the way, Lulu, haven't I got some mail somewhere about?"

"There are two letters on the parlor table," Lulu answered. To Ina she added: "Let's go in the parlor."

As they passed through the hall, Mrs. Bett was going up the stairs to bed—when she mounted stairs she stooped her shoulders, bunched her extremities and bent her head. Lulu looked after her, as if she were half-minded to claim the protection so long lost.

Dwight lighted the gas. "Better turn down the gas jest a little," said he, tirelessly.

Lulu handed him the two letters. He saw Ninian's writing and looked up, said "A-ha!" and held it while he leisurely read the advertisement of dental furniture, his Ina reading over his shoulder. "A-ha!" he said again, and with designed deliberation turned to Ninian's letter. "An epistle from my dear brother, Ninian." The words failed, as he saw the unsealed flap.

"You opened the letter?" he inquired incredulously. Fortunately, he had no climaxes of furious calm for high occasions. All had been used on small occasions. "You opened the letter" came in a tone of no deeper horror than "You picked the flower"—once put to Lulu.

She said nothing. As it is impossible to continue looking indignantly at someone who is not looking at you, Dwight turned to Ina, who was horror and sympathy—a nice half and half.

"Your sister has been opening my mail," he said.

"But, Dwight, if it's from Ninian"——

"It is my mail," he reminded her. "She had asked me if she might open it. Of course, I told her no."

"Well," said Ina, practically, "what does he say?"

"I shall open the letter in my own time. My present concern is this disregard of my wishes." His self-control was perfect, ridiculous, devilish. He was self-controlled because thus he could be more effectively cruel than in temper. "What excuse have you to offer?"

Lulu was not looking at him. "None," she said—not defiantly, or ingratiatingly, or fearfully. Merely "None."

"Why did you do it?"

She smiled faintly and shook her head.

"Dwight," said Ina reasonably, "she knows what's in it and we don't. Hurry up."

He opened the letter, saw the clipping, the avowal, with its facts.

"A-ha!" said he. "So, after being absent with my brother for a month, you find that you were not married to him."

Lulu spoke her exceeding triumph.

"You see, Dwight," she said, "he told the truth. He had another wife. He didn't just leave me."

Dwight instantly cried: "But this seems to me to make you considerably worse off than if he had."

"Oh, no," Lulu said serenely. "No. Why," she said, "you know how it all came about. He—he was used to thinking of his wife as dead. If he hadn't—hadn't liked me he wouldn't have told me. You see that, don't you?"

Dwight laughed. "That your apology?" he asked.

She said nothing.

"Look here, Lulu," he went on, "this is a bad business. The less you say about it the better, for all our sakes—you see that, don't you?"

"See that? Why, no. I wanted you to write to him so I could tell the truth. You said I mustn't tell the truth till I had the proofs"——

"Tell who?"

"Tell everybody. I want them to know."

"Then you care nothing for our feelings in this matter?"

She looked at him now. "Your feelings?"

"It's nothing to you that we have a brother who's a bigamist?"

"But it's me—it's me."

"You? You're completely out of it. Just let it rest as it is and it'll drop."

"I want the people to know the truth," Lulu said.

"But it's nobody's business but our business! I take it you don't intend to sue Ninian?"

"Sue him? Oh, no."

"Then, for all our sakes, let's drop the matter."

Lulu had fallen in one of her old attitudes, tense, awkward, her hands awkwardly placed, her feet twisted. She kept putting a lock back of her ear, she kept swallowing.

"Tell you, Lulu," said Dwight. "Here are three of us. Our interests are the same in this thing—only Ninian is our relative and he's nothing to you now, is he?"

"Why, no," said Lulu, in surprise.

"Very well. Let's have a vote. Your snap judgment is to tell this disgraceful fact broadcast. Mine is, least said, soonest mended. What do you say, Ina—considering Di and all?"

"Oh, goodness," said Ina, "if we get mixed up with bigamy, we'll never get away from it. Why, I wouldn't have it told for worlds."

Still in that twisted position, Lulu looked up at her. Her straying hair, her parted lips, her lifted eyes were singularly pathetic.

"My poor, poor sister!" Ina said. She struck together her little plump hands. "Oh, Dwight—when I think of it: What have I done—what have we done that I should have a good, kind, loving husband—be so protected, so loved, when other women . . . Darling!" she sobbed, and drew near to Lulu. "You know how sorry I am—we all are"——

Lulu stood up. The white shawl slipped to the floor. Her hands were stiffly joined.

"Then," she said, "give me the only thing I've got that's my pride. My pride—that he didn't want to get rid of me."

They stared at her. "What about my pride?" Dwight called to her as across great distances. "Do you think I want everybody to know my brother did a thing like that?"

"You can't help that," said Lulu.

"But I want you to help it. I want you to promise me that you won't shame us like this before all our friends."

"You want me to promise what?"

"I want you—I ask you," Dwight said with an effort, "to promise me that you will keep this, with a family secret."

"No!" Lulu cried. "No. I won't do it! I won't it! I won't do it!"

It was like some crude chant, knowing only tones. She threw out her hands, her wrists long dark on her blue skirt.

"Can't you understand anything?" she asked. "I

"You'll be happy to thi you've done this for us, Lul said Dwight.

"I s'pose so," said Lulu.

Ina, pink from her little p of sobbing, went to her, ki

her, her trim tan tailor against Lulu's blue cotton.

"My sweet, self-sacrifi sister," she murmured.

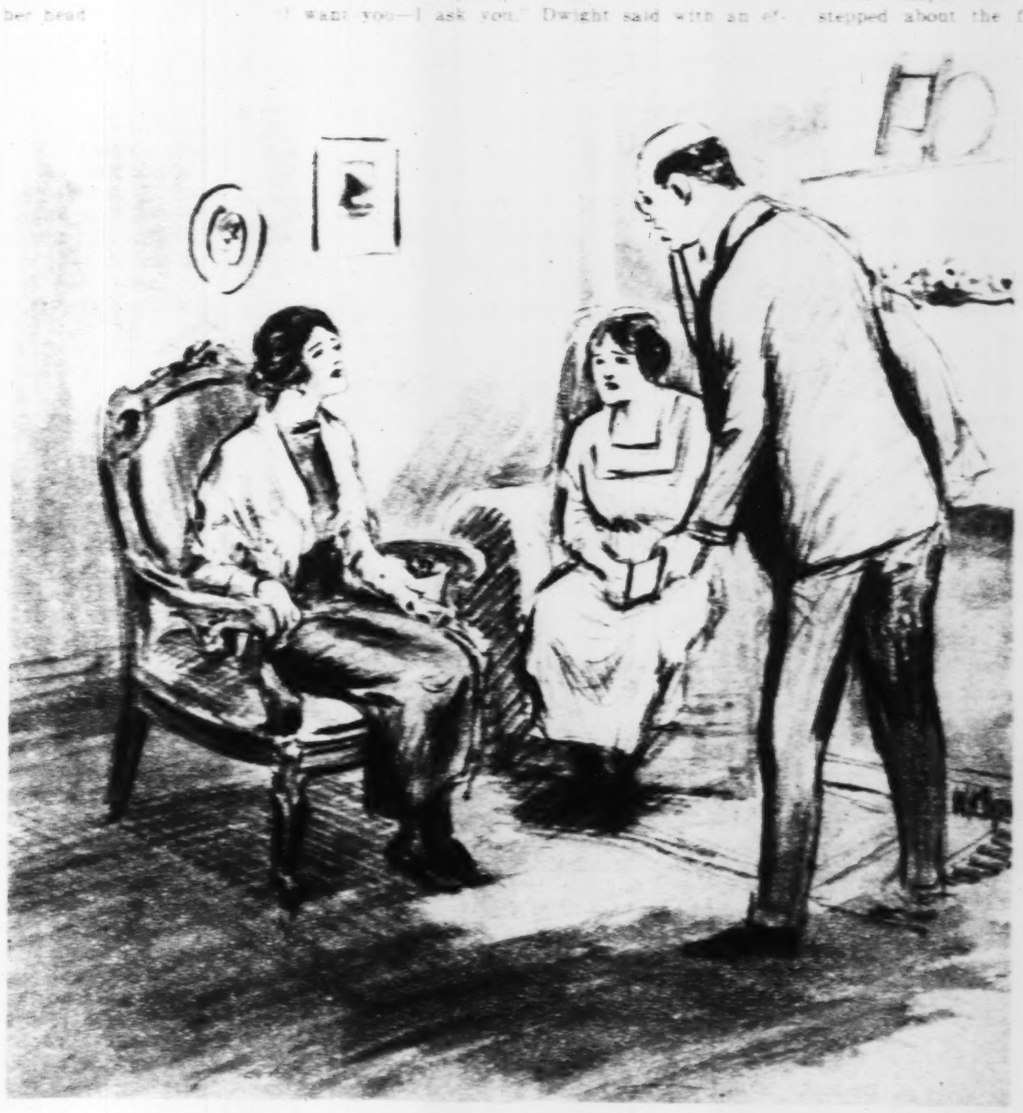
"Oh, stop that!" Lulu said.



"It's nothing to you that we have a brother who's a bigamist?"

MISS LULU BETT (Continued)

Dwight took her hand, lying limply in his. "I can s," he said, "overlook that matter of the letter."

Lulu drew back. She put her hair behind her ears, llowed and cried out:

"Don't you go around pitying me! I'll have you w I'm glad the whole thing happened!"

Cornish had ordered six new copies of a popular song. knew that it was popular because it was called so a Chicago paper. When the six copies arrived with danseuse on the covers he read the "words," looked tfully at the symbols which shut him out, and felt l pleased.

"Got up quite attractive," he ght, and fastened the six copies the window of his music store.

It was not yet 9 o'clock of a vivid rning. Cornish had his floor and walk sprinkled, his red and blue no spreads dusted. He sat at a ding table, well back in the store, d opened a law book.

For half an hour he read. Then he nd himself looking off the page, bbed by a reflection which always bbed him anew: Was he really getting anywhere with his law? And re did he really hope to get? Of when he awoke at night this question had stood by the cot, waiting.

The cot had appeared there in the k of the music store, behind a dark en curtain with too few rings on wire. How little else was in there, body knew. But those passing in late evening saw the blur of his rosene lamp behind the curtain and re smitten by a realistic illusion of sonal loneliness.

It was behind that curtain that these easoning questions usually attacked n, when his giant, wavering shadow d died upon the wall and the faint ll of the extinguished lamp went h him to his bed; or when he waked re any sign of dawn. In the mornings all was cheerful and wonted— question had not before attacked among his red and blue plush eads, his golden oak and ebony es, of a sunshiny morning.

A step at his door sent him flying. wanted passionately to sell a no.

"Well!" he cried when he saw his itor.

It was Lulu, in her dark red suit and r tilted hat.

"Well!" she also said, and seemed have no idea of saying anything e. Her excitement was so obscure t he did not discern it.

"You're out early," said he, participating in the village chorus of this ght challenge at this hour.

"Oh, no," said Lulu.

He looked out the window, pretending to be caught something passing, leaned out to see it the better.

"Oh, how'd you get along last night?" he asked, d wondered why he had not thought to say it fore.

"All right, thank you," said Lulu.

"Was he—about the letter, you know?"

"Yes," she said, "but that didn't matter. You'll be ," she added, "not to say anything about what was the letter?"

"Why, not till you tell me I can," said Cornish, "but 't everybody know now?"

"No," Lulu said.

At this he had no more to say, and feeling his speculation in his eyes, dropped them to a piano scarf from ch he began flicking invisible specks.

"I came to tell you good-by," Lulu said.

"Good-by?"

"Yes. I'm going off—for a while. My satchel's in bakery—I had my breakfast in the bakery."

"ay!" Cornish cried, warmly, "then everything n't all right last night?"

"As right as it can ever be with me," she told him. yes, Dwight forgave me."

"Forgave you?"

e smiled, and trembled.

"Look here," said Cornish, "you come here and down and tell me about this."

e led her to the folding table, as the only social t in that vast area of his, seated her in the one r, and for himself brought up a piano stool. But r all she told him nothing. She merely took the fort of his kindly indignation.

"It came out all right," she said only. "But I won't there any more. I can't do that."

"Then what are you going to do?"

"n Millton yesterday," she said, "I saw an advertisement in the hotel—they wanted a chambermaid."

"Oh, Miss Bett!" he cried. At that name she flushed. "y," said Cornish, "you must have been coming Millton yesterday when I saw you. I noticed Miss d her bag"—— He stopped, stared. "You brought back!" He deduced everything.

"h!" said Lulu. "Oh, no—I mean"——

"I heard about the eloping again this morning," he . "That's just what you did—you brought her ."

"You mustn't tell that! You won't? You won't?"

"No. Course not." He mulled it. "You tell me this: Do they know?" I mean about your going after her?"

"No."

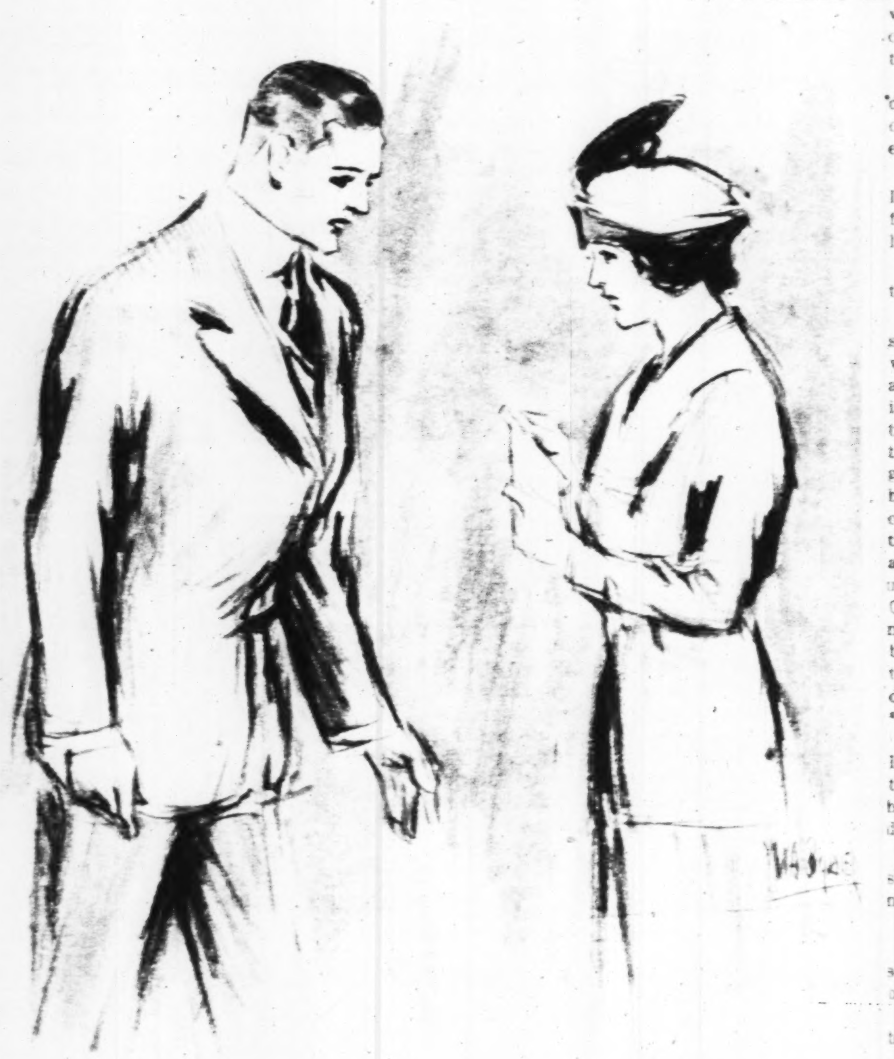
"You never told?"

"They don't know she went."

"That's a funny thing," he blurted out, "for you not to tell her folks—I mean, right off. Before last night"——

"You don't know them. Dwight'd never let up on that—he'd joke her about it after a while."

"But it seems"——



"Now I'm really going," she said. "Good-by for sure this time."——

"Ina'd talk about disgracing her. They wouldn't know what to do. There's no sense in telling them. They aren't a mother and father," Lulu said.

Cornish was not accustomed to deal with so much reality. But Lulu's reality he could grasp.

"You're a trump anyhow," he affirmed.

"Oh, no," said Lulu, modestly.

Yes, she was. He insisted on it.

"By George," he exclaimed, "you don't find very many married women with as good sense as you've got."

At this, just as he was agonizing because he had seemed to refer to the truth that she was, after all, not married, Lulu laughed in some amusement, and said nothing.

"You've been a jewel in their home, all right," said Cornish. "I bet they'll miss you if you do go."

"They'll miss my cooking," Lulu said, without bitterness.

"They'll miss more than that, I know. I've often watched you there"——

"You have?" It was not so much pleasure as passionate gratitude which lighted her eyes.

"You made the whole place," said Cornish.

"You don't mean just the cooking?"

"No, no. I mean—well, that first night when you played croquet. I felt at home when you came out."

That look of hers, rarely seen, which was no less than a look of loveliness, came now to Lulu's face. After a pause she said:

"I never had but one compliment before that wasn't for my cooking." She seemed to feel that she must confess to that one. "He told me I done my hair up nice." She added, conscientiously: "That was after I took notice how the ladies in Savannah, Georgia, done up theirs."

"Well, well," said Cornish only.

"Well," said Lulu, "I must be going now. I wanted to say good-by to you—and there's one or two other places"——

"I hate to have you go," said Cornish, and tried to add something. "I hate to have you go," was all that he could find to add.

Lulu rose. "Oh, well," was all that she could find.

They shook hands, Lulu laughing a little. Cornish followed her to the door. He had begun on "Look here, I wish"— when Lulu said "good-by," and paused, wishing intensely to know what he would have said. But all that he said was: "Good-by. I wish you weren't going."

"So do I," said Lulu, and went, still laughing.

Cornish saw her red dress vanish from his door, flash by his window, her head averted. And there settled upon him a depression out of all proportion to the slow depression of his days. This was more—it assailed him, absorbed him.

He stood staring out the window. Someone passed with a greeting of which he was conscious too late to return. He wandered back down the store and his pianos looked back at him like strangers. Down there was the green curtain which screened his home life. He suddenly hated that green curtain. He hated his whole place. For the first time it occurred to him that he hated Warbleton.

He came back to his table, and sat down before his lawbook. But he sat, chin on chest, regarding it. No—no escape that way.

A step at the door and he sprang up. It was Lulu coming toward him, her face unsmiling, but somehow quite lighted. In her hand was a letter.

"See," she said. "At the office was this"——

She thrust in his hand the single sheet. He read: "* * * just wanted you to know you're actually rid of me. I've heard from her, in Brazil. She ran out of money and thought of me, and her lawyer wrote to me. * * * I've never been any good—Dwight would tell you that if his pride would let him tell the truth once in a while. But there ain't anything in my life makes me feel as bad as this. * * * I s'pose you couldn't understand and I don't myself. * * * Only the 16 years keeping still made me think she was gone sure * * * but you were so downright good, that's what was the worst * * * do you see what I want to say" * * *

Cornish read it all and looked at Lulu. She was grave and in her eyes there was a look of dignity such as he had never seen them wear. Incredible dignity.

"He didn't lie to get rid of me—and she was alive, just as he thought she might be," she said.

"I'm glad," said Cornish.

"Yes," said Lulu. "He isn't quite so bad as Dwight tried to make him out."

It was not of this that Cornish had been thinking.

"Now you're free," he said.

"Oh, that"— said Lulu.

She replaced her letter in its envelope. "Now I'm really going," she said. "Good-by for sure this time"——

Her words trailed away. Cornish had laid his hand on her arm.

"Don't say good-by," he said.

"It's late," she said. "I"——

"Don't you go," said Cornish.

She looked at him, mutely.

"Do you think you could possibly stay here with me?"

"Oh!" said Lulu, like no word.

He went on, not looking at her. "I haven't got anything. I guess maybe you've heard something about a little something I'm supposed to inhert. Well, it's only $500."

His look searched her face, but she hardly heard what he was saying.

"That little Warden house—it don't cost much—you'd be surprised. Rent, I mean. I can get it now. I went and looked at it the other day, but then I didn't think"—he caught himself on that. "It don't cost near as much as this store. We could furnish up the parlor with pianos"——

He was startled by that "we," and began again:

"That is, if you could ever think of such a thing as marrying me."

"But," said Lulu. "You know. Why don't the disgrace"——

"What disgrace?" asked Cornish.

"Oh," she said, "you—you"——

"There's only this about that," said he. "Of course, if you loved him very much, then I'd ought not to be talking this way to you. But I didn't think"——

"You didn't think what?"

"That you did care so very much—about him. I don't know why."

She said: "I wanted somebody of my own. That's the reason I done what I done. I know that now."

"I figured that way," said Cornish.

They dismissed it. But now he brought to bear something which he saw she should know.

"Look here," he said, "I'd ought to tell you. I'm—I'm awful lonesome myself. This is no place to live. And I guess living so is one reason why I want to get married: I want some kind of a home."

He said it as a confession. She accepted it as a reason.

"Of course," she said.

"I ain't never lived what you might say private," said Cornish.

Discovers Mite That Attacks and Kills Germs

body of a dysentery patient at the height of the disease would dissolve bacteria, but we have never been in a position to say what the dissolving agent was. Neither, so far as I know, has it ever been stated that the appearance of the dissolving agent was contemporaneous with the beginning of a cure.

"Up to this time, no parasite has ever been discovered that preys upon disease germs. True, there are certain bacilli that will crowd others out, just as weeds in a garden will choke out flowers, but we know of no such organism that actively attacks another."

In reply to a question, he said that inoculation against disease, such as vaccination for smallpox or typhoid, was something of an entirely different nature, and consists of setting up a reaction in the body which immunizes it against a recurrence of the disease.

There can be no inoculation against a disease until the germ of the disease has been discovered—"isolated," as scientists say. This is the first and most difficult step in finding a method of inoculation. After the germ has been isolated the business of finding a way to check it proceeds.

Of the diseases which are reported to have been cured by bacteriophages, typhoid, bubonic plague and dysentery are ones of which the germs already have been isolated. In the case of typhoid, a highly successful inoculation has been devised, and is practiced in the army. Inoculation somewhat less successful has been practiced against dysentery and bubonic plague.

Dr. Opie was inclined to be skeptical about the reported scope of d'Herelle's discovery. "Although," he remarked, "the Pasteur Institute deserves the gravest consideration."

He illustrated the danger of giving too much credit to unauthentic reports with a reference to a recent item that appeared in a local newspaper, which told how a physician, finding his small son playing with a mud pie, took the pie and analyzed it, with the result, said the item, that he found several million bacteria in it, including some thousands of measles bacteria.

"That was quite a feat," remarked Dr. Opie, dryly; "one that most bacteriologists would give several years of their lives to accomplish. You see, the meas-les bacteria—if there is one—has ne... been isolated."

It is possible, however, he admitted, that the French scientist has achieved the feat with which dispatches credit him. The forthcoming statement will be eagerly examined. Maybe it is true that the panacea — the cure-all — at length has been found.

publication, offers of help poured in upon Haley.

The most pathetic of these, perhaps, was that of a stooped and grizzled Civil War veteran from the Old Soldiers' Home, who called at the barracks, and, refusing to give his name, left $20 with the request that it be transmitted to Haley.

A New Jersey electrical manufacturing concern telegraphed $70 for fare and incidental expenses, and instructed Haley to report for work at once. G. H. Dickerson, ranch owner of Springfield, Mo., sent $10 for a railroad ticket, and an offer of work.

Haley had been staying at the Y. M. C. A. following his release. He got the money that was sent to him. Suddenly he disappeared, leaving his bill unpaid. The day after he dropped out of sight there came a draft for $50, sent by the Ohio Society in Philadelphia. It was returned to them. Haley's whereabouts are not known by the authorities.

Perhaps he has turned vagabond again. It may be that he does not possess the qualities to ever become a leading citizen. He is a sort of rolling stone, apparently, with a facility for getting into mischief. His army record, according to the martinets, is prejudicial to first-class discipline. Doubtless they are right.

At the last great courtmartial, however, when the Recording Angel reads the record of Private Harry Haley, and tells how he spent five months in jail in place of his sick buddy, we wonder what the sentence will be.

Baby Rickets Cured by Sunlight, Doctor Announces

RICKETS, the most common disorder of infants in the Temperate Zone, can be cured by sunlight, Dr. Alfred F. Hess of New York announced at the meeting of the American Public Health Association this month.

This disease has been attributed by most physicians to faulty diet and the prophylactic measures suggested previously have been mainly dietetic in nature. A few have always believed that hygienic factors play an important role in its cause.

"Rickets can be cured by merely putting the baby out in the sun, perhaps a half-hour a day, so that it becomes well tanned," Dr. Hess says. "This is carried out gradually; first the legs, then the arms, and finally the body is exposed. At all times the baby is kept warm and comfortable. After some weeks of such treatment the general condition of the infant improves and the rickets, as shown by physical and X-ray examinations, rapidly diminishes or disappears. Chemical tests of the blood have also shown the definite cure which this simple hygienic therapy is able to accomplish. In order to exert this remarkable effect on the body, the sun must impinge its rays directly on the skin. They will confer but little benefit after they have traversed the glass windows of the room or the clothing of the infant. This loss of activity is due to the fact that the effective rays have very slight power of penetration, differing in this respect markedly from the heat rays of the sun."

MISS LULU BETT --

"I've lived too private," Lulu said.

"Then there's another thing." This was harder to tell her. "I—I don't believe I'm ever going to be able to do a thing with law."

"I don't see," said Lulu, "how anybody does."

"I'm not much good in a business way," he owned, with a faint laugh. "Sometimes I think," he drew down his brows, "that I may never be able to make any money."

She said: "Lots of men don't."

"Could you risk it with me?" Cornish asked her. "There's nobody I've seen," he went on, gently, "that I like as much as I do you. I—I was engaged to a girl once, but we didn't get along. I guess if you'd be willing to try me, we would get along."

Lulu said: "I thought it was Di that you"——

"Miss Di? Why," said Cornish, "she's a little liar."

"But I'm going on 34."

"So am I."

"Isn't there somebody"——

"Look here. Do you like me?"

"Oh, yes!"

"Well enough"——

"It's you I was thinking of," said Lulu. "I'd be all right."

"Then!" Cornish cried, and he kissed her.

"And now," said Dwight, "nobody must mind if I hurry a little wee bit. I've got something on."

He and Ina and Monona were at dinner. Mrs. Bett was in her room. Di was not there.

"Anything about Lulu?" Ina asked.

"Lulu?" Dwight stared. "Why should I have anything to do about Lulu?"

"Well, but, Dwight—we've got to do something."

"As I told you this morning," he observed, "we shall do nothing. Your sister is of age—I don't know about the sound mind, but she is certainly of age. If she chooses to go away, she is free to go where she will."

"Yes, but, Dwight, where has she gone? Where could she go? Where"——

"You are a question box," said Dwight, playfully. "A question box."

Ina had burned her plump wrist on the oven. She lifted her arm and nursed it.

"I'm certainly going to miss her if she stays away very long," she remarked.

"You should be sufficient unto your little self," said Dwight.

"That's all right," said Ina, "except when you're getting dinner."

"I want some crust coffee," announced Monona, firmly.

"You'll have nothing of the sort," said Ina. "Drink your milk."

"As I remarked," Dwight went on, "I'm in a tiny wee bit of a hurry."

"Well, why don't you say what for?" his Ina asked. She knew that he wanted to be asked, and she was sufficiently willing to play his games, and besides she wanted to know. But she was hot.

"I am going," said Dwight, "to take Grandma Gates out in a wheel chair, for an hour."

"Where did you get a wheel chair, for mercy sakes?"

"Borrowed it from the railroad company," said Dwight, with the triumph peculiar to the resourceful man. "Why I never did it before, I can't imagine. There that chair's been in the depot ever since I can remember—saw it every time I took the train—and yet I never once thought of grandma."

"My, Dwight," said Ina, "how good you are!"

"Nonsense!" said he.

"Well, you are. Why don't I send her over a baked apple? Monona, you take Grandma Gates a baked apple—no. You shan't go till you drink your milk."

"I don't want it."

"Drink it or mamma won't let you go."

Monona drank it, made a piteous face, took the baked apple, ran.

"The apple isn't very good," said Ina, "but it shows my good will."

"Also," said Dwight, "it teaches Monona a life of thoughtfulness for others."

"That's what I always think," his Ina said.

"Can't you get mother to come out?" Dwight inquired.

"I had so much to do getting dinner onto the table, I didn't try," Ina confessed.

"You didn't have to try," Mrs. Bett's voice sounded. "I was coming when I got rested up."

She entered, looking vaguely about. "I want Lulie," she said, and the corners of her mouth drew down. She ate her dinner cold, appeased in vague areas by such martyrdom. They were still at table when the front door opened.

"Monona hadn't ought to use the front door so common," Mrs. Bett complained.

But it was not Monona. It was Lulu and Cornish.

"Well!" said Dwight, tone curving downward.

"Well!" said Ina, in replica.

"Lulie!" said Mrs. Bett, and left her dinner and went to her daughter and put her hands upon her.

"We wanted to tell you first," Cornish said. "We've just got married."

"Forevermore!" said Ina.

"What's this?" Dwight sprang to his feet. "You're joking!" he cried, with hope.

"No," Cornish said, soberly. "We're married—just now. Methodist parsonage. We've had our dinner," he added, hastily.

"Where'd you have it?" Ina demanded, for no known reason.

"The bakery," Cornish replied, and flushed.

"In the dining room part," Lulu added.

Dwight's sole emotion was his indignation.

"What on earth did you do it for?" he put it to them. "Married in a bakery"——

No, no. They explained it again. Neither of them, they said, wanted the fuss of a wedding.

Dwight recovered himself in a measure. "I'm not surprised, after all," he said. "Lulu usually marries in this way."

Mrs. Bett patted her daughter's arm. "Lulie," she said, "why, Lulie. You ain't been and got married twice, have you? After waitin' so long?"

"Don't be disturbed, Mother Bett," Dwight cried. "She wasn't married that first time, if you remember. No marriage about it!"

Ina's little shriek sounded.

"Dwight!" she cried. "Now everybody'll have to know that. You'll have to tell about Ninian now—and his other wife!"

Standing between her mother and Cornish, an arm of each about her, Lulu looked across at Ina and Dwight, and they all saw in her face a horrified realization.

"Ina!" she said. "Dwight! You will have to tell now, won't you? Why, I never thought of that."

At this Dwight sneered, was sneering still as he went to give Grandma Gates her ride in the wheel chair and as he stooped with patient kindness to tuck her in.

The street door was closed. If Mrs. Bett was peeping through the blind, no one saw her. In the pleasant mid-day light under the maples, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Cornish were hurrying toward the railway station.

A Beauty in Real Life, But Not on the Screen

Bara, "look so strange to us in a different light that we ask ourselves, 'Is this the face I know?' And one's appearance in the movies is mostly a matter of lighting.

"Some faces eat up a great deal of light. What is called 'flat lighting,' for example, is ideal for me, but might not suit another actress at all. I have not seen the film in which Mrs. Hoyt appears, but I imagine that the lighting was too 'flat' for her.

"About work on the screen there are two things which must always be remembered. First, there is no color; and, second, it is a sculptor's art rather than a painter's.

"Many beautiful girls depend on their color. Wonderful chestnut hair, in real life, becomes a drab gray on the screen. And the best of faces, beautifully modeled, may not be so beautiful to look at if irregular, but generally screen well.

"In my own case, having very dark hair, I require 'flat' lighting. Never yet have I had an ideal lighting condition, for I cannot convince them of it. In the studio I can take my mirror and tell whether the face will come out well in the film—whether there is too much top lighting, for example.

"The expressive face pays a certain penalty. The expression is mostly in the lines from the nose to the corners of the mouth. Top lighting accentuates these lines. Everybody has that trouble before the camera, even little children. We had to dispense with a very pretty and talented little girl because those lines were so prominent that they made her look like a little old lady.

"Back lighting helps some people. One may say only that it is all in the placing of the lights whether the movie actor appears to the best advantage. And youth is youth, remember that, especially in front of the camera.

"The actress on the stage has great advantages over the moving picture actress. There are so many artificial aids, the soft lights, the modulations of the voice, the audience across the footlights. And she can rest and be prepared for the performance.

"On the screen and the street we have the most trying conditions under which any woman ever worked and survived. Being on your feet for hours at a time, with no fresh air in the studio and the glaring lights which burn the soul out of you—only youth survives it.

"In my work I have had to play the woman of the world. It is hard to know that you are doing work which leaves its mark on the face and the body. Anyone can put her hair down and take eight or 10 years from her age, in front of the camera. So the players of juvenile parts have one big help, in the arrangement of the hair.

"Large eyes are a great asset to a movie actress. Black eyes, though, do not screen well. In the film they look like lumps of coal, they have no depth. Light blue eyes are very bad, because they have a 'washed-out' appearance. Dark blue eyes, with flecks of some other color in the iris, are the best for pictures."

Miss Bara's own eyes, and a beautiful pair they are, large, sparkling and even more magnetic in reality than they appear on the screen, have the peculiarity of changing from what she calls "green" to a dark blue. They are perhaps the most striking feature in a darkly beautiful face which the screen has familiarized to millions.

And while Miss Bara, from long experience, is now usually able to tell in advance whether a beautiful girl will screen well, she admits that there are no hard-and-fast rules, and veteran directors are sometimes disappointed with results.

"The girl may photograph a million dollars, as we say, or she may not stand out at all," was her final comment.

D. W. Griffith, that producer on a princely scale, recently told the readers of Photoplay Magazine about his own rules in picking actresses for big parts in film dramas.

"Certainly there are a few mechanical characteristics that have a certain importance," he said. "For instance, deep lines in the face of a girl are almost fatal to good screening, for on the screen her face is magnified 20 times, and every wrinkle assumes the proportions of the Panama Canal.

"It is important that her face have a smooth, soft outline. So with the eyes. Every other physical characteristic is of insignificant importance compared with the eyes. If they are the windows of your soul, your soul must have a window it can see through. The farther motion picture art progresses, the more important does this become.

"In the early days screen actors put over effects with elaborate and exaggerated gestures. Every year the tendency is more subdued in this regard.

"But a good pair of eyes and a smooth face of proper contour will not suffice to make a motion picture actress. There are plenty of horses with legs fit for Derby winners who are pulling milk wagons. They have the legs, but they haven't the fighting heart. In other words, they lack the inward illumination. If you have it you can polish up the tools and make them more effective; but if you haven't it no amount of study will bring this queer illuminative elf to you.

"Any director can squirt glycerine tears over a pretty face and tip over a few chairs, break up a table or two and have some sort of imitation tragedy. That isn't real. Real tears aren't always real, if you get my meaning. It is the feeling behind the tears that can open the beholder's heart.

"Don't understand me to say that a girl is born a heaven-sent genius or a predestined failure. Nothing could be a more ghastly untruth. * * * The only woman with a real future is the woman who can think real thoughts. Some get these thoughts by reading and study, others by instinct."

And Griffith summarized his views thus: "It isn't what you do with your face or your hands. It's the light within. If you have that light, it doesn't matter much just what you do before the camera. If you haven't it—well, then it doesn't matter just what you do, either."

So the sorry failure which some beautiful and accomplished actresses on the stage have encountered when they invaded filmland is not inexplicable, after all.

orgotten Fortune Found in a Garret -- t that one person sought had been buried in a New ey cemetery. When he visited the spot, he found at the cemetery had long since disappeared, but a y old man recalled the spot where it had been lo- ted. When he visited this place he found the site ered with a huge factory. More persistent inquiry ealed the date when the cemetery had been moved d another search disclosed the names of contractors, e dead, who had removed the bodies and grave- es. In the possession of a descendant of one of se contractors he found the information he sought— a bookkeeper's ledger, in which the various accounts re identified by the inscriptions on the various estones.

With the dates and with the initials to go by, the t of the search was easy.

Then the genealogist has to deal with human nature in the shape of indifference and suspicion when tracing out his records. In one case, when information concerning a pioneer was wanted, Enyart had to approach an old farmer who came from an entirely different branch of the family and who not only was not interested in the matter but was decidedly crusty about it besides. Enyart did not make the mistake of pressing him for information concerning his distant relative. A short time later he wrote a letter casually remarking that he had heard the deceased pioneer was a great Indian fighter in his day and asked whether it was true that he had once lost some of his toes in an Indian battle. The farmer, whose pride in the performances of his ancestors was great, replied with a letter of 10 pages, filled with misstatements and exaggerations, but also containing the very information needed.

Enyart says that old family Bibles have often given him excellent clues to fortunes that have been left to some members of those same families. But his discovery of a $500,000 windfall through the chance picking up of an old certificate among papers which had absolutely no bearing either with the case he was investigating or with any member of the family involved, was unique even in his records.

But as a result of that instinct, which would have been lacking in nine men out of 10 who had noticed the certificate, Thomas Wotkyns Seymour of Seattle and his sister seem to have a fortune in their grasp. They doubtless will believe firmly in the term "professional instinct" hereafter. As for Enyart, he is still poring over musty papers in New York.

Your Aunt Emma spurned our Bond—

AUNT EMMA drops in now and then at your family table and says: "Just a morsel—just a morsel." And she keeps saying it right through her second and third helping.

She was rightly suspicious when you told her that at last you could give up baking bread at home—that you had discovered a bread which is made with the same pure home ingredients that you always used.

She told you that somebody had been fooling you. And then you got your spunk up and said:

"But this is so. With this loaf of bread you get a Bond which absolutely guarantees that it is made of the purest home ingredients—real milk—fine flour—granulated sugar—table salt—fresh compressed yeast—and purest lard."

You led her out in the kitchen and let her read the Bond on the bread-wrapper. She merely shook her head.

You cut a slice and buttered it and handed it over without a word. She took one bite, looked up, took another, and then, for almost the first time since you have known her, Aunt Emma actually smiled.

This peculiar-looking bird is an East Indian horn-bill, new arrival at the Cincinnati Zoological Gardens and believed to be the only one of his kind in the United States. After the mother horn-bill lays her eggs, the father plasters up the entrance to the nest with mud, leaving only a small hole through which to feed the mother. When the little birds are two weeks old, the parents reopen the entrance. Thus do they circumvent murderous monkeys.

A Week's Manicure in Five Minutes
Without Tiresome Buffing

A thousand times a day the hands come into view—with every gesture, with every patting of a stray hair into place; with every powdering of the nose. With Glazo they will always look their daintiest.

Merely Bathe the Hands and Stroke Each Nail Lightly with Glazo

Few women actually enjoyed manicuring their nails the old way. Buffing, which seemed necessary, was tiresome and painful. Science tells us that it was harmful, too, for it dried the delicate sub-cuticle upon which the nail rests.

But today thousands of women have found a simple, new method which makes buffing unnecessary—their week's manicuring is done in five minutes.

They merely bathe their hands in warm, soapy water, and brush each nail lightly with Glazo Liquid Polish. They never touch their nails with a buffer, and their beautiful, glowing polish lasts a week.

Soap and water, fruit stains, and soil cannot affect it—a simple bath renews its loveliness.

For Cuticle Even and Pink

The care of the cuticle is equally important to the woman who esteems well-kept hands, and with Glazo Cuticle Massage, a scientifically prepared, healing cream, it is equally simple.

Use it with your orange stick to shape the cuticle; when the cuticle is badly inflamed and broken, restore it to health with a Hot Glazo Cuticle Treatment. Massage it in and leave it over night

Glazo is on sale at all leading department and drug stores. Glazo Polish complete with Remover, 50c. Cuticle Massage (six months' supply) 50c. Combination Set $1.

"Without the treacherous help of cathartics"

A simple food which gradually replaces laxatives

"HE who can control chronic constipation without the treacherous help of cathartics makes a 'booster' of his patient."

This quotation from a doctor's essay on constipation carries a message of great significance to thousands of men and women.

It is now recognized that cathartics never remove the causes of constipation. Indeed, one physician states that the indiscriminate use of cathartics is probably one of the most frequent causes of constipation.

For many years there has been pressing need for some simple food that would help restore normal conditions. And now scientists have discovered it in the familiar little cake of Fleischmann's Yeast.

First came the startling discovery that Fleischmann's Yeast in itself is a wonderful food, rich in the mysterious water-soluble vitamine. Then it was found that Fleischmann's Yeast builds up the body tissues, keeps the body more resistant to disease.

In addition, because of its freshness (you get it fresh daily) Fleischmann's Yeast helps the intestines in their elimination of waste matter. It is by its very nature better suited to the stomach and intestines than the ordinary laxatives, and being a food it cannot form a habit.

Eat 2 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast a day. Have it on the table at home and on your desk at the office. Eat it plain, spread on bread, or dissolved in milk or fruit juices. You will like its fresh, distinctive flavor and the clean wholesome taste it leaves in your mouth. It is assimilated just like any other food. Only one precaution: if troubled with gas, dissolve yeast first in very hot water. This does not affect its efficacy. Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast, fresh daily.

Send 4c in stamps for booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." Address THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, 701 Washington St., New York, N. Y.

The need for scientifically tested yeast

Fresh yeast has been proved by recent scientific tests to be a valuable food for correcting run-down condition, constipation, indigestion and certain skin disorders. These original tests were all made with Fleischmann's Yeast. Beware of untested yeast-vitamine preparations that contain drugs or other mixtures. Fleischmann's Yeast (fresh) is a pure food, rich in vitamine, in which it measures up to the high standards set by laboratories and hospitals. The familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label is the only form in which Fleischmann's Yeast for Health is sold.
